New England

WHEN storms break early in the morning, cause no-school signals to be sounded and then gradually clear away, theatres in Boston and the suburbs are pretty certain to do record matinee businesses. Twice within ten days these conditions have occurred with the result that attendances were materially boosted and receipts will show better than for many weeks. Evening shows were well attended as the storms had cleared by that time.

Despite two musical comedies and excellent bills at all the legitimate houses, last week's business at the picture theatres was one of the best of the entire season. Fox's "What Price Glory," principal road show, at the Majestic, continues to draw well with $1.50 top. An unusually good vaudeville bill at Loew's State brought up the box-office to a mid-winter record with Metro's "Faust." "Paradise for Two," at the Metropolitan, maintained receipts which have held steady for several weeks. Two weeks of grand opera apparently increased attendances at all downtown theatres instead of drawing from them, as expected.

Minneapolis

WITH the exception of one day, when the mercury dropped to ten below zero, the weather was unusually mild in the Twin Cities last week, and the movies profited as a result. "Ben Hur" played to capacity houses for a second week at the Metropolitan, while "Faust" was good for a second week at the Strand and "It" did a fine business at the State. There were not many counter attractions in Minneapolis, outside of a fight program at the Armory and the appearance of Ruth Draper at the Lyceum.

A young man "with the prettiest teeth she ever saw" poked a revolver in the face of Miss Vera Brandon, cashier of the Madrid Theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, Saturday night and scooped up $50 in change out of the ticket office. Apparently, there must have been something about Miss Brandon which also attracted the bandit, as he carelessly overlooked $300 in bills, rolled up and lying near the cashier's hand.

Central Penn

WITH the weather in Central Pennsylvania for the week of February 14 about equally divided between the extremes of snow and sleet for three days and Springlike conditions for the other three, Harrisburg first-run theatres experienced a very fair average of business. At Wilmer & Vincent's Victoria, there were good crowds throughout the week to see Pola Negri in "Hotel Imperial," and while the title of the play was not one of any great amount of pulling power, the very high merit of the picture, after a day or two's showing, brought out very gratifying crowds. This picture and "The Flesh and the Devil," starring John Gilbert and Greta Garbo, which was the offering at Loew's Regent, produced the best box-office results for the week among the houses that show pictures exclusively, though at the State Theatre, where the film attraction, in addition to vaudeville, was Bert Lytell in "Obey the Law," the presence on the vaudeville bill of the much-advertised Siamese Twins helped to fill the theatre at almost every performance. At the Colonial, where the Harold Lloyd picture, "The Kid Brother," was on the screen for a second week's run—quite unusual for any Harrisburg theatre—the attendance was not so large as during the first week of this attraction.

The motion picture theatre owned by F. S. Sechrist & Son, in Shrewsbury, York County, is to be practically rebuilt into a modern structure. It will be materially enlarged and in addition to increased seating capacity there will be installed a stage for the accommodation of local home talent entertainments.

Benefit shows held during the latter part of the week of February 14, at the Rialto, Keystone and Grand theatres in Williamsport, to assist the family of Fireman Charles T. Maloney, of Engine Company No. 3, who perished in the fire which destroyed the Hippodrome Theatre in the $1,000,000 Linck block blaze, netted about $300. In addition, the management of the City Theatre sent a check for $10. It is expected the total fund for the dead fireman's family will be between $2,000 and $3,000.

A large percentage of the profits from the showing of the film play, "The Fire Brigade," in Loew's Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, the week of February 21, will be turned over by Manager Edward T. Melniker to the International Association of Fire Chiefs as the theatre's contribution to the national fire protection fund being raised during 1927, which has been designated as "fire prevention year." Another percentage of the week's profits will go to fire companies of the Harrisburg department. The picture was made in co-operation with Fire Chiefs' Association and is being shown throughout the United States as a part of the association's educational program for the year. The picture has been endorsed by the Harrisburg Safety Council.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

'Flesh and the Devil"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Forum Theatre, Los Angeles

Record: "When the Devil has such a tool as Greta Garbo for wrecking the heart of a man, you can just know there are going to be a lot of fluttering hearts in the audience. . . . To Greta Garbo, honors must go as the most finished siren of the screen. . . . John Gilbert is at his best. Is the ardent wooer. Gives that touch of humanness to his work that makes him appear a real personality to his audience. . . . Lars Hanson is a newcomer who is going to go far. . . . Much credit is due Clarence Brown, the director. He has had the courage to produce a play that portrays red-hot emotions as Sudermann intended they should be. . . . It is splendidly done."

News: "A sweeping victory for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It has sex appeal. . . . There is plenty of emotion stimulus coupled with beauty and romance. What more can one ask for in the way of entertainment? . . . Gilbert is the idealized type of American hero. The picture is beautiful . . . contains enough drama to hold one tense from its opening scene to the end."

Times: "'Flesh and the Devil' is brilliant. . . . Brown gains new place as director. . . . Garbo, Gilbert and Hanson applauded. . . . You can count it as ideally representative of the art of telling a story on the screen. . . . It is the supervamp outburst of 1927 and though it runs smoothly as a mountain stream in its plot unfolding, it is one of the most torrentially daring productions yet to be seen. . . . An achievement in filmdom. . . . Its popularity will be great. . . . There is a forceful theme which gives the production a novelty and dramatic power that is far above the ordinary. . . . The atmosphere is so definite as to make you believe at times that the film was made abroad rather than in this country."

Express: "Proved worthy last night of the fanfare attending a pretentious opening. . . . Its power and grip lie in its sincerity. . . . Clever use of camera angles. . . . Absorbing plot. . . . The acting is the very essence of restraint. There is constant evidence of masterly guidance. . . . Atmosphere is brilliantly maintained. . . . Fine imagination marks the entire course of 'Flesh and the Devil.' It has 'IT'. . . . A production that is likely to be set down as one of the cinema's mileposts."

Herald: "Gives every promise of becoming the sensation of the season. . . . Mr. Gilbert appears always at his best. Mr. Hanson's one scene, wherein he discovers his unfaithful wife, lifts him to stellar heights. . . . I have never seen acting of higher grade on the screen. . . . And now we get to Greta Garbo. Never has her Sirenic Majesty worked her exotic potency with greater effect or enchantment. . . . Faultless direction was a great help.

Unrivaled screen quality

The photographic superiority of Eastman Film—zealously safeguarded by Kodak Research Laboratory experts—naturally makes prints on Eastman Positive Film from negatives on Eastman Negative Film unrivaled in screen quality.

And, since the public appreciates screen quality, insistence on prints on Eastman Film will have a favorable box office reaction.

Prints on Eastman have the black-lettered identification "Eastman" and "Kodak" in the transparent margin. Look for it.

SUPPOSE you had been in the Motion Picture Business for 287 Years

¶ Suppose your family, reaching back generation upon generation, had been operating motion picture theatres for almost three centuries. Wouldn't you feel that your theatre was just a little better equipped to appeal to popular tastes . . . . to please your audiences . . . . than any other theatre possibly could be?

¶ That's just the way that Kilgen feels about pipe organs. It matters not whether an instrument is to serve in theatre, auditorium or church, if it is Kilgen-built it will fit its environment. Since 1640 the Kilgen Family has been building pipe organs. Doing nothing else. During that memorable span its craftsmen have contributed much to the development of the modern instrument.

¶ Kilgen's greatest achievement is the nation-known Kilgen Wonder Organ which in scores of communities provides "The Voice of Silent Drama," to delight millions of theatre-goers. Let us tell you how these Kilgen installations have affected the box-office returns of successful exhibitors.

Light Up---

with Edison MAZDA Lamps

SURELY no medium offers greater opportunities for building theatre patronage than lighting. Properly applied at the entrance of your theatre it at once arrests attention and attracts people inside. In foyer, auditorium, lounge and rest rooms, it can play a very important part; in enhancing the charm of your furnishings, in creating a cheerful atmosphere and in many other ways adding to your patrons' enjoyment.

But it must be properly applied to give full value. Of first importance is the selection of lamps which can be depended upon to do the job desired of them; to give the right tonal quality of light; to give maximum quantity of light from the current they consume; to have long life; to make your lighting pay you a real profit.

That is why you should light up with Edison MAZDA Lamps. They represent the highest standard of lamp quality. There is a type to meet every lighting requirement. And Edison Lamp Works' illuminating engineers are always ready to assist you in planning the lighting of each department of your theatre.

--Reputation

Otto H. Kahn has just addressed to the students of Princeton University some excellent advice. The "ten rules of success" which Mr. Kahn offers would be excellent thoughts no matter who wrote them, but his remarkable career in the banking world gives them real authority.

The rule that impressed me most was this: "The most serviceable of all assets is reputation."

Why is one man's word as good as his bond, while another's means but little? Why is one company's good will valued in millions; another's hardly recognized at all? Reputation!

It is reputation that builds up for a theatre that steady week in and week out business that makes fortunes—reputation for always giving the patron a good all around show for his money. It is reputation that has brought Educational to its position of dominance in the short features field—reputation for the best pictures, the best service, the best advertising support, and for keeping faith with you at all times. And it is reputation that makes our promise of a splendid program for 1927-1928 a serviceable asset for you as well as for us.

We Have Eliminated the

For five years Motion Picture News has been striving to distribute its circulation scientifically.

Bulk circulation in this highly specialized field is not enough. Unless the advertiser is able to reach the real purchasing power of the trade, a motion picture trade journal fails in part of its mission.

That's just self-evident fact.

To this end all subscription efforts have been directed to effectively covering the picture theatres where the purchasing is done and to do this intelligently it has been necessary to compile records and statistics of elaborate nature, complete in every detail.

As an example of how well we have done this job, we offer on the following page some statistics on the theatre situation and our coverage therein for six key centers.

The facts related in this exhibit or of any other city in the United States of 25,000 population or over are open for audit by any advertiser. We will gladly prove every step in the compilation of our figures and welcome the opportunity of showing our coverage of the field.

Permit Us to Prove to You What We Have. That's All We Ask.

France

Second of Series of Articles on European Situation

By William A. Johnston

IN France I met with a group of French gentlemen interested in a project of new theatres. They represent prominently the financial, industrial and political worlds of France, so I was given an opportunity to learn first hand of general business conditions. The franc is stabilized at last, and while it is said that the business situation in France may be worse before it gets better—occasioning perhaps a mild crisis this Spring—the outlook is sound. There is general confidence now in the business future.

France needs new picture theatres and France will have them.

To an American the theatre situation in Paris is somewhat appalling.

Paramount is reconstructing the historic Vaudeville. When completed it will have 1,800 seats. Since there are but 400 orchestra seats one can imagine the shape of the theatre—narrow and high. It is being rebuilt inside of a block of stores and apartments—a most difficult piece of construction: all concrete, no steel. The location is excellent, one of the best in the city. It opens in September.

The Gaumont Palace, some distance from the heart of the city, is doing good business under the Loew-Metro management. The orchestra, organ and presentation approach the American style of show. There are about 6,000 seats.

The Marivaux, with only 1,200 seats, does the largest business today of all the theatres of Paris. It is independently owned, buys the best pictures obtainable, and runs them away in advance of the general release, some about the same time as the American releases.

The Madeleine, 1,200 seats, another Loew-Metro theatre, also centrally located, is running "The Big Parade," which has scored in Paris its unusual remarkable success.

The Cameo, with 650 seats, owned by Reginald Ford, who got his training in this country, has more of the American style of lobby and exploitation.

Aside from these houses there are groups of theatres in Paris owned by Aubert, Fournier, Sapene. They have no outstanding features. They are just good theatres to meet profitably the present theatre attendance in Paris, neither ahead nor behind the public response, giving little and yet asking good prices.

Some are not much better than a remodelled "opera house" in a minor city in New York State.

An Amazing Situation

When you consider that Paris is still a publicity centre of the show world, that it is a compact city of four millions with a large tourist population, the situation is astounding. In Versailles, for instance, one of the largest and best suburban towns in the world, there are two little picture houses that wouldn't suffice for Bayside, Long Island, a town of 10,000.

It is not an exaggeration to say that movie Paris today approximates the situation in New York City just before the Strand was built thirteen years ago. The Paris public, of course, doesn't go to picture theatres: but neither did the New York public, until adequate theatres were built.

Opinion, of course, on the subject is divided—just as it was in New York trade circles when the Strand and Capitol were launched—just as it was when Balaban & Katz stepped forth with the beautiful Tivoli in Chicago—just as it always is in the show business everywhere.

Caution says that Paris is a dinner loving, cafe loving, home loving city. The movies are generally looked down upon. The attending public is small and scarcely increases.

THIS week Motion Picture News presents a new service feature of great importance to exhibitors:

Key City Reports

giving an impartial statement of the business done in the key center first-run houses, the information being gathered by our own correspondents.

Watch for a still further expansion of this service.

William A. Johnston's Survey

The optimist says that a bold step forward is the thing, a big theatre opened and operated with eclat, a theatre like the best in America. True, the public doesn't respond today to the picture, but why should the public go? There's the new generation to consider. They are changing fast. The old social order is disappearing in France.

The real nigger in the woodpile, it seems to me, is the tax situation. The combined tax—government, municipal, charity, etc., today, amounts to about forty percent of the box-office. That, of course, is out of the question, although it is perfectly simple to see that more and better seats will yield more tax income at reduced taxes. Not only is the tax figure prohibitive but also the method of tax collection. Three men go through an elaborate system of bookkeeping over each admission ticket. Under such circumstances the rapid handling of crowds in a continuous run theatre is simply impossible. The tax in Holland today is 20 percent and in Germany from 15 to 20 percent, except in a few localities where the municipal tax makes it higher.

Tax Collection Hardships

These tax and tax collection hardships must be done away with and I believe they will be.

Theatre conditions in the other key cities of France—Marseilles, Bordeaux, Lille, Lyons, etc., are quite the same.

The optimist contends that France should have at least twenty large modern theatres—right away, large ones in the key centres, with neighborhood theatres to follow.

Summing up, there are in France today about 3,000 theatres, with about 200 in chains, owned by Aubert, Sapene, Fournier, Ford and a few smaller French chains, also the small group in the larger cities owned by Loew-Metro-Gaumont and by Paramount.

Not one of these theatres is up to present day standards in the United States, Great Britain, Germany or Holland. Only a very few approach the modern standard and the very great majority are just halls with screens.

Naturally, the theatre attendance in France today is low, per capita. Lyons, an industrial city of half a million population has but 35 seats per 1000 population; Strassbourg, 42; Toulouse, 48; Rouen, 49; Roubaix, 69; Lille, 77; Marseilles, 80; Bordeaux, 82. Paris is far from the top. With its 4,000,000 population, there are but 45 seats for every thousand people.

As a contrast with this country, here are a few figures on cities in the United States picked at random from a recent survey by MOTION PICTURE NEWS: Buffalo, 88 seats per 1000 inhabitants; St. Louis, 118; Kansas City, 120; Omaha, 120; Cleveland, 120; New Orleans, 133; Los Angeles, 135.

A peculiar situation exists with respect to American pictures in Paris. No one brand has any particular prestige. Whatever degree of prestige does exist is a reversal from the situation over here.

There has been no national advertising and only a measure so far of key theatre exploitation. A picture is judged upon its appeal to the French taste. And that, as I say, is the story, not the star appeal. The very big pictures, of course, excite attention.

France and American Films

The American companies are compelled to regard France as a country of very low film rentals. They take the stand, therefore, that the distribution of their pictures is at present a foremost consideration and they look upon theatre projects as show windows to this end. If, therefore, the theatres they build or acquire are to exploit their product regardless of other considerations, they hesitate to go into a heavy investment.

A theatre in France today showing only the pictures of one program is bound to run at a loss—at the box-office or in film rentals or both.

The percentage of American pictures played in French theatres is lower than in any country in Europe. I heard estimates of from 50 to 65 percent but never higher.

The French public, apparently, wants a good proportion of home made product. Stories count most with them and naturally their own kind of stories appeal. American stars count for little, excepting only our comedy stars and Norma Talmadge. Most every list I secured from trade and lay people gave these names: Lloyd, Chaplin, Fairbanks, Menjou, Talmadge—and also Keaton, Langdon, Denny, Griffith. But the story is the telling attraction.

I had a most interesting interview in Paris with Mr. Jean Sapene. He is a power there in the newspaper world as the owner and director of Le Matin, a leading morning paper with a circulation of a million and a half. The leading newspapers of Paris reach circulations as high as two millions and appear simultaneously in the large cities.

Two years ago Sapene purchased the Pathe Consortium with its string of theatres and he is now deep in production with Louis Nalpas as production chief. His latest notable picture is "Michael Strogoff" which has just recently closed its run in New York and which is still running successfully at the Capitol Theatre in London.

Nalpas is just finishing "Casanova," and from all accounts it will be a spectacular production. The company was at Venice for several weeks and during this time a section of the canals was closed to permit the picture taking. As the story of a famous libertine, it remains to be seen just how this picture will be greeted by the American trade. Several negatives, I believe, are being made for the Latin and Anglo-

of European Film Situation

Saxon countries. J. V. Bryson of London has purchased the British rights for Universal.

The decline in the number of American pictures shown in the French houses has been in progress for the past six months. It is commensurate with the increase in French production.

For a Film U.S. of Europe

Production in France is more spirited but still irregular. The present output is about fifty features a year, of which, according to M. Sapene, fully half are made by Cineromans of which M. Sapene is the head, and by the companies producing for Pathe Consortium, which distributing machine is also owned by M. Sapene.

The French pictures are heavily booked. A casual tour along the boulevards in Paris would indicate a preponderance of French pictures. They get good rental prices, too. The same situation exists with respect to home made product in Germany. Colvin Brown, whom I met in Paris, told me that German pictures were securing four times at least the rentals paid for the average American picture. Another bit of interesting information from him was that "Ben-Hur" has already contracted in Germany for well over a million dollars in business. Only our specials are in good demand in Western Europe.

Sapene is outspoken on the subject of a film United States of Europe. He reckons already a population of 200 millions and when Russia is admitted to the Continental group of nations a population of two hundred millions more.

It was evident that he excluded Great Britain from this great picture-going population.

"Why?" I asked.

"Oh!" said he, throwing up his hands. "Great Britain is an island.

"Great Britain," he went on, "doesn't produce pictures. Great Britain never will. They are too insular over there. They are non-creative."

He referred to the fact that he made a picture with Betty Balfour which played in Great Britain to the extent of $27,000. But her following picture, made in England, could get no bookings in France.

"I will make another Betty Balfour and it also will sell in Great Britain."

I give M. Sapene's words here as he gave them to me and drawing no conclusions except the obvious one that there is a wide diversity in film taste between the Latin and Anglo-Saxon peoples. The fact is that few if any British pictures are shown in France and few French pictures get on the British screens. German pictures do better in both countries, though they are still by no means a factor.

With M. Sapene I met his right hand man, Marcel Knecht, who is well known in this country and who came here recently to attend the advertising convention in Philadelphia, at which time the Cineromans production, "Les Miserables" was shown; also Louis Nalpas, production chief—and a capable one—of Cineromans.

Sapene's Note to Hays

Sapene is strong for co-operation with film America, but he insists there must be no submersion of French production and French production interests. He is a powerful character but it seems to me that he is far from understanding the importance of the theatre in the development of the film industry in any country. His mind is upon production only. He is not evidently aware of the highly important fact that in this country it was larger and finer theatres—theatres up to the highest mark and appealing to all classes—that paved the way for larger and finer pictures.

He sent an important note to Will H. Hays, and I have his permission to publish it here. It seems it should be published.

"Friendly relations between American Moving Picture concerns and those of other countries are an essential of tomorrow if the public, the world over, is to be kept attracted to the moving picture theatres by being assured of choice programs. No one country, however big or strong, or whatever the methods and capacity of production it may command, can accomplish this alone for it must of necessity lack that diversity and originality of ideas which each nation on its own soil, each race out of its own brain, can give and which should be utilized.

"Your great country has, in few years, covered the field of American originality, and you will not be able to bear for much longer the intellectual burden of getting out five hundred to six hundred new pictures every year.

"The public, on the other hand, will tire more and more of always seeing, although perhaps under different headings, the same conceptions and the same elements. At the intellectual restaurant of the 'Movies,' too great similarity in the 'menus' will create disappointment among the patrons.

Urges Co-operative Production

"It is my opinion that the big producers of the world should get together without delay and arrange in common accord for the production of a certain number of pictures, which would be assured of wide diffusion and which could be so turned out as to be pleasing to any audience. Each such picture should be produced in the country of origin of the scenario and, while the artists could be of different nationalities, their selection should be made with great discernment, and talent should take precedence over fame.

"Therein lies, in my opinion, the future of World Moving Pictures. I am a practical man and each

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY told us this week that the basis for the motion picture lectures at Harvard will be the volume of "The Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science," issued last November. In particular, he referred to the chapter on "The Structure of the Motion Picture Industry," written by the editor of The News.

In this connection, we find that The Annals volume is proving of great value to exhibitors who are scheduled to address Rotary Clubs and other organizations. We have a few extra copies of The Annals here in the office, and will be glad to send them out to exhibitors on application, if they will be good enough to return them so that we may pass them around to the greatest possible number of theatre men. They cover the entire industry in all its branches, each subject being covered by an expert in his field, and we know of no other place where so much information is to be had within the covers of one book, authoritatively related and yet interestingly told in readily accessible form.

AT THE PARK LANE

AT the opening of Charles L. O'Reilly's new theatre, the Park Lane, the other night, Charlie Chaplin was introduced to the audience and received a great demonstration. It was spontaneous, and started when the star appeared on the stage, paused for a moment while he made a few remarks, and was renewed until he was out of sight. There was no mistaking the sincerity of the applause, or its meaning.

The new O'Reilly theatre, by the way, is a fine house, located at 89th Street and First Avenue, New York City, which bids fair to become fashionable in a few years. This is an interesting instance of a theatre leading the way to community betterment.

day I think about the future of this tremendous field of human activity—not, however, in a selfish manner, but with a view to accomplishment.

"Those who will be the first to grasp this formula can, by associating themselves together, create a wonderful and stable business. Really great possibilities lie only in the grouping together of forces, in the exchange of ideas and the inter-penetration of minds and souls. Otherwise, nothing new can be accomplished.

"You may continue to produce by yourselves over the length and breadth of your vast territory with the tremendous means at your disposal. We may continue to work in our small territories with our restricted means, true, but with that ardent Faith that triumphs over the greatest difficulties.

"But this will then come to pass, and it will not be a good thing for Universal Art—namely: that the little territories will end by uniting to form one large territory and, instead of being associated with you, you and we, will become competitors.

"The number of artists capable of producing scenarios and the number of those capable of executing them artistically is not so great but that all could not find the opportunity of being happy in a powerful organization, which would become the most wonderful business in the world.

"Will you understand this, you Americans, while it is still easy of accomplishment? And will I have had the great joy of opening your eyes?

"You are at the head of the great organization of American Moving Pictures. If you will understand my appeal, the others will not fail to understand you, and what splendid work could then be accomplished."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

First Film "Frothblowers"

SPECIAL cable advices from London to the New York Times inform a waiting world that on Monday night Harold Lloyd was made a member of The Ancient Order of Frothblowers, a recently founded charitable organization headed by Sir Alfred Fripp, famous surgeon, who is the Grand Typhoon. Lloyd was made an honorary Typhoon, although that distinction is usually reserved for those who have brought in a hundred new members. Each Frothblower is supplied with specially designed cuff links. If challenged to show them by another member and unable to do so, the penalty is drinks all around. We suggest that the next time Lloyd goes to London he'd better remember his cuff links.

A Thirty-Year Log

MONDAY night, at Carnegie Hall, New York City, saw the presentation of "Thirty Years of Motion Pictures," by the National Board of Review. Excerpts from films from the earliest days down to the present were included, taking in color, slow motion, and the like, in addition to dramatic photoplays. The proceeds from the showing will be used for the preservation of this film record, which will be added to from time to time.

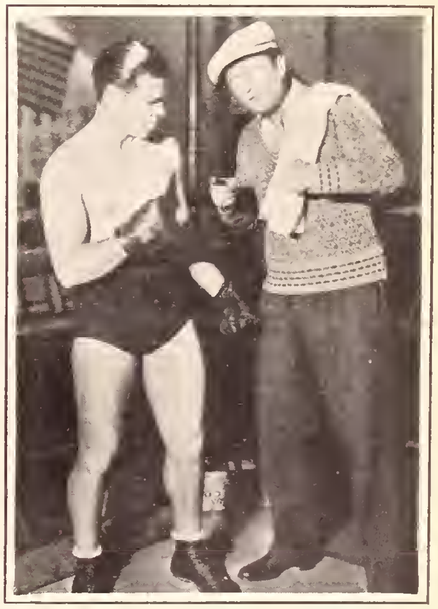
Lillian Phones Dorothy

LILLIAN GISH is in California and Dorothy is in England, but that did not prevent Lillian from getting Sister Dorothy on the telephone Monday morning to find out when she was returning home. The extension of the transatlantic radiophone service to Los Angeles made this possible.

Arthur Loew (right), head of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer foreign department, visits Director Ernst Lubitsch and Ramon Novarro during the filming of "Old Heidelberg" at the M-G-M Culver City studios

June Marlow, whose stock has been sent soaring by her work in Universal's "Alias the Deacon," joins the Gentlemen's Preferred class in a blonde wig

Jackie Coogan, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, in the uniform of the Urban Military Academy, where he is preparing for his role in "The Bugle Call" (M-G-M)



Edmund Lowe, playing the fight manager in "Is Zat So?" for Fox Films, gives a bit of sound advice to Mickey Walker, middleweight, a recent studio visitor

The animation staff at the Sullivan studios, New York City, pauses for a moment to "look pleasant" for the photographer. Pat Sullivan, creator of the "Felix, the Cat" cartoon comedies released by Educational, is at the extreme left, with O. Messmer, chief animator, sitting next to him.

When the call was made it was 8 o'clock in the morning for Lillian and 4 o'clock in the afternoon for Dorothy—who, by the way, starts home in April.

Naked Truth Guests Registering

MANY screen celebrities will be "among those present" at what is promised to be the most brilliant Naked Truth dinner yet planned by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers. Telegrams declaring they would attend the annual Eastern film frolic slated for the evening of Saturday, April 2, at the Astor Hotel, have already been received by Walter Eberhardt, president of the A.M.P.A., from Richard Dix, Ben Lyon, Lois Wilson, George Walsh, Robert Kane, Sam Hardy, Ruth Dwyer, Forrest Halsey, Leland Hayward, Joseph Boyle and Andres De Segurola.

A surprise visitor at last Thursday's luncheon of the A.M.P.A. was R. H. Burnside, former director general of the New York Hippodrome, now with Famous Players, who talked on his pleasant relations with the corporation. Other honor guests were Karl Brown, photographer, producer, director and author of "Stark Love," the production made in the mountains of North Carolina with a cast of real Hill Billies, many of whom had never even seen a motion picture, much less acted in one; Charles Christie, who, like most comedy producers, spoke very seriously of the fun business; and John H. Waldron, Mack Sennett's business manager. Wallace Beery will be a guest of the A.M.P.A. at this Thursday's gustatory gabfest of the screen's Apostles of Truth.

Arthur, East, in Hospital

JOHNNY ARTHUR, star of Educational-Tuxedo comedies, underwent a successful nasal and throat operation at the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, New York City, Monday, February 28. Arthur was reported to be getting along nicely on Tuesday, following the operation.

He arrived in New York the latter part of last week from Hollywood, where he recently completed his sixth comedy, the final one on this season's schedule. Arthur probably will be able to leave the hospital in a week or ten days.

Celebrate Silver Wedding

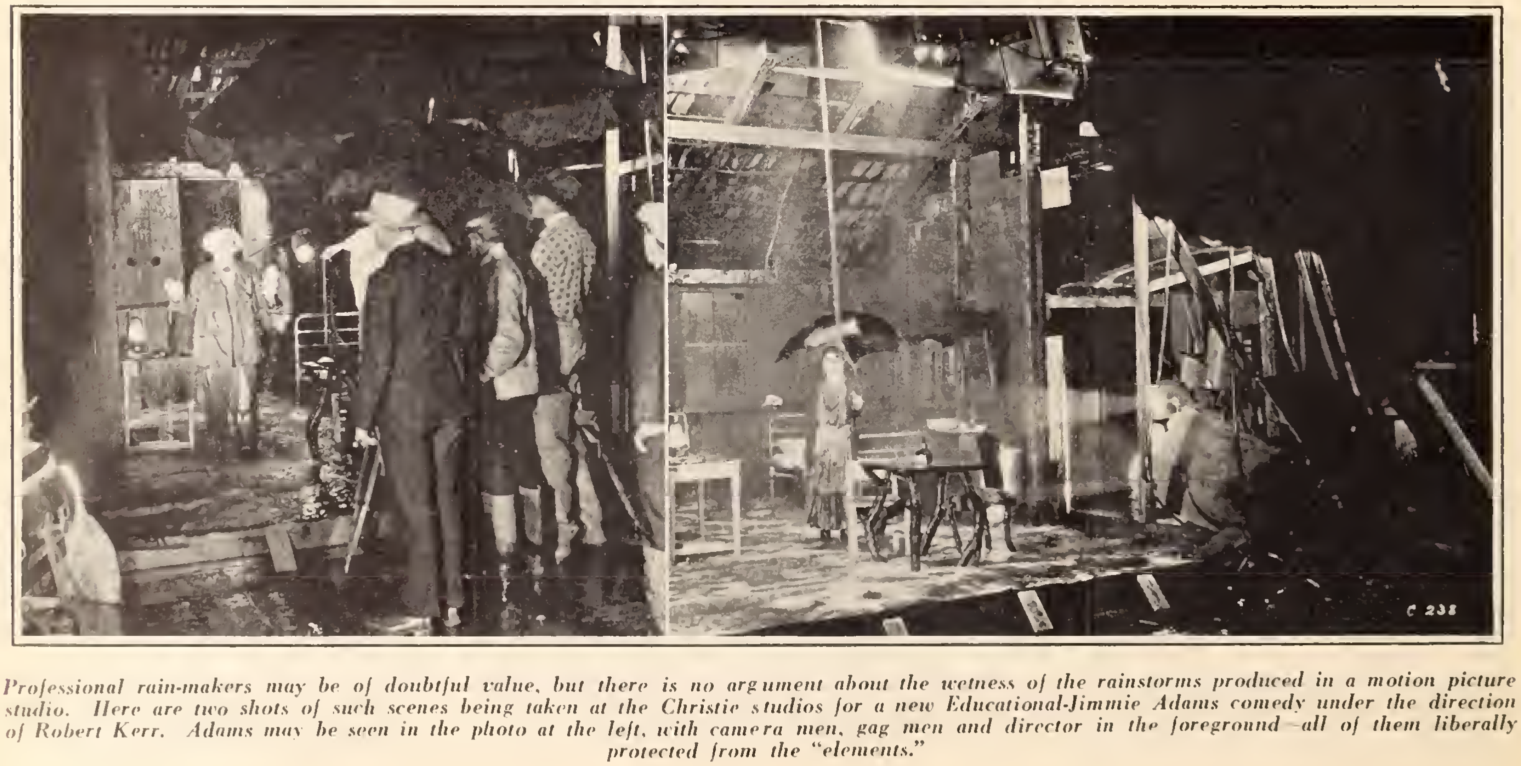
M. H. HOFFMAN, vice-president of Tiffany Productions, Inc., and Mrs. Hoffman celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding on Friday, February 25, by giving an informal dinner at their residence in Midwood Manor, New York, to their relatives and friends.

The executives and office force of Tiffany, as a token expressing their esteem and affection for "M. H." and his wife, presented the couple with a magnificent pair of antique Sheffield silver candlesticks.

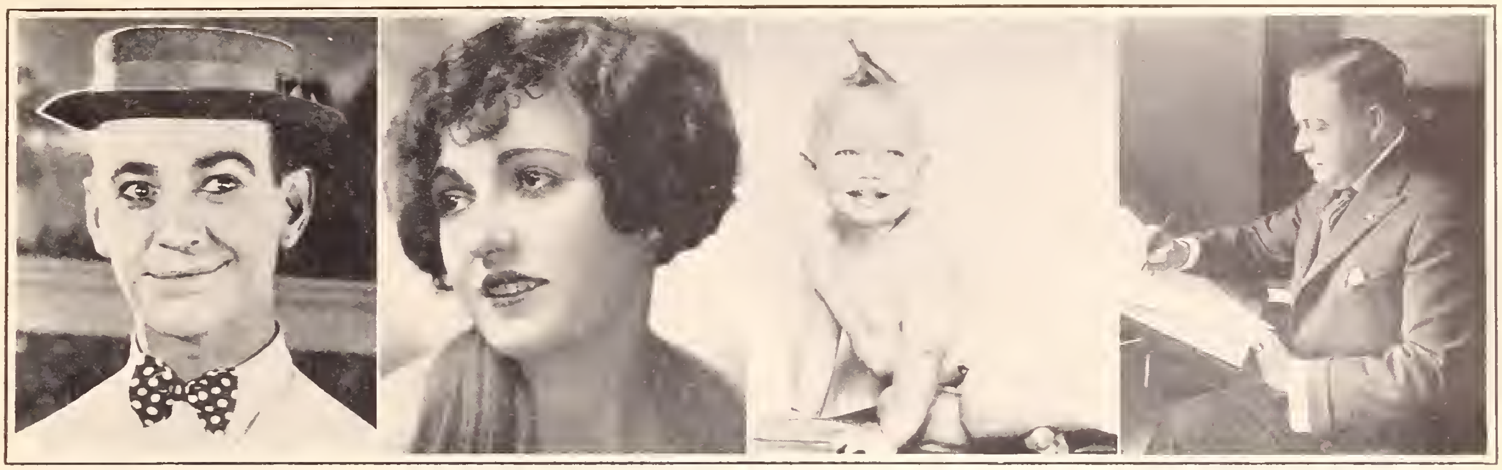
Back to Sunny Spain

AFTER delaying her departure several months to complete her exclusive contract to make "Movietone" recordings for Fox-Case Corporation, Raquel Meller sailed for her native Spain aboard the Spanish Royal Mail liner Alphonso XIII recently.

The celebrated Spanish star made four talking pictures in the Fox-Case studios on Tenth Avenue, New York. Senorita Meller appeared in the rich Spanish costumes and settings which won her acclaim in her theatrical programs. The four recordings made for Fox-Case are "La Mujer del Torero" (The Wife of the Toreador), "Flor del Mal" (Flower of Sin), "La Tarde de Corpus (Corpus Christi Day) and "Noi de la Madre" (Song of Motherhood).



Professional rain-makers may be of doubtful value, but there is no argument about the wetness of the rainstorms produced in a motion picture studio. Here are two shots of such scenes being taken at the Christie studios for a new Educational-Jimmie Adams comedy under the direction of Robert Kerr. Adams may be seen in the photo at the left, with camera men, gag men and director in the foreground—all of them liberally protected from the "elements."



George McManus (at the right), famous cartoonist and creator of "The Newlyweds and Their Baby," and "Let George Do It," both of which series Stern Brothers are producing as comedy two-reelers for Universal, together with three of the players who bring his characters to life on the screen: Sid Saylor, appearing in both series; Ethlyne Claire, and Snookums, both appearing in "The Newlyweds."

He Hasn't Changed

IT is always a genuine pleasure to interview (if such it could be called) Harold Lloyd on his infrequent trips East. We dropped in on him this week at the Ambassador, where he and Mrs. Lloyd (not to overlook the faithful Joe Reddy, minus a considerable amount of avoirdupois) are stopping for a few days. They planned to stay for several weeks, but owned up to considerable homesickness already, so it would not be surprising to hear of their return to the Coast next week.

This is the first time Lloyd has been in New York during the presentation of one of his pictures in a Broadway house. He is well pleased with the reception given "The Kid Brother" throughout the country to date, and feels that it is a better picture than "For Heaven's Sake."

His plans are very indefinite for his next picture, with several ideas under consideration. He tries to give his fans constant variety, however, and his next will have less pathos and "heart stuff" than "The Kid Brother."

Lloyd is as unspoiled and sensible as ever, and is wearing the same sized hat he has worn these many years—a fact which it is always pleasant to record about any outstanding personality. Mrs. Lloyd (Mildred Davis) is looking very well indeed. She returns to the screen in "Too Many Crooks," which was scheduled for a preview on the Coast this Friday night. Lloyd, by the way, must find a new leading lady for his next picture to succeed Jobyna Ralston, now with Famous.

Marines Coast Opening

COMBINING the brilliance of a West Coast premiere with the pomp and ceremony of a military affair, "Tell It to the Marines" opened last week at the Million Dollar Theatre, Los Angeles. A military parade through the streets preceded the showing. Brigadier General Smedley Butler of the San Diego Marine base, who supervised many sequences in the picture, arrived as guest of honor and was greeted by a thirteen-salvo salute from a Marine Corps cannon. William Haines enjoyed the distinction of attending both the New York and Los Angeles premieres, as he was in New York when the picture opened here last December.

"Don Juan" in London

Bert Lytell, Actor

CHATTING with Bert Lytell the other afternoon at the Lambs, during his appearance in a sketch at the Palace in New York, we fell to reminiscing over other days and he mourned the fact that he had never been given another role with the "meat" to it of that which he played in "The Right of Way," same years ago. That picture will never be forgotten by those who saw it, and it seems a pity that this vein was never followed up, but it is a not uncommon condition. Hobart Bosworth made three classics in "The Sea Wolf," "Below the Surface" and "Behind the Door," yet he has been given nothing comparable with them in years.

Lytell will continue his vaudeville tour until April, after which he will do another crook drama for Columbia, for whom he did the highly successful "The Lone Wolf Returns." He is keenly interested, just now, in the synchronized music and talking pictures, and believes that while these will never replace the silent drama they may lead to a new type of "spoken photoplay" with effects not now possible in either the spoken drama or the motion picture.

Man Ray En Route

MAN RAY, the noted modernist artist and experimenter in futuristic cinematography, sailed from Paris, Wednesday, on the Paris, to attend the American premiere of his latest screen opus, "Emak Bakia," which will be presented at a special subscription performance at the Guild Theatre, on West Fifty-second Street, on Sunday, March 6th, at two performances.

The same program will also include the American premiere of "The Living Dead Man," based on Pirandello's novel, "The Late Matthew Pascal," which features Ivan Mosjoukine, formerly of the Moscow Art Theatre, now with Universal, and Lois Moran.

Carewe Producing Play

NEXT Tuesday night at the Forrest Theatre, Edwin Carewe, in association with the Shuberts, will make his bow as a New York theatrical producer. The play is "The Heaven Tappers," formerly "The Celestial Hi-jackers," written by George Scarborough and produced on the West Coast by Carewe. Carewe is directing the Broadway production, which will have its tryout in Stamford, Conn., on Monday night. Margaret Lawrence was added to the cast this week, and the prospects for the play are declared to be bright. The story, as Carewe told it to us, should make perfect picture material—so watch for "The Heaven Tappers."

Here, transmitted by wire from California to New York, is a photo of Richard Barthelmess as he appeared shortly after breaking a bone in his foot while playing tennis. With him are Al Rockett, unit production manager, and Molly O'Day, Barthelmess' leading lady in First National's "The Patent Leather Kid."

Carewe was filled with plans and preparations for the opening of the play—but not too much so to express his enthusiasm over "Resurrection," which he has just produced with Inspiration for United Artists. He has adhered closely to the Tolstoi story in spirit and, in fact, he declares, simplifying and eliminating characters rather than altering situations. Dolores del Rio's work in the leading feminine role is an amazing performance, he says, and coupled with "What Price Glory" and "Carmen" should carry her far toward stardom.

He told us something of his plans for his next picture, and, while they are not yet ready for announcement, it may be said that he intends to maintain the standard he has set for himself in "Resurrection."

Review Rewarded

EIGHTEEN subjects were looked at in the past two weeks by the National Board of Review and four asterisks of merit were awarded, going to Pathe Review, all of them—issues No. 11, 12, 13 and 14.

Colleen Talks to London

COLLEEN MOORE, First National star, enjoys the distinction of being the first private user of the newly opened Los Angeles to London phone service. At the other end of the "wire" was J. Franklin Brockliss, managing director of British First National.

Real School Co-operation

ERNEST L. CRANDALL, director of lectures and visual instruction in the New York City schools, considered the showing of "Mona Lisa," the Educational Romance picture in technicolor, in Loew houses of sufficient importance to warrant bringing it to the attention of district superintendents and principals in a special letter.

Hungarian Stage Idol Coming

HUNGARY is about to make another contribution to Hollywood and American films in the person of the actor-idol of Budapest, Paul Lukas, who has been signed to an exclusive management contract by E. M. Somlyo, Hollywood and foreign producer, who plans to bring the star to the United States upon the conclusion of his present stage engagement in Budapest.

Although Lukas's fame and popularity have been won chiefly by his work on the stage in Budapest and Vienna, he has also played in a number of pictures in Europe, and will be no stranger to the camera. Alexander Korda, now here directing for First National, has directed Lukas in pictures in Hungary.

As might be expected, Lukas is young, tall, and handsome, but is a very distinctive type. However, it is not upon his good looks, but upon his acting, with which a number not only of his compatriots here but of American directors are familiar, that his proponent relies for Lukas to attain in Hollywood and in America a popularity comparable to that he enjoys abroad. Somlyo, who has recently returned to Hollywood after five years abroad, has watched Lukas's work during all that time, and since, in 1923, he saw the actor in "Ivanov," a Russian play which advanced him to stardom, Somlyo has wished to bring him to America and the films.

The golf bug, which has become almost epidemic in the near fatality of its bite in the last generation, has finally been isolated and rendered visible to the human eye by scientists working at Universal City. Here it is seen about to sting Barbara Kent, Universal featured player and 1927 Wampus Baby Star.

Lukas's name goes "in the lights" of the National Theatre in Budapest, and he is himself a "national player" or star member of the State endowed company. He speaks no English except the little he has learned for occasional scenes in his stage plays. The date of his sailing for the United States is as yet uncertain, but will shortly follow the completion of his current stage engagement in Hungary.

De Segurola Likes Films

ANDRES DE SEGUROLA—a name familiar to every opera goer—was a star of the Metropolitan Opera for more than a dozen years, and resigned a few years ago at the height of his career to enjoy life before advancing years took away his relish for it. He wanted freedom and leisure—and now, thanks to Gloria Swanson, whom he has known for a number of years, he is more of a slave than ever, and to an entirely new master, Motion Pictures.

De Segurola makes his bow on the screen in "The Love of Sunya," and he has found pictures so fascinating that he intends to continue in them. It is not unlikely that he will appear in the next Swanson vehicle as well. His sense of rhythm and timing, the fruit of a musical education, has stood him in good stead in the studio.

As a result of his first experience he advances the pertinent suggestion that from the standpoint of the actor it would be valuable if technical arrangements in the studio could be made so that longer, sustained scenes might be played, with different cameras recording close-ups, long shots and various angle shots during the uninterrupted performance of an entire sequence. This, he feels, would make it possible for the players to get into the role more thoroughly and to build up a properly shaded, consistent performance.

Edmund Goulding, M-G-M director, rehearsing a scene for his motion picture demonstration before students of Photoplay Composition at Columbia University. The leading man is William Twiddy, '27, and the "heroine" is "Bill" Easton, '29, a Columbia track star.

Photographer's Sex Determined

IN crediting a photographer with the Fox company for good judgment in selection of subjects and skill in taking pictures of the same, a reviewer of THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS drew his letter: "I know you would not purposely go on breaking a lady's heart, so I am taking the liberty of writing you this letter. . . . But, instead of calling me a 'cameraman' won't you, please, sir, call me a lady.

"Sincerely yours,
"(signed) ELIZABETH PICKETT."

Fair enough: henceforth Miss (or should it be Mrs.?) Pickett shall be classified with the fair sex.

Babe Ruth gets his first salary check for his work in First National's "Babe Comes Home," from the hand of Richard A. Rowland. In the group are M. C. Levee, Mr. Rowland, Mr. Ruth, John McCormick, and Wid Gunning, producer of the picture.

One-Man T.N.T. Committees

ANNOUNCEMENT of committees for the Naked Truth Dinner-Dance of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the Hotel Astor, April 2, has been made. One-man committee will, in general, be the rule.

Tom Wiley will have charge of the music and hotel arrangements. Victor M. Shapiro, of United Artists, has consented to enact his annual role of getting together the news reel. George Harvey, Producers' Distributing Corporation, will have charge of advertising and trade paper relations. W. E. Mulligan, First National, will be in charge of publicity. Kenneth Hallam, F.B.O., will be master of props.

Radio arrangements will be handled by A. L. Selig of Tiffany Productions. John Flinn, Producers' Distributing Corporation, will be marshal of the evening with several capable assistants. Bert Adler and Al Feinman will be general members of the dinner committee.

Seating arrangements will be handled by Tom Wiley, Al L. Selig and Lon Young. A committee composed of Arthur James, Hopp Hadley, Ed McNamee and Hal Howe will be in charge of the entertainment part of the program. The sale of tickets will be under the management of the board of directors, the past presidents and the advisory council.

Walter Eberhardt, president, is taking over the handling of finances and business arrangements for the dinner. Although tickets will not be available until next Monday, six tables have already been reserved, a result of the announcement that the assignment of seats will be made in order of cash reservations. Eberhardt can be reached at First National Pictures, 383 Madison Avenue.

Rutgers the Third

RUTGERS NEILSON, 3rd, arrived at St. Ann's Hospital, New York, last Saturday morning to greet Mr. and Mrs. Rutgers Neilson. He is reported to have had a pencil over one ear and a ream of copy paper in his hand, and as soon as the introductions were over with he issued a statement to the trade press in which he announced that he would launch a campaign for bigger and better milk bottles. (His father, may we add, is with the Pathe publicity department.)

Taylor's Title Trouble Tale

THE several controversies which arose recently over the use of the title "All Aboard" for Johnny Hines' latest First National picture produced by C. C. Burr have now been amicably settled through mutual agreements between the producer and distributing corporation concerned, and exhibitors can be assured the picture will be released under the original title of Matt Taylor's story, "All Aboard," from which the comedy was adapted.

Shortly after the picture went into production, it was discovered that Fox Films had released a two-reel picture under the title of "All Aboard" some time ago. Negotiations were gone into, after which officials of the Fox organization came to the decision that the First National picture would not conflict with their short subject of the same name.

Upon the completion of all camera work on "All Aboard," it came to the notice of First National that Producers Distributing Corporation had registered the title for future use. Again negotiations were gone into, and through the courtesies of Cecil B. De Mille and John Flinn that organization waived their rights to the title in favor of Johnny Hines.

Connie's Thirtieth Picture

WITH the filming of final scenes in "Venus of Venice," Constance Talmadge completes the thirtieth picture of her screen career. It is a little more than ten years since she came into prominence in Griffith's "Intolerance."

Ford New M.P.D.A. Head

AS president, John Ford will direct activities of the Motion Picture Directors' Association during the ensuing year, following the annual election of officers, the results of which have just been made public. Associated with William Fox, Ford is best known for "The Iron Horse," "Three Bad Men," and other specials. He succeeds Reginald Barker, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The newly chosen vice-president is Al Rogel, of First National, and Reeves "Breezey" Eason is the new treasurer. The newly elected board of governors includes William Beaudine, George Irving, Phil Rosen, Reginald Barker, Orval MacGregor, and Roy Clements.

Outlining a program of progress and advancement for the coming year, Ford announced his policies immediately following his elevation to the new post.

Laemmle Buys Coast Home

CARL LAEMMLE celebrated the establishment of a permanent residence on the West Coast last Sunday evening at a house party to two hundred guests at his newly acquired home, the Casa Grande del Monte. It was built by the late Thomas H. Ince and purchased by Laemmle from Mrs. Ince. He will still spend a certain amount of time in New York and Europe, but will devote a large portion of his energies to personal supervision of production at Universal City.

Mabel Normand Better

AFTER a serious and threatening attack of bronchial pneumonia, Mabel Normand is finally announced as well on the road to recovery and likely to be out of the hospital in a week or so.

Babe's Home-Coming

THE story, "Babe Comes Home," in which Babe Ruth is featured with Anna Q. Nilsson, was not written with the baseball star in mind for the lead, according to John McCormick, general production manager on the West Coast for F. N. The story was bought months ago, he said, under the title "Said With Soap," and was written by Gerald Beaumont. Ruth came to Los Angeles in a vaudeville turn, and the production executives seized on the idea of having him play the lead.

Movie Section Added

THEATRE MAGAZINE has added a new motion picture department, conducted by Sylvia B. Golden. It embraces pen portraits of film notables, exclusive sketches and photographs, and interesting interviews, making up an attractive department.

A Flock of New Faces

BETWEEN two and three hundred new faces, never before seen on any motion picture screen, will make their debut in "Rubber Tires." Director Alan Hale took his principals on a long tour of the tourist auto camps in filming this, and in each camp announced that he would need a certain number of extras the following day. In every instance he had more than he could use, and these fledgling troupers will make their bow when "Rubber Tires" rolls across the screen for the first time.

Evidently Not A Universal Custom

PAUL GULICK, the ever affable publicity advertising and exploitation head of Universal, was asked by a magazine writer for pictures of Carl Laemmle's directors with their children. His response: "I don't know what sort of race suicide our directors practice but it may be that they have merely kept their progeny away from the publicity department."

Dry Precipitation

SOMETHING new in rain-making is being tried out in "Old Heidelberg" at the M-G-M studios. Instead of jets of water before the camera, under this new method the water is at a distance and is reflected into the camera, protecting sets and costumes. In a scene where Novarro, as the newly created ruler, sits before his window gazing at the raindrops pattering against the glass, the rain is really some two hundred feet away, on the other stage, and by an ingenious system of reflectors a perfect illusion is created.

Theatre Total for U. S. 14,991

Motion Picture News Survey for 1926 Completed; Information on States Given in Detail

By J. S. Dickerson

THE following table of statistical information concerning the motion picture theatres of the United States and their classifications, contains material for some interesting comparisons and deductions.

The total number of houses recorded is 14,991, an increase of 306 over the 1925 compilation. The totals for the country divided into five groups, A. B. C. D and E, and representing comparative purchasing power is as follows:

Class A	1,041
Class B	1,706
Class C	3,511
Class D	4,356
Class E	4,377
Total	14,991

Theatres are not adjudged as Class A in cities of less than 10,000 population and B theatres do not extend below the group of towns of 5,000 population. All theatres in towns of less than 3,000 are termed either E or D class houses. Towns of less than 1,500 population are classed in the E group.

Class A and B theatres in seating capacity and general characteristics may be equal and the only difference is likely to be the amount of film rental they can or do pay.

Unless a theatre runs once per week or more it has not been included in the table, and clubs, fraternal organizations or other non-theatrical accounts have not been considered.

Stanley-West Coast Merger Seen

Figured as One Step in Control of First National by Stanley; National Chain Being Created

LOS ANGELES, March 2.—Officials of the Stanley Company of America, headed by John J. McGuirk, President, are expected here shortly to arrange for a giant theatre merger with West Coast Theatres, Inc.

This is an aftermath of a series of meetings held in the East which have resulted, according to the understanding here, of the acquisition of control of First National by Stanley.

This was brought about by Hayden, Stone & Co., bankers interested in both First National and West Coast, and E. B. Smith, Philadelphia bankers interested in the Stanley Company. Richard Hoyt, of Hayden, Stone & Co., is on the First National Board of Directors.

National Theatre Circuit

The deal also means a new era for First National, because, under the Stanley regime, a national theatre circuit is being created, with West Coast Theatres an important link in the chain.

It had been expected that Stanley extension to the Middle West would happen about the same time as the West Coast deal, but this, apparently, has not proved to be the case. The understanding now is, however, that the Mid-West will be represented eventually in the national chain by Ruben & Finkelstein in the Northwest; the Saxe interests in Wisconsin; and Skouras, St. Louis.

This would bring the chain's total to more than 500 houses, and make it a still more formidable contender for first honors in the circuit war. The Stanley Eastern holdings, including Crandall, the Moe Mark group, Jake Wells, Rowland & Clark and the Fabians, number 210 theatres. The West Coast total is now 136.

Col. Fred Levy, of Louisville, is expected to line up his theatres with the Stanley group, thus bringing in one section of the South.

One of the biggest factors in the situation is E. V. Richards, of the Saenger Amusement Co., New Orleans, which has been rapidly extending its interests throughout the South and even into South America. Saenger is affiliated with Publix. Just what the attitude of Mr. Richards will be toward the new deal remains to be seen, but it is known that he is still with First National as a member of the Executive Committee, though the Saenger theatres are allied with Publix.

Atlantic City Meeting

In this connection a bit of interesting history comes to light. About a year ago, at Atlantic City, the move for Stanley control of First National was initiated. This had been preceded by efforts on the part of some of the First National franchise-holders to persuade Richards to become the controlling head of the company, even to the extent of moving to New York. Mr. Richards declined to do this, preferring to devote himself to his strong theatre interests.

Subsequently, the handling of the problem by the banking group has become more marked. It should be remembered that Stanley, from its viewpoint, was a great theatre chain without its own production supply. The bankers, desiring to harmonize the whole situation by strenghthening First National and at the same time making the position of Stanley more impregnable, have swung, in the opinon of observers, control to Stanley, with the national theatre chain and increased capital for First National the ultimate object.

Franklin's Job

With the Stanley-West Coast merger in prospect, the importance of the job undertaken by Harold B. Franklin looms still bigger. Last week announcement was made that Mr. Franklin would become head of West Coast Theatres, which is already a fact.

In some quarters the speculation now is that Mr. Franklin may be slated for the job of managing director of all the Stanley-First National theatres so far as actual operation of the houses is concerned. This, however, may not prove to be the case. Those who take an opposite view maintain that Mr. Franklin will operate West Coast, while the various chains, as they are brought into the national circuit will continue under the direction of the present franchise-holders.

In any event, all signs point to a new deal in First National, with a view to pushing forward the company's position in the trade, and financially. Further interesting developments may be looked for soon.

It is also understood that West Coast may acquire some of the houses of the North American Theatres, Inc., though this development in the situation is not clearly defined.

Nearly 200% Rise in Liability Rates

THEATRES in Greater New York are operating under a high rate of liability insurance which has taken a jump from the old rate of 18 cents per theatre seat to the present schedule which places the figure at 40. This charge in rates adds to the cost of operating a theatre in the New York district a financial burden of tremendous weight. Exhibitors have been paying about 13 cents per seat despite the full rate of 18 cents. The new rate of 40 cents will reduce itself down to approximately 33 cents. Insurance agents claim that the increase in rates is due to the activity of the "negligence" lawyer, one who makes a specialty of handling accident claims against exhibitors.

The new rate covers liability claims of $5,000 to $10,000. But because of the fact that theatre owners carry protection which ranges from $50,000 to $300,000, the liability rate jumps to 92 per cent above the 40 per seat figure.

Conciliation in British Boycott is Likely

SEVERAL developments in the British situation this week indicate that a peaceful settlement of the boycott against Famous Players is likely. A number of prominent exhibitors have refused to support the move, and Councilor Hewitson in a speech before the Rotary Club in Birmingham stated that exhibitors were ready and willing to confer amicably on the whole question of safeguarding the interests of British exhibitors and the key city theatre problem.

It is understood that the proposed quota law calls for licensing of producers, distributors and exhibitors, with revokation of the license of any one of these who fails to conform to the quota law, now set at 7½ per cent.

Stanley Chain Financial Report Shows Eleven Million Gain

Philadelphia, March 2.—The financial report of the Stanley Company of America as of December 31, 1926, shows a gain in receipts at the box-office of approximately eleven million dollars over the previous year. This is due to an inerase in theatre holdings which jumped from a chain of 93 houses to 210; the greater number of consolidations became operative only in the last quarter of the year however, so that the statement reflects receipts from acquired theatres only for a short period.

The board of directors held a meeting February 25, 1927, and declared a stock dividend of 20% payable to stockholders of record April 9, 1927, and a stock allotment of one new share at $65 for each five shares held by the stockholders of record March fifth. At the same time the regular quarterly disbursement of 75 cents was voted. It was stated that $1,000,000 received by the company from insurance of Jules E. Mastbaum was not included in the 1926 statement of earnings.

Bad Buying Seen as Danger to Industry's Future

Pictures Will Always Dominate, Says Goldwyn; Kennedy Says Circuits Must Buy Fairly

EFFORTS by circuits to use their buying power to force rentals below an adequate figure will work harm to the entire industry, and in time react on exhibitors, in the opinion of Samuel Goldwyn, independent producer, and Joseph P. Kennedy, president of Film Booking Offices.

Mr. Goldwyn, who was in New York for a few days this week, returning to the Coast on Thursday, stated his views on theatre domination with his customary frankness.

"Pictures will always dominate this business," he said, "in the long run, even though men controlling 50 theatres or 500 theatres appear to dominate it for a time. They are merely riding for a fall, for without pictures their theatre investments are worthless—and you can't buy the type of brains needed to make them.

"I have been looking for a story for eleven months. You don't have to look that long for bricks and mortar. Pictures made in quantity will never fill the demands of those houses. I am putting as much thought and effort into four pictures a year as I used to put into thirty-six, and even then I don't always get what I want. Joseph M. Schenck has the financial resources to produce any number of pictures, but he only makes a few each year, and makes them right. That sort of independent product will always dominate the situation, regardless of any attempts by circuits to rule. All we ask is that they play fair."

Joseph P. Kennedy, at F.B.O., was optimistic as regards the present but saw a possible danger in future misuse of buying power by large circuits, in view of the many consolidations being made.

"F.B.O. is not trying to intimidate exhibitors and circuits with threats of building next door to them if they don't buy our product," he said, "and it would not be fair to penalize us for that. The men behind F.B.O. could readily finance theatre building on a large scale, but we don't believe that further moves of that sort are for the good of the business.

"There is no need to point out again that exhibitors must keep us (and by that I mean the independent group) alive for their own preservation. We are delivering good merchandise at a price at which the exhibitor can make money on it—not by cheapening production but by careful management. We could easily double our negative cost if we didn't keep everyone working at top speed and full efficiency.

"If the circuits and the first runs will not be fair, the distributor must get his cost back from the smaller exhibitors, which is bad for the business. All we ask is a fair return based on the revenue which our pictures are bringing in at the box-office. In most instances we are getting that—but should future changes bring about a condition where the circuits pay fair rentals only to those who threaten to build in competition to them, and 'take it out' on those who don't—where will this business be?"

Goldwyn Signs Gilda Gray for Five Years

Gilda Gray

GILDA GRAY affixed her signature to a five-year contract with Samuel Goldwyn this week. According to the producer, Miss Gray will do one picture per year each of the five years, United Artists to be the distributing company. Gil Boag, the star's husband and director, is now completing negotiations with David Belasco for the screen rights to "Marie Odile," Edward Knoblock's play which Belasco presented in New York City in 1914. As soon as contracts have been formally signed, the producer will employ the play as the first Gilda Gray vehicle.

In this production she will play the role of a nun. Mr. Goldwyn said:

"The public has seen only one side of Gilda Gray. There is much of her that has never been revealed. She has spirituality and the very real emotional quality of a natural actress."

Block Cites Script Needs

Tells How Famous Players Has Put Continuity in Proper Role; Approves NEWS Articles

By L. C. Moen

RALPH BLOCK, editor-in-chief at the Long Island studios of Famous Players, commenting this week on the series of articles which has been appearing in "The News" on Visual Continuity, concurred in the opinion that continuity may easily be one of the chief dangers and drawbacks in production today.

Many scripts, he pointed out, have deceived production executives as to the story merit because of their splendid literary style. For that reason, the Long Island studio has attempted to sidestep this danger by placing continuity in a somewhat minor role in the planning of a picture.

The first step, once a story is selected for production, is to boil it down to a bare outline, with no hint of literary style or adjectives. From that point on until the final preparation of continuity, the story is kept a matter of conversation. The scenario writer, the director and other members of the staff talk it over from every angle. Characterization is definitely established first, since that is the basis of drama. Then the actual plotting of the screen story starts, with every point weighed and discussed and argued over. The director "acts out" the principal scenes as he sees them, and the story is talked out from all angles.

When that is completed, the director could go out and shoot the picture without any continuity, so firmly has he established it in his mind. A script is necessary, however, for the information of the estimating department, the design of settings and costumes, and such details, so one is written in simple, newspaper style, recording the ideas developed in the various story conferences.

In this way the dangers of the literary script are largely avoided, and the picture is pretty well visualized in advance. The ideal method, Block pointed out, is what we have referred to in these articles as Improvisation, but this is impractical in quantity production to meet a releasing schedule.

We now bring to a close this series of articles on Continuity for the present. We have pointed out that continuity, being a thing of words, is a deceptive factor in production, and should either be relegated to a very minor position (Improvisation), or changed in character so as to become the keystone of the production arch (Composition).

What the character of that change should be must be rather obvious to anyone who has given serious thought to this problem. We might describe a method of Visual Continuity here at great length, but a trade journal is scarcely the medium for this.

One striking fact which has been borne home by the reaction to these articles has been the amount of thought which is being given to such problems within the industry. King Vidor is using a means of controlling tempo; Fairbanks and De Mille are using methods of visualization; an astonishing number of the directors, writers, executives, cutters, actors and whatnot whom we have interviewed have volunteered ideas closely paralleling these.

A great deal of thinking is being done, and one of these days it will take concrete form, at which time you may expect a radical change in standard practice throughout the industry. There is nothing mysterious about what needs to be done. A common-sense consideration of Rhythm and Tempo as they are to be found in Music, Poetry and the Dance, of Composition as it is to be found in Painting, Sculpture and Architecture, and of Motion as it is to be found in Dynamics and Kinetics, plus a study of the physiology and psychology of vision, should readily point the way. Continuity will become visual—of that we are convinced—and when it does a way will have been found to sounder, surer production.

William Lord Wright Re-Signed by Universal

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT, studio expert on short subjects and Western dramas, was recently re-signed to a new twelve months' engagement with Universal Pictures.

December Film Exports are Below November Total

Motion picture exports in December dropped $60,000 below those of the preceding month, it is shown by figures just compiled by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, totaling 23,035,208 feet with a value of $727,178, against 25,668,107 feet with a value of $787,283.

The decreased total was due entirely to reduced exports of positive films, which dropped from 19,401,336 feet, valued at $579,076, in November, to 17,563,401 feet, valued at $501,798, in December. Despite this drop, however, Australia set a new high record for imports of American positives, taking 3,184,583 feet, valued at $84,472.

Exports of negatives in December totaled 909,753 feet, worth $127,197, against 696,905 feet, worth $104,218, in November, and shipments of raw stock totaled 2,946,670 feet, worth $79,765, against 3,469,996 feet, worth $75,158. Shipments to non-contiguous territories amounted to 1,615,384 feet, valued at $18,418, against 2,099,870 feet, valued at $28,831.

Peruvian Government Puts Official Stamp on Film

The Peruvian Government has declared of an official character the preparation of a Peruvian film undertaken by the Compania Cinematografica Nacional "Inca" Film, for exhibition at the Seville Ibero-American exposition.

Lexico Film to Use Name "Vitaphone," is Plan

An unusual situation was created this week by the announcement that the Lexico Film Producing Company, Inc., of New York, will produce synchronized singing and talking films under the name "Vitaphone," to which it claims a right as the result of use 16 years ago. It will not seek to prevent use of the name by Warner Bros. but will defend its own right to the employment of the word "Vitaphone."

A. J. Bloome

In 1911, it is stated, a talking picture was marketed by the Vitascope Company under the name Vitaphone. Jacob Schlakman and Milton Berkstone were the owners, and Mr. Schlakman retained control of the patent after the death of Mr. Berktone. The former is vice-president of Lexico.

The old Edison studio at 2826 Decatur Avenue, New York, has been leased and production will start within a month under the direction of A. J. Bloome, a pioneer producer, who will be remembered as having been identified with "Satan" as early as 1912, and who, later preleased productions starring James K. Hackett through First National.

Sam Warner stated this week that he was not worried by this move, as the name "Vitaphone" has been protected in every state and country where it will be shown.

Famous Feature Production Will Be Centered at West Coast Studio

JESSE L. LASKY this week announced that in the future Famous will concentrate all of its feature producing in the new studio in Hollywood. For some time twenty-five percent of the feature pictures have been made at the Long Island plant, said Mr. Lasky, owing to lack of facilities at the West Coast studio. The company opened its new studio in Hollywood last Fall and it is now believed that production can better be carried out under the new system. There will be no reduction in the Paramount schedule, said the Famous producing head.

Mr. Lasky stated the Long Island studio will not be closed; as space becomes available, when units at present engaged have finished current pictures, Publix Theatres, Inc., will use the studio stages for the rehearsal of presentation shows used in the Publix houses throughout the country. Other space will be given over to the Paramount short features, now being organized for release beginning next August. The Eastern laboratory will be devoted to the needs of Paramount News and short features. "The executive forces of the Long Island studios will be transferred to the West Coast," stated Mr. Lasky.

Ontario Tax Is Reduced

Abolished on Tickets Up to Twenty-five Cents; Remains on Higher Rate Stubs

EXHIBITORS of the Province of Ontario obtained their promised reduction in the Ontario Amusement Tax on February 24, when the Hon. J. D. Monteith, Provincial Treasurer, announced the reduction in conjunction with the presentation of the budget on the floor of the Legislature at Toronto.

All amusement tax is abolished on tickets up to 25 cents, it was stated by Hon. Mr. Monteith. This means the dropping of revenue of approximately $600,000 a year, he said, but it was possible because of the prospect of a surplus in Provincial financing in 1927. The one-cent tax on admission tickets up to 15 cents is entirely wiped out and the two-cent tax from 15 to 25 cents also disappears. There is yet a two-cent tax on tickets up to 45 cents, and approximately 10 per cent. on tickets over that value.

Last September more than 100 exhibitors waited on Premier Howard Ferguson at Toronto, when the promise was made that relief would be afforded the moving picture business. That promise has now been carried out and it is intimated that the move is only the first in a series of reductions in the amusement tax in Ontario, which became effective some 12 years ago as a war measure.

The abolishment of the small end of the amusement tax is chiefly beneficial to suburban and small town theatres and it also makes a difference with children's tickets and matinee admissions at the larger theatres. The movement against the tax was led by the M. P. T. O. of Canada and the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, the latter being the Canadian branch of the Motion Picture Producers' and Distributors' Association of New York.

The Provinces of Quebec and Manitoba have also given consideration to the amusement tax question. In Quebec, steps have been taken to secure the collection of the tax on season and other complimentary passes. In Quebec the Provincial Government turns over the tax proceeds to the cities for local hospitals.

In Manitoba, Premier John Bracken announced in the Manitoba Legislature that substantial changes would be made in the amusement tax which would afford relief to exhibitors and theatre patrons. For a number of years this has been agitated by the Manitoba Exhibitors' Association.

British Foreign Trade in 1926 Shows Decline

British imports of motion picture film for 1926 showed a heavy decline over 1925, according to advices from the American Consulate General, London, made public by the Department of Commerce. In 1925, however, there was a period of six months during which no import duty was levied, in addition to which two months' prior intimation having been given of intention to reimpose the customs duty on July 1, a great influx of films took place. Imports of raw stock declined by 67.75 per cent and positive films declined 65 per cent. Negatives declined 31 per cent. The aggregate exports were 33 per cent below 1925 and 26 per cent under 1924.

French Film Exports Fall Off; Imports Rise

French exports of film for 1926 fell off while her imports increased, as compared with 1925, according to advices to the motion picture section, Department of Commerce, from the Paris office. Exports from France during 1926 totaled 4,823 metric quintals, as compared with 5,210 quintals in 1925. Imports in 1926 amounted to 2,704 quintals, compared with 2,692 in 1925. The United States continued in 1926 to be the principal supplier of developed film to France, but showed a decline as compared with 1925.

Fox-Case Movietone is Ready for Market

Device Recording Pictures and Sound on Same Film Demonstrated for Daily and Trade Writers

COMMERCIAL production of motion pictures with voice or music photographed on the same film has been started at the Fox Case Movietone studios in West 54th Street, New York City. On Thursday of last week a group of daily newspaper and trade journal writers witnessed a practical demonstration of the device perfected by the Case Company which, in brief, affords the recording on a single strip of film of synchronized picture and sound, the latter through the filming of variations in light intensity on a narrow edge of the film.

The writers gathered at the studios and witnessed the taking of a reel of short subjects made in the course of experimentation; this included the recording and filming of artists playing various instruments and a canary atop its cage in a burst of song. Next Raquel Meller in a group of five short subjects, all Spanish in words and settings; these are intended for distribution. Some of the press representatives made short addresses which were filmed and recorded and later projected at the Harris Theatre, New York.

Following the demonstration the writers lunched with executives of the Fox Film Company who added dissertations to the practical work-out witnessed at the laboratories. Courtland Smith of the Fox Company told of the plans for the future of Movietone and the hopes of the promoters. One thing he stressed, of the greatest possible interest to theatre-owners, is that the Vitaphone projection machine is the most successful for the projection of the Fox-Case product, emphasizing that the only additional equipment necessary for the use of Movietone on a machine using Vitaphone projection is a small light box the expense of which is nominal.

E. I. Sponable, who for ten years has been working on the Fox Case device at the Case Laboratories in Auburn, N.Y., gave a more detailed and technical explanation of the working of the machine and this was supplemented by a talk by D. B. Eldred, head of the Fox Case Corporation, on what the company intends doing with its patent. J. E. Otterson of the Western Electric Company, which manufactures the theatre equipment used by both Vitaphone and Movietone, stressed the advantage to the public of having these two different systems of reproducing ''talking movies'' projected by means of the same equipment in the theatre.

Novel Newsreel Promised

Emmanuel Cohen Enthusiastic Over Plans for Paramount News; Short Subject Plans Maturing

WHEN the plans for Paramount News are announced they will prove of sensational interest, in the opinion of Emmanuel Cohen, head of Paramount's short features production department. The nature of this cannot yet be disclosed, for obvious reasons, but Mr. Cohen believes that he will be able to surpass any past efforts in this field and carry out plans which he has had in mind for years. With the resources of the Paramount organization at his command, the former editor of Pathe News is confident that the new semi-weekly service, due to start about August, will prove of great popularity.

Mr. Cohen is in charge of all short subjects, and negotiations are now being closed for the entire lineup of releases. The schedule will not be large at first, he says, but will be sufficient to furnish a complete program from the beginning.

For 13 years Mr. Cohen was associated with Pathe News, during more than 11 of which he was the editor. Although outstandingly successful in the newsreel field he has never been a newspaperman. After leaving Columbia he devoted a year to travel and writing on political and economic subjects. He then went with Pathe News as assistant editor, later became editor, and remained there until his present connection with Paramount.

In his building of a strong organization for the production of Paramount News, he has appointed Albert J. Richard news editor of the semi-weekly service and William C. Park, make-up editor.

Richard is a pioneer in motion pictures, having first entered the field 20 years ago. At that time he devoted himself to specialization in the processes of developing film and in the technique of photography.

In 1910 he entered the news reel field with the French organization of Pathe. His record with this company, and his subsequent activities, ranked him as one of the outstanding cameramen in the newsreel field.

Richard not only was one of the first newsreel cameramen, but he also was one of the first to take motion pictures in flight, a perilous undertaking which has been developed to a high degree since the war. Prior to joining Paramount, Richard was assistant editor of Pathe News under the direction of Cohen.

Park, before entering the newsreel field in 1919, was on the editorial staff of the Newark ''Evening News.'' After 10 years of newspaper work, he joined the editorial department of Pathe, later being assigned to the ''Pathe Review.''

Since 1922 he has been assistant editor of the Review, which was produced under the supervision of Cohen.

"All Aboard" Title Disputes Amicably Settled

The controversies which recently arose over the rights of the title ''All Aboard,'' Johnny Hines' latest First National comedy, have now been amicably settled through mutual agreements between the Fox Film Corporation and Producers' Distributing Corporation and C. C. Burr and First National. The picture will be released under its original title, ''All Aboard.''

Not long after the Hines vehicle was placed into work it was discovered that Fox Films had released a two-reel picture under the title of ''All Aboard'' some time ago. Upon the completion of all camera work it was also brought to light that Producers' Distributing Corporation had registered the title for future use. When negotiations were entered into, Fox officials decided that the title of the Hines comedy would not conflict with the Fox short subject. Through the courtesies of Cecil B. De Mille and John Flinn, Producers' Distributing Corporation waived rights to the title in favor of Johnny Hines.

Poli Acquires More Land for Springfield Theatre

Additional purchases of land have been made by Samuel Z. Poli for the proposed Memorial Theatre at Springfield, Mass., bringing the total cost of the site to $2,250,000 to date. Mr. Poli has now acquired all of the land bounded by Vernon, Broadway and Pynchon streets adjoining the Municipal Group of the city of Springfield. The first tract of land was bought from the city after efforts had been made by the Goldstein brothers to secure it.

The additional tract was purchased from Justin B. Perkins for $300,000 and establishes a new record high price for real estate in Springfield of $3,750 per front foot. There are two residences on the property, which contain 8,200 square feet. These will, like the other buildings on the other tracts, be demolished at once.

Turkish Film Monopoly Is Proposed in New Plan

The creation of a monopoly for the importation of films for the benefit of the Turkish Aviation League has recently been submitted to the Grand National Assembly, states a report to the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache Julian E. Gillespie, Constantinople, it being for the purpose of providing additional revenue for the league.

The project of law provides that the importation of motion pictures shall be reserved exclusively to the Aviation League; that the league may exploit these itself or may lease all or part of the monopoly to others; that all films arriving more than 30 days after the law comes into effect shall be declared contraband and turned over to the league or its leasing companies.

Ground Broken for U.A. Theatre in Los Angeles

WITH Mary Pickford operating steam shovel and Fred Niblo acting as master of ceremonies, ground was broken Tuesday last, March 1, for the "photoplay skyscraper," to be erected on Broadway between Ninth and Tenth Streets, Los Angeles, over a United Artists' theatre, one of the houses in the projected chain of twenty pre-release United Artists' theatres. It will have a frontage of 150 feet.

The theatre will embrace the three lowest floors of the structure, which in itself will represent a total investment of more than $3,500 000. The architect is C. Howard Crane, of Detroit, the associate architects, Walker and Eisen, of Los Angeles. Plans for the structure have been let to Scofield Construction Company.

Among those present at the first actual construction work on the house were Sid Grauman, Roland West, several members of the United Artists coterie, Mayor George E. Cryer, of Los Angeles, and delegates from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, the Builders' Exchange and the Major Business Center Association.

On Saturday, February 26th, in the office of Jesse L. Lasky, the contract was signed which gives Paramount the screen rights to "Abie's Irish Rose," the theatrical production which has played more than 2,000 performances on Broadway. Seated, left to right: Adolph Zukor, Anne Nichols, author and producer of the play, and Jesse L. Lasky. Standing, left to right: Louis E. Swaras, attorney for Famous Players; Moses L. Malevinsky, attorney for Miss Nichols, and William de Lignemare, general manager for Miss Nichols.

"Abie" Screen Rights to Famous Players

Anne Nichols Comedy Sold On Profit-Sharing Arrangement; Will Aid Supervision

FOLLOWING months of negotiation, Anne Nichols, author and producer of "Abie's Irish Rose," this week signed a contract with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the screen production of her stage comedy. The terms of the sale were not made public, but it is understood that Miss Nichols will receive a large sum of money by virtue of a profit-sharing arrangement with Famous.

Start Filming Soon

It is expected that filming of the picture version will be started in the near future and that Miss Nichols will help supervise the production. No details were announced as to director and cast, but Jesse L. Lasky stated that one of the best known directors had been engaged for the assignment.

Adolph Zukor and Mr. Lasky represented the film company, and Miss Nichols and William de Lignemare acted for Abie's Irish Rose of New York, Inc. "I consider 'Abie's Irish Rose' the greatest motion picture property we have ever handled," said Mr. Zukor. "Simple, human, it has gone directly to the hearts of the American people on the stage and has reached the greatest audience enjoyed by any play in this generation. These same qualities insure its success as a motion picture, and we are confident that on the screen we shall duplicate the amazing success which Miss Nichols' play has achieved on the stage."

The play last month celebrated its 2,000 performance at the Republic Theatre, New York City. Since the Fall of 1922, in which year the comedy opened, it has been presented in every city and large town of the United States by from six to ten road companies for a total of 9,211 performances. At present, seven companies are presenting the Irish-Jewish romance. Mr. de Lignemare, who has been general manager for Miss Nichols throughout the run, declares "The surface has scarcely been scratched. We will show 'Abie' in barns and grange halls where no theatrical company has ever appeared."

$18,000,000 Receipts

Nine million people in the United States, Canada and Australia have paid a total of $18,000,000 in admissions for this play, of which it is estimated that Miss Nichols' personal profits are $5,000,000.

One of New York's favorite speculations has been the cause of the play's popularity. Miss Nichols says, "The success of 'Abie's Irish Rose' is the result of its human and genuine qualities, and its great message—the spirit of tolerance. In spite of all obstacles, I always had profound faith in the play because of its fundamental appeal, and I never allowed anything to discourage me."

"The Big Parade" Has Third Longest Run in History of American Theatre

EXCEEDED only by "Abie's Irish Rose" and "Lightnin'," two legitimate plays, "The Big Parade," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, now enjoys the distinction of having the third longest run known to the American theatre. At the present time the box-office total at the Astor Theatre, New York City, where the film is showing, is a trifle under $1,300,000. It reached its 933rd performance on February 27.

Every big motion picture that has been nationally road-showed at legitimate theatre prices since the "Birth of a Nation," which was the first of the "two-dollar" motion pictures, ran for more than six hundred times on Broadway. There have been many pictures shown in legitimate Broadway theatres since the first presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" twelve years ago, but they did not tour the country for a full theatrical season nor did they achieve the six hundredth performance on Broadway. This is an unusual record for the screen; in twelve years each of the six recognized road-show pictures ran for more than six hundred times here and in the one hundred and sixty years of New York theatricals there have been only twelve plays to pass the six hundredth mark.

High "U" Income Expected

Dividend Distribution on Common Stock May be Started, Forecasts Wall Street Journal

OPERATIONS of Universal Pictures, Inc., since the beginning of its current fiscal year on November 7, 1926, are understood to have been running substantially in excess of the corresponding period a year ago, declares "The Wall Street News."

"Present indications are that this situation will continue during the remainder of the current period, which would mean that the company may experience its most prosperous year during the period to end next November," the publication states.

"During the last fiscal year, Universal's gross and net income established new high records, the former reaching $27,676,926, an increase of $2,853,400 over the previous high mark of the preceding year, and net income after all charges, taxes, etc., amounted to $1,968,089, equal after preferred dividend to $6.41 a share on 250,000 no par value common stock outstanding, compared with $1,925,506, or $6.18 a share on common outstanding in 1925.

"Increased returns of Universal during the 1926 period were more gratifying when consideration is taken of the fact that the company, during that period carried on its most ambitious production schedule, most of the pictures of which have been released during that time. As Universal follows a policy of writing the entire cost of a picture off at the time of its release, they have been charged against net income, thus lowering the actual profits accruing during the period. Universal has announced recently the largest program in its history for 1927-28.

"In view of the excellent earnings of the past few years, coupled with Universal's strong financial structure as of Nov. 6, 1926, it would appear that the company is in position to inaugurate dividend distributions on the common. However, before any action of this kind can be taken, an accumulation of dividends on the 7 per cent cumulative second preferred stock of the company, amounting to 14 per cent on December 31 last, will have to be paid off. On the 20,000 shares of $100 par value this will amount to only $280,000. While no information is forthcoming officially as to the possibility of future initiation of dividends on the junior stock, earnings would justify a rate of $2 or $3 annually."

In And Out of Town

MORRIS SAFIER, head of the extended run department of Warner Bros., has hit the trail again after returning, two weeks ago, from a three weeks' trip. His new itinerary will take him to Cleveland, Indianapolis, Chicago and St. Louis.

M. H. HOFFMAN, vice-president of Tiffany Productions, left last Saturday, February 26th, for Miami, Fla. After a few days at that resort he will proceed to Hollywood via Chicago. His trip to the West Coast is for the purpose of outlining the Tiffany production schedule for 1927-28.

CRESSON E. SMITH, United Artists general sales manager, Middle West Division, left Sunday, February 20th, for a fortnight's sales trip through the Middle West. He will visit Chicago, Indianapolis, Detroit and other cities in his territory.

MONLEY HILL, United Artists general sales manager, Eastern Division, returned Monday, February 21st, to the home office after a sales trip of two weeks through New England. He visited Philadelphia as well as centers throughout the New England locality in the interest of the seven new pictures United Artists are now offering.

ED. J. SMITH, Tiffany general sales manager, left last Wednesday, February 23d, for an official visit to the Tiffany exchanges in the Middle West. He also intends making a detour to the South.

Erich Pommer

Pommer Associate M-G-M Producing Executive

Erich Pommer, prominent German film executive lately connected with Famous Players-Lasky, has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to serve as associate producer under Irving Thalberg. During his stay of less than a year in this country, Pommer has been studying the methods of American production. Though his first assignment for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has not yet been decided upon it is expected that it will save a significant bearing on the company's plans of expansion for the new season.

Production Humming at F.B.O. Hollyw'd Studio

EXPRESSING the conviction that 1927 will be F.B.O.'s greatest year, Edwin King, vice-president in charge of production, has remarked that months of preparation and reinforcing have resulted in "a rock-bound organization in the matter of executives, directors, stars and stories." Within the next few days work on the company's new schedule of 104 pictures will get under way when Director Ralph Ince begins production on "Not for Publication." Following the initial production on the new program, Charles Giblyn will launch "Ladies Beware." There will then follow "The City of Shadows," preliminary scenes of which are being filmed at Santa Suzanna Pass under the direction of J. P. McGowan. Jack Luden and Sharon Lynn will have the leads. A newcomer on the lot, Elsie Tarron, will have her first asignment in Tom Tyler's "Cyclone of the Range." This company is now on location shooting exteriors under Bob De Lacy's direction. Viola Dana's latest vehicle, formerly called "Nice and Wicked," will now be known as "Naughty Nannette." Ed Brownell, another new face on the screen, is playing opposite the feminine star.

Tom McNamara, cartoonist and writer, has signed a long-term contract with F.B.O. and at the present time is working on the adaptation and continuity of "The Beauty Shop," a new H. C. Witwer series."

Loew to Build in Charlotte, N. C., Is Rumor

A report was circulated from Charlotte, N.C., this week that Loew's, Inc., would erect a theatre in Charlotte in the near future. The rumor, unauthenticated, emanated from the report of J. H. Cutter, owner of the plot of ground now occupied by the First A.R.P. church and which is now being torn down. As no future disposition of the property has been mentioned as yet, the Cutter report has been linked with the official announcement made last week by E. A. Schiller, vice-president of the Loew interests, that a Southern office of his company would be re-established in Atlanta. The reason for this, it was pointed out by Mr. Schiller, was to make more practicable the Loew expansion policy which Loew will embark upon in the South.

Particular interest, according to Mr. Schiller's official statement will be vouchsafed by his company to the smaller metropolises and towns of this section, with Loew planning to erect and operate theatres, in many Southern cities of less than major importance, on a twice-weekly change policy of vaudeville and pictures.

Vote for Sunday Pictures in Fitchburg, Mass.

By an overwhelming majority of 7,801 to 4,363, and with but 15 blanks cast and about 1,500 not voting, Fitchburg, Mass., went on record in favor of Sunday motion picture entertainments at its theatres. The vote was taken by Mayor Joseph A. Lowe and a citizens' committee headed by George L. Parmenter, by means of postal cards, one of which was sent to every one at the 13,500 voters.

According to a survey conducted by a German film publication, 80 new theatres have been announced for construction in Germany during this year. The total seating capacity is about one hundred thousand.

PLANS for the erection of one of the South's largest theatre buildings in Winston-Salem, N.C., were announced Wednesday by the Carolina Building, Inc. The announcement followed the signing of a lease for 25 years to the Publix Saenger Theatres, Inc.

Grainger Scanning Theatre Situation; Fox Will Build Where Necessary

WITH the sole object of looking over the first-run theatre situation in the South and exchange centers west of Chicago as it affects Fox Films, James R. Grainger, general sales manager of the company, is now on tour throughout the South and will wind up the first part of his trip at the Fox West Coast studios. There he will go into conference with Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager, regarding production plans for the new season and it is not improbable that William Fox will journey to the Coast for the meeting.

Fox is determined to have adequate representation in all cities, states Mr. Grainger, who will confine his trip to an investigation of that phase of distribution and will do no selling while on it. He will prepare a report for Mr. Fox embodying a recommendation as to those points in which he believes it necessary that the company build theatres.

Mr. Grainger's itinerary through the South includes stops at New Orleans, Atlanta, Dallas and other points in the Southwest.

Roxy Theatre Opening Set for March 11

World's Biggest Picture House Has Many Innovations and is An Architectural Marvel

S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel

MARCH 11 has been definitely set as the opening date for the Roxy Theatre. This announcement was made by Roxy himself on February 25 when he conducted a hundred representatives of newspapers and magazines on a tour of his wonder theatre. Walter W. Ahlschlager, architect, and Chanin Construction Co., builders, promise that the house will be ready on time.

After a view of the house and an inspection of its many innovations, it is a safe bet that the opening night will create a sensation on Broadway.

Without question, the Roxy will be acclaimed as the world's finest, as well as largest theatre. It is an architectural triumph; a house of over 6,000 seating capacity, really huge in size, but giving the effect of an intimate theatre.

Nothing like it has ever been seen in the theatre world. Entering the main foyer, which has room for 4,000 people, is like going into a theatre itself. Here waiting patrons will be entertained with music. Thus, the theatre can accomodate 10,000 at one time.

The Roxy is equipped with three different projectors, specially constructed—the Simplex projector, the Vitaphone and the new invention, the Spoor Natural Vision, which will have its showing at this theatre.

A new device whereby the projectionist can change at will the size or shape of the image flashed on the screen has been perfected, and an innovation in mechanical effects is the projection machine in the rear of the stage for panoramas and scenic novelties. The Roxy screen is the exact size of the picture.

The stage, designed by Clark Robinson, is triangular rather than square, a form which lends itself peculiarly to new developments in stage craft. Simply by rounding off the rear corners a well-nigh perfect sky cyclorama has been effected and by flying this cyclorama with the aid of a separate steel beam construction overhead and electric motors, the unusual depth of 60 ft. in the centre of the stage was obtained. This makes possible a new scheme of rear projection by which animated backdrops are obtained. A system of elevators arranged to produce any desired combination of levels with the use of platforms, controls the stage floor which may be sunk to the basement or cellar if desired.

United Artists to Distribute Corinne Griffith Independent Productions

Corinne Griffith

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, chairman of the board of directors of United Artists, this week announced that his company has signed with Corinne Griffith as an independent producer of her own films. Miss Griffith is now en route from Europe to the United States to begin work on her first picture under her new contract. This next film goes to United Artists, said Mr. Schenck, as the star completed her contract with First National Pictures.

The first story probably will be "The Garden of Eden," a present European stage play by two German playwrights, Rudolps Bernauer and Rudolph Oesterreicher, which will be produced in New York soon after the return of Arch. Selwyn from Europe. Mr. Schenck purchased the screen rights to the story, and June Mathis, screen writer and producer, has been engaged to prepare the story for filming. One of the objects of the star's trip abroad was to see the play as presented in Berlin.

Quimby M-G-M Short Subject Sales Head

Feist to Supervise; Hatrick States News Reel Is Separate Hearst Venture

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER has selected Fred C. Quimby to handle sales for its short-subject department under the supervision of Felix F. Feist, general manager of sales and distribution for the company. Mr. Quimby is to start his new duties immediately.

The executive of the new department has had considerable experience in motion picture sales executive work, being associated with Pathe for eight years, during the greater part of that period in the position of general sales manager. This brought him into close contact with the Hal Roach product which, under the recent affiliation effected between that producer and M-G-M, will be distributed by the Loew-controlled company.

Mr. Quimby left Pathe to go into business for himself and, during this phase of his career, spent about two years in Europe buying Continental product for an American distributor. For the past two years he has been supervisor of the short subject department of Fox Films.

Fred C. Quimby

The statement that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer would issue a newsreel and that this newsreel would be made by the Hearst organization seems to have caused some confusion in view of the fact that International Newsreel, which is released by Universal Pictures Corporation, is made by the International Newsreel Corporation, which is owned by William Randolph Hearst.

A statement issued yesterday by E. B. Hatrick, who has full charge of all Mr. Hearst's film interests, clears the atmosphere.

"The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer newsreel," said Mr. Hatrick, "will be made by the Hearst News Service, Inc., and will be operated as independently from the International Newsreel as it will be from any other newsreel in the field. The M-G-M newsreel will have an entirely separate camera and editorial staff. It will, of course, be organized along the same lines as International Newsreel, as these lines have proven to be the most successful.

"The Hearst News Service, Inc., which will produce the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Newsreel, is not promising any trick features or great secret stunts. The 'M-G-M News' will have as its policy the presentation, twice a week, of one thousand feet of entertainment on the screen, with news as its main feature."

States Not Empowered to Regulate Ticket Prices

The theatrical business is one which, in its relation to the public, differs obviously and widely, both in character and degree, from public utilities, and the States therefore are without the power to regulate the prices at which theatre tickets shall be sold or resold, the United States Supreme Court at Washington, D.C., held on February 28 in a decision in the case brought by Tyson and Brother—United Theatre Ticket Offices, Inc., to determine the validity of the New York statute prohibiting the resale of tickets by agencies for more than 50 cents above the price printed thereon.

The decision of the court reversed that of the New York courts, which had held the statute valid, and was based on the opinion that it contravened the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

Agitation in France For Semi-Weekly Change

There is a strong agitation in Paris for a change of bill twice a week, according to a report from Vice-Consul Harold L. Smith, Paris, made public by the Department of Commerce. At present most of the French houses change once a week, on Friday. It is pointed out that many of the smaller theatres now open only two or three days a week might be able to operate throughout the week with two changes of program. Opponents of the plan assert that it would be too difficult to find a sufficient number of programs.

Seeks Actors in Colleges

First National-College Humor Magazine Idea; Camera Crews to Canvas Schools in April

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES, in conjunction with College Humor, a magazine devoted to subjects interesting to collegians, will send four crews of expert camera men to universities throughout the country during April to make screen tests of undergraduates who appear likely material for pictures. The idea is sponsored by General and Production manager Richard A. Rowland and John McCormick, general manager of West Coast productions for First National.

Every element that goes into the making of an actor of the highest type will be considered in selecting the candidates: facial features, physique and intellect will undergo a thorough examination. From the tests made, it is proposed to select the ten men who give the greatest indication of talent and send them to the First National Burbank studio, all expenses paid and with a salary guaranteed. First National will have an option on the services of the players chosen, salaries to be increased on a liberal scale, it is stated.

In commenting on the tests, Mr. McCormick said: "Motion pictures need, in addition to new faces, new talent, which, when defined cinematically, means the intelligence to respond to the direction of those who have mastered screen technique, and the flexibility or versatility demanded of a man who must typify many characters during a screen career.

"In addition to providing realistic visualation of fiction, the motion picture of the near future must also provide an ideal . . . a man who typifies the finest qualities of his sex, a woman who has the natural grace and charm of the movie audience's highest ideal."

Full details of the manner in which the tests are to be conducted and the colleges to be visited will be announced at an early date.

Key City Reports

New York City

Business at the Broadway houses was good in most instances this week, although no records are likely to be broken. The Capitol Theatre did so well with "The Scarlet Letter" last week that it was held over, but this week's patronage is nothing to shout about. The attendance is good on the whole, and the total for the week will probably be around $48,000—nothing exceptional but not bad.

The Mark Strand is pulling them in very well this week with "An Affair of the Follies" and "Shoulder Arms," a strong combination. The gross should not be far from $40,000, at present indications. "McFadden's Flats" finished last week in fine shape, averaging $40,000 weekly for the three week run.

The Paramount has "Blind Alleys" this week, with Meighan pulling them in nicely. Last week proved very strong with "Love's Greatest Mistake." Gertrude Ederle comes in as a special attraction on Saturday.

"The Kid Brother" ends its six week run this Friday, although there are indications that business would easily warrant two or three additional weeks. Business the first two days would point toward a gross in excess of $20,000 on the week. "Metropolis" comes in next week, which is frankly a gamble. It is a freak picture, and may score heavily or take a nose dive.

"The Big Parade" is beginning to fall off slightly for the first time. "What Price Glory" holds up very well. The Vitaphone shows are all continuing strong. "Beau Geste" shows no sign of weakening, and "Old Ironsides," while not filling the large house, continues to chalk up a neat gross weekly.

Boston

Boston theatres report the largest attendance at all of the theatres during the holiday week of any similar period in many years and for several months past. Just what has brought about the increased attendance is something of a puzzle to owners and managers. Weather conditions have been variable and have supplied about every variety, from blizzard conditions and an 80-mile gale, which worked havoc throughout New England, to mild, spring-like conditions. Legitimate houses report a similar record-breaking week.

Two Boston theatres were planning extensive alterations but these have been delayed so that full advantage may be taken of the large attendances. Competition has been keen among many of the houses and the general programs have been gradually improved, which may be reflected in some of the attendance. Matinee business may be partly accounted for because of the general spring vacations of the public schools.

Kansas City

Despite Kansas City's "off and on" weather this week, the attendance at virtually all first run houses was about normal. The Mainstreet which established a new policy of augmented vaudeville, in addition to the feature picture, being an exception to the rule, in that it had a larger week's attendance than the house previously has ever enjoyed. The Mainstreet's picture was "The Third Degree."

At the Pantages the Dempsey-Tunney fight picture and another feature, "Money to Burn," drew well, as did "The Show" at the Newman. "Tell It to the Marines" continued on its third week at the Royal, the attendance holding up, while "Men of Purpose," a war production, did a normal business at the Liberty.

Salt Lake City

The Paramount Empress Theatre of this city offered a special stage attraction last week in connection with Buster Keaton in "The General." The stage attraction was Jack and Jill in Harmony and Song, and capacity business was enjoyed.

The Vitaphone is still going over big at the American. Next week Al Jolson will be the special Vitaphone attraction, and also Madame Schumann-Heink and a Hawaiian Orchestra. The picture next week at the American will be Warner Bros.' "Millionaires."

The Gem Theatre here has been very successful since their change of policy the first of the year, at which time they inaugurated the plan of showing first-run pictures. The Victory Theatre here did good business last week during the showing of "Love's Greatest Mistake."

"Men of Purpose," a war picture being shown at the Kinema Theatre, under the management of Louis N. Strike, is being exploited by large posters being erected at the various intersections of Main Street here. This picture is being presented by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Business at the Orpheum Theatre, under the management of Edwin A. Morris and his assistant, Edwin E. Tucker, is wonderfully good, according to report. Ackerman Harris Vaudeville and First-Run pictures are shown at this house.

Baltimore

With Washington's Birthday breaking into the week beginning Monday, February 21, the business for all the houses here, generally speaking, was very good in Baltimore with "Faust" at the Loew's Century and "The Lunatic at Large" combined with the "Gorilla Hunt" at the Rivoli topping the list with excellent business and Buck Jones in "The War Horse" with Mercedes, the Magician, doing fine business at the Garden.

"Ben Hur" began the first week of its return engagement at Ford's Theatre, a legitimate house at a $1.50 top did well, while those houses doing very good included Keith's Hippodrome with "The Marriage Clause," Warner's Metropolitan with "Don Juan" and the Vitaphone attractions in its fourth week; the New Theatre with "Fighting Love" and the Auditorium, another legitimate house with "What Price Glory" at $1.50 top.

The Loew's Valencia came along pretty good with "The Winning of Barbara Worth" in its second week and the Embassy went along only fairly with "There You Are."

The business in the Monumental City has kept up very well during the first two months of the year and in some instances reports have it that some theatres have done better during January than during the same month in 1926.

Central Pennsylvania

Although the week of February 21 was ushered into Central Pennsylvania with by far the heaviest snowstorm of the season and weather conditions continued bad throughout the greater part of the week, the high quality of the motion picture offerings in the first-run theatres in Harrisburg was responsible for very satisfactory box-office results during that period.

Biggest drawing cards perhaps for the week were "The Fire Brigade" at Loew's Regent, and "It," featuring Clara Bow and Antonio Moreno, at the Victoria. Through clever exploitation of "The Fire Brigade," Manager Melnicker, of the Regent aroused unusual interest among the firemen of the city—where the fire department is composed of volunteer companies with big memberships, and the theatre was filled to capacity at almost all performances. At the Colonial "Ladies at Play," starring Doris Kenyon, Louise Fazenda and Lloyd Hughes, was well patronized, while "The Nervous Wreck" brought good business to the Broad Street. The film attraction at the State was Raymond Griffith in "You'd Be Surprised," which combined with a good vaudeville bill, brought the usual large crowds.

Seattle

With three outstanding productions on local screens last week, the theatre business generally among first-run houses was quite good. Despite rainy weather and a noticeable depression in retail business, the picture houses that did better than average business were the United Artists, with the first week's engagement of "The Kid Brother;" the Fifth Avenue Theatre, playing "It;" and the Columbia Theatre with the first week's run of "Michael Strogoff." Some competition was offered by a week of opera by the Seattle Civic Opera Company at the Metropolitan, legitimate house, but the picture theatres offered no complaints.

Philadelphia

The Franklin Theatre Company's Arcadia Theatre at Reading was the scene of the first introduction in Pennsylvania of Warner Brothers' Vitaphone, when "Don Juan" opened at the house recently for an extended run. The Stanley Company has closed contracts for the Vitaphone for the Aldine Theatre, a road show house, and for the Globe Theatre which is ordinarily a "grind house." "Don Juan" will follow "Old Ironsides" at the Aldine probably within the next month or two. The Stanley Company will also put the Vitaphone into the Stanley, Camden, the Stanley, Atlantic City and it is now in operation at the Stanley in Washington.

Marjorie Rambeau, dramatic star, in person, in a condensed version of her most recent play, "Just Life," was the headliner at the Fox last week. The Soviet Choral League, a group of 24 magnificent singers, sang folk lore songs. Murray and Allen, billed as "Jesters of 3,000 Years Ago" put on an original and clever act which drew much applause. Their most appreciated songs were "For We're a Couple of Lyres" and "Three Thousand Years Ago."

For the first time since it was opened six years ago the Stanley Theatre opened at 9.30 A.M. last week during the week's run of the Metro-Goldwyn production "Flesh and the Devil." The picture played to tremendous business and the Stanley Company officials declared that in the future they will probably introduce such a policy when, in their opinion, a picture warrants such a divergence from their regular policy.

Cleveland

A new record was chalked up at Loew's Cameo Theatre on Washington's Birthday, when "McFadden's Flats" on the second day of its second week's run, broke the house record. Although the picture had opened to very big business, the Washington Birthday record beat it. This is unique to say the least. And the engagement will run a third week certainly, and possibly four.

"Don Juan" will be held over at the Stillman Theatre for a third week. With the exception of Rudolph Valentino's picture, "Don Juan" is the only picture that has played longer than two weeks at the Stillman so far this season. The picture did big business in Columbus, also.

Milwaukee

The general holiday on the 22nd allied with incomparable weather made this an unusually good week for downtown theatres. A near mob scene was staged at the doors of the Alhambra Theatre on the afternoon of the 22nd, when women by the score, and men too, stormed the doors for a view of Edna Wallace Hopper. Edna, like Ponce de Leon, has many followers. "The Scarlet Letter" showing at the Merrill, according to reports, broke a Thursday night house record this week. It is drawing a heavy crowd and will be continued for a second week. The Wisconsin with George Beban, et al, as magnet, got its share of receipts. Altogether, it was a satisfying week for the downtown managers.

Des Moines

"The Fire Brigade" playing with a splendid Fireman's quartet and concluding with films of local firemen, made a very good record at the Des Moines Theatre. The picture met with popular enthusiasm. The feature at the Capitol was supported with a big bill, both on stage and screen, Black Bottom Dancers and prizes each night, radio artists from all over the country here on Wednesday for the Radio Congress, besides an unusually fine stage show of the Publix Shows. The picture was "An Affair of the Follies" and the week was a good one.

Minneapolis

Weather continued unusually mild in Minneapolis last week, with spring thaws disposing of a winter's accumulation of snow. The movies, as a whole, experienced a good week, as a result of this clement weather, with Harold Lloyd in "The Kid Brother" doing the outstanding business at the Strand and remaining over for a second week. The Shriners circus, which played a full week at the Armory, provided some competition.

San Diego

Incident to the recent showing of "Let It Rain," at the Balboa Theatre, in San Diego, the week was designated as "Navy and Marine Week," in recognition of the aid which these branches of the national defence had given in the production of the picture, practically all of which had been made in and around San Diego. The picture came to the Balboa most appropriately, too, in the midst of the rainiest February the city has seen, but the popularity of the Paramount star, Douglas MacLean, and the fact that the film was a San Diego one in the making, drew big houses. The Fanchon & Marco Idea of the week was entitled "Happy Hours at Sea," and in this one feature was a boxing match, the first to be shown in actual form on the Balboa stage.

Indianapolis

A touch of spring weather swelled movie attendance in Indianapolis last week. "The Perfect Sap" at the Circle, with Tom Brown's orchestra as a feature, had a good run. It was Brown's fourth engagement at the Circle.

Tampa

Competition is the life of trade, 'tis said, and the exhibitors of Tampa are getting great gobs of it this winter. The South Florida Fair and Gasparilla Carnival pulled an attendance in excess of 400,000 during the two weeks it was open. Bachman's Million Dollar Band is a daily feature in Plant Park during the entire winter, and they play to immense audiences, and now Billy Sunday opened a six weeks' engagement last Sunday and pulled 15,000 people the opening matinee and night. However, the show shops are doing business, but competition of this kind is something one can't help but feel.

Studio Briefs

Bess Meredyth, screen writer, has been signed to a long term contract by First National. She will devote her talents, dating from about the middle of March, to preparing stories for First National. Miss Meredyth prepared "The Sea Beast," "Don Juan" and "When a Man Loves" for the screen.

James O. Spearing, former motion picture critic for the New York Times, titled "Convoy," the Robert Kane Nautical special which First National will issue soon.

George Bunny, brother of the late John Bunny, has joined Marie Prevost's support in "The Night Bride," which E. Mason Hopper is now directing at Metropolitan.

Harry J. (Joe) Brown has been engaged by Charles R. Rogers to direct Ken Maynard in "The Country Beyond Law," by Marion Jackson. The picture is now nearing completion as far as all preliminary arrangements are concerned and casting is to begin immediately.

Al Boasberg, former exploitation man and recently title writer, has been signed on a long term contract as a member of the Famous Players scenario staff. His first work in his new position will be the adaptation of Eddie Cantor's next Paramount picture, "The Girl Friend."

Lloyd Corrigan, for the past year a member of the Famous Players writing staff at the West Coast studio, has been signed to a new long-term contract. He is at present working with John McDermott on the latter's screen story "Senorita," as Bebe Daniels' next starring vehicle. Clarence Badger will direct.

Monte Brice, who has just completed Wallace Beery's "Casey at the Bat," will direct Beery in "Fireman, Save My Child." The Beery film will follow "Sheiks and Shebas," the Paramount "youth" picture, which Brice will also direct.

Hallam Cooley, the Warren of many a "Helen and Warren" comedy, is appearing for the first time in Raymond Griffith's new comedy which Earle Kebton is directing. He will appear as Griffith's chum.

"The City of Shadows," the last of the F. B. O. Gold Bonds, is now well into production under the directorship of J. P. McGowan. The story is based on "The Lark," by Mary Roberts Rinehart. It has many sensational airplane sequences.

Arthur Ripley, playwright, has been recruited by Harry Langdon to advise with him in the editing of "Long Pants," the comedian's new feature length comedy for First National, which will be ready for theatres throughout the country early in March.

Jean Dupont, chief reader in the scenario department of the F. B. O. Hollywood studio for more than a year, has been promoted to the position of scenarist. Her first assignment is the adaptation of "The Beauty Shop," a new series by H. C. Witwer. She is working in conjunction with Tom McNamara. The series is to go into production at an early date. Miss Dupont, it is reported, will adapt her own story, "Snappy Jane," which was purchased by F. B. O. several months ago.

Nick De Ruiz, portrayer of sinister, villainous figures, has been added to the cast of "The Unknown," Lon Chaney's new starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer which Tod Browning is directing. Before entering pictures Ruiz was a designer of millinery.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Premiere Official Event

More Than 40 Mayors and Fire Chiefs Attend Detroit Opening of "The Fire Brigade"

THE opening of "The Fire Brigade," at the John H. Kunsky Madison Theatre, Detroit, was made both an international and state-wide affair, by tying up with the Sixtieth Anniversary of the Detroit fire department.

It became a state-wide affair when Governor Fred W. Green of Michigan addressed a letter to the Detroit fire commission, the Detroit fire department and the International Fire Chiefs' Association, calling attention to the opening.

In addition to the recognition "The Fire Brigade" received from Governor Green, more than forty mayors and fire chiefs visited Detroit on the opening of the film. Each mayor, accompanied by his fire chief, brought a proclamation, and in every one, "The Fire Brigade" was mentioned.

It was made an international affair when Mayor C. E. Jackson and Chief C. J. DeFields, of Windsor, Ont., and Fire Chief H. Coats, of Walkerville, Canada, took part in the celebration, and brought with them proclamations from Canada, calling attention to the opening of the feature in Detroit.

All the mayors and fire chiefs were greeted to the city of Detroit by Mayor John W. Smith, who received from each mayor his proclamation. Fire Chief Edward H. Megnity, of Detroit, then led a parade made up of the fire chiefs, in their bright-red cars, to the Madison Theatre, where a welcoming address and a tribute to the film was made by Paxton C. Mendelshon, millionaire chairman of the Fire Prevention Committee of the Detroit Board of Commerce.

The opening of a new fire station was also made part of the celebration, with A. A. Shantz, president of the Detroit Fire Commission, commenting upon the film in his address dedicating the new house. The Detroit daily newspapers were most liberal in their spport of the campaign. The Detroit "News" giving a full page to review the activities of the Detroit fire department since its inception, in the Sunday section on the day "The Fire Brigade" opened. The Detroit "Times" and "Free Press" also gave considerable space in their Sunday sections to the entire campaign. The campaign was sponsored by the Fire Prevention Committee of the Detroit Board of Commerce, with Paxton C. Mendelshon and George Morley, millionaire Detroit fire fans, giving nearly all their time for two weeks to the movement.

Mayor John W. Smith, of Detroit, not only aided the campaign personally, but issued a proclamation.

In addition to the mayor's proclamation, a vivid account of "The Fire Brigade" was read to the men at roll call, for two consecutive mornings, in all the fire stations of Detroit. The Firemen's band of forty-four pieces also played several numbers in front of the theatre on the opening day. The entire campaign can be repeated in any town. It brings maximum results at minimum expense. In fact, not one cent was spent on the entire campaign by the theatre. The fire chief even issued an order that not one pass was to be given to any member of the fire department.

Regardless of how long the fire department in any city has been established, its anniversary for that year can be celebrated day and date with the run of the picture. This makes it a civic event to which newspapers and city and state officials are only too willing to lend their aid.

The exploitation and general publicity for the entire campaign in Detroit was handled by Louis P. Kramer, with Oscar A. Doob, laying out and writing all advertising copy. Both men were recently sent to the Kunsky organization by Balaban & Katz of Chicago.

Uses Bricks as Billing on "McFadden's Flats"

A novel form of "billing" was used in Newburgh, N.Y., to exploit the showing of "McFadden's Flats," at the Broadway Theatre there. The "posters" were ordinary building bricks with labels bearing the title of the picture, theatre and play dates, pasted on. This "Irish Confetti" was distributed about the town, in doorways, sidewalks, etc., by Manager Charles R. Hammerslough of the Broadway.

"Coming Attractions"

A DINNER-TIME DIALOGUE WITH FOOD FOR THOUGHT

The brisk young proprietor of the Little Gem Motion Picture Palace came bounding up the steps of his home.

"Dinner ready?" he cried. "I'm hungry as a wolf."

In the fragment of time known as a jiffy he had seated himself at the dining-table and was spreading a napkin on his knee. His wife sat opposite; in her eyes a laugh.

"Any food go with this dinner?" asked the young man after a brief interval.

"Presently," said his wife. "But first I must tell you of some of the good things I've planned for the rest of the week. This is Tuesday. Tomorrow, Wednesday, we shall have lamb chops, creamed potatoes and new peas for dinner. For dessert, cottage pudding with fruit sauce. Thursday's menu will be well worth your while. We shall have a sirloin steak with baked potatoes, young cauliflower, endive salad and a custard pie. Friday—"

"What's the—"

"Wait. Friday an unusually attractive dinner will be served at this house, one that you cannot possibly afford to miss. The features will be broiled Spanish mackerel with boiled potatoes, sliced tomatoes—"

"Fine, but hang it, Bess, how about tonight's—"

"Saturday," said his wife firmly, "a special bill will be offered you in the form of a genuine Irish stew, with apple dumpling as an added week-end attraction. Next week, our wedding anniversary week, will be a gala occasion at this house, a week of exceptional offerings. Beginning Monday—"

"Bess, I'm not as dull as you think I am. I begin to get you."

His wife's acknowledgment was a little nod.

"Of course you do," she said. "I meant that you should. Now you know how folks feel at your little old movie theatre when you feed them up for ten minutes on coming attractions when they're hungry for the main show—Olga, you may serve dinner now."

Atmosphere in Ballyhoo for "The Overland Stage"

Manager Hugh J. Smart dug up an old stage coach to exploit "The Overland Stage" when that film showed at the Strand Theatre, Montgomery, Ala.

The stage coach, similar to those in the days of '49, was used as a ballyhoo on the streets for three days in advance of showing. Two banners containing the title of picture, name of star, play dates, and theatre were placed on the stage coach, and a real cowboy drove it all over town.

"Effect" Cut-out in "Satan" Lobby

Dannenberg's Mechanical Devil Spouts Flame

Manager Sidney Dannenberg dressed up his lobby with a mechanical centerpiece that had the whole town talking when "Sorrows of Satan" played at the Strand Theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

The centerpiece was a cut-out of a devil, made of beaver board. The arms were extended as though holding open a cloak, with nifty cut stills in the lining of the cloak. Behind the mouth of the devil was a built-out box frame painted red. The mouth was large enough to permit the pasting of a Menjou head from the roof of the mouth to the back part of the throat.

Flat chicken coop wire was used to represent the tongue. The wire was painted red and on top of this wire was placed a piece of cheese cloth from which pieces of red crepe paper were tied. A large wall fan underneath made the papers shoot upward, and it looked like real flames coming from the devil's mouth.

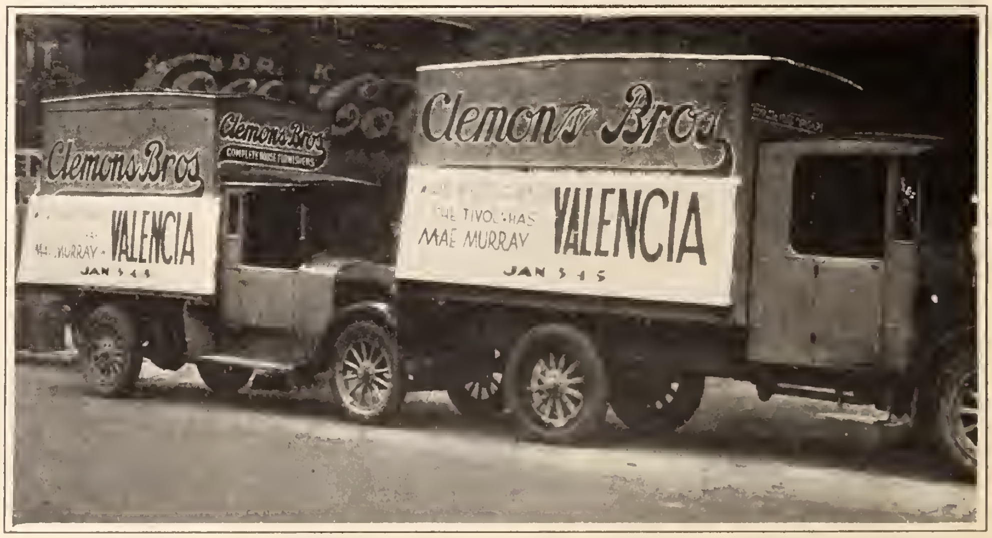
Beneath the devil's head was room enough for four photos of Menjou and ten stills from the picture.

Title Alone Proves As Serial Teaser

Line "House Without a Key" is Advance Ad for Picture

Manager Joe Goldberg, of the Southern Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn., in presenting "The House Without a Key" arranged a novel advance teaser campaign in exploitation of this serial.

Beginning three weeks prior to starting date of "The House Without a Key" a six-sheet poster was displayed in the lobby with "serial" covered up, leaving only the title "House Without a Key." The theatre arranged a special slide, which was projected on the wall of the house in a prominent spot, advising patrons of the coming of the subject, again omitting the names of players and serial. Another advance slide was also projected so as to appear on the screen simultaneously with pictures.



Ballyhoo for the asking, as it were. Photo above shows the trucks of a Chattanooga department store carrrying billing for "Valencia" (M-G-M) at the Tivoli Theatre there through a tie-up featuring the phonograph records of the song. Exploitation was arranged by Manager E. R. Rogers

Howe to Direct Paramount Horton Comedies

Edward E. Horton

IN the first of Edward Everett Horton's series of two-reel comedies which are being produced for Hollywood Productions at the Metropolitan studio, the stage and screen comedian will be directed by Jay A. Howe. Howe is credited with co-direction on Harold Lloyd's "The Kid Brother" and for several years was responsible for many of the leading comedies on Hal Roach's program.

Announcement was also made by Hollywood Productions that Sharon Lynn will play opposite Horton. Others in the cast include Otis Harlan, James Gordon and Josephine Crowell.

Robert Graves Has Featured Role in "Grandpa's Boy"

Robert Graves, who has been appearing in minor roles in several comedies made at the Educational studios, has the featured role of "Grandpa" in "Grandpa's Boy," an Educational-Juvenile comedy.

Sterns Have Six for March

Two-Reel Comedies Include Excerpts from Cartoon Adaptations; "Buster Brown" Heads List

THE Stern Bros., comedy producers for Universal, will issue six two-reel comedies during March. The producers have carefully selected them with an eye to offset the relaxation in attendance during Lent.

"Buster's Dark Secret," a Buster Brown Universal Jewel, heads the list which also includes "Snookums Disappears," "Some More Excuses," "Jane's Honeymoon," "Be My Wife," and "Backward George."

"The Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedy, "Snookums Disappears," has already reached the screen, it having been released March 2. Gus Meins directed the offering which features "Snookums" and Ethlyne Clair. The Buster Brown comedy, "Buster's Dark Secret," was also directed by Meins and sets forth the antics of Arthur Trimble, Doreen Turner and Pete, the canine comedian. It comes to the exhibitor on March 7.

On March 9 and March 23 two comedies from "The Excuse Maker" series will be released. They are, in the order of their dates, "Some More Excuses," and "Be My Wife." Charles King is the star of these two and he is supported by Ethlyne Clair. The former comedy was directed by Scott Pembroke and the latter by Francis Corby.

"Jane's Honeymoon," of the "What Happened to Jane" comedies, is the release for March 18. A newcomer in Stern comedies, Thelma Daniels, plays Jane and she is supported by Earl McCarthy and Lillian Worth. Charles Lamont was the director.

A "Let George Do It" comedy is the last offering for the month. It is entitled "Backward George" and as usual has Sid Saylor portraying the title role. The supporting cast is made up of Viola Bird, Harry Martin, George Marrell and Helen Lynch. Director Meins is responsible for this one.

Jean Darling New Leading Lady of "Our Gang"

Jean Darling, four-year-old blonde, has been officially chosen by the Hal Roach studio to fill the part of "leading lady" to "Our Gang." The young player has an almost certain prospect, it is reported, of being retained as the heroine of the "Gang." Her parts in the next two or three pictures will be sufficient for her to become acquainted with the camera and the atmosphere of the set. She was recently given a small part in "Bringing Home the Turkey," the January "Our Gang" release.

Two young boy twins, two years of age, are being considered for enrollment among the juvenile players, but owing to the fact that negotiations have not yet been terminated, their names are withheld.

"Speed," Title of Latest Castle Novelty Release

The title of the latest Castle novelty, just released, is "Speed." In it are incorporated swift and fast-moving shots such as scenes of horse races, racing speed boats, charging troops of cavalry, sensational angles of automobile races, cameramen riding fire engines and thundering locomotives, pictured from below the tracks. These scenes employed practically every modern camera technical device.

Opinions on Current Productions

"Chicken Feathers"

(Educational-Christie Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

FILLED with action in every foot of film is this latest Christie comedy with quite an imposing cast of farceurs. Walter Graham shouting through the megaphone has kept them on the go from start to finish. And all because Jack Duffy got to the bank too late to deposit five thousand dollars. To have it in a safe place he puts it in an old pillow. Daughter Anne Cornwall gives the pillow away to some youthful friends for sale at a church bazaar. Then to the church pell-mell go Jack, Anne, Jimmie Harrison, Anne's boy friend, a would-be thief, Billy Engle, who has been thwarted picking Jack's pocket of the five thousand, and Bill Irving, an iceman also anxious to corral the roll. The pillow has not arrived at the bazaar, but been presented to Anne's aunt. She, in turn, has sent it to the cleaner's. And there, with vats for cleaning purposes and 'steen million pillows to be torn up and their feathers scattered as the quintet search for the money, there is enough excitement to satisfy the most rabid movie fan. Among other incidents is Jack Duffy emerging from a vat of fluid to acquire from the flying feathers the appearance of a gigantic Chanticleer.

It is all absurd but funny and will create countless laughs if not shrieks. Walter Graham is partly responsible, but credit also the players Anne Cornwall, Jack Duffy, Billy Engle, Bill Irving and Jimmie Harrison. Miss Cornwall is featured.

"Grandpa's Boy"

(Educational-Big Boy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

SCORE again for "Big Boy" and Educational Juvenile Comedies. While some may feel that there is a bit more slapstick in this than the wistful comedy which has been so appealing a quality in preceding offerings, yet there is enough of the latter to satisfy. And the slapstick is funny; there is no gainsaying that. Of plot there is little. It concerns the boy's unsuspected (to movie followers) grandfather who sends for his heir. He is an awful misanthrope, but ends by capitulating to the smile and personality of the youngster. In the process he and the entire household are upset by Big Boy and his dog. But the fun starts even before the arrival at the home of the crabbed grandsire. His fellow juvenile boarders and the emissary from his grandfather get into pans of dough, clouds of soot, etc. Through it all the star serenely goes his way. He does threaten to break down when the automobile departs with himself aboard and the dog drawn on a child's wagon behind the car, but the smiles come through even in that tragic situation.

Director Charles Lamont, Supervisor Jack White, and the caste all share in the honors. The other players, aside from Big Boy, are Robert Graves, Bob Burns, Jack Lloyd.

"Rock-Ribbed Maine"

(Fox-Varieties—One Reel)

THIS is good vacation propaganda, but it is a bit unfair showing it at this time. It makes doubly disagreeable the necessity for sticking at a desk or behind a counter, for the natural impulse is to pack up, board a train and see with your own eyes the things which the cameraman has seen and photographed. This Varieties does not confine itself to the sports, such as fishing, hunting and camping, that are possible in Maine, but shows other activities and industries, such as potato raising, sardine exporting, sheep raising, etc. Also excellent scenic shots taken for their physical beauty. It is a worthy inclusion in the travelogue series.

Eight hundred and thirty-five feet in length. March 20th is the release date. — PAUL THOMPSON.

"Felix the Cat Stars in Stripes"

(Educational-Pat Sullivan Animated Cartoon—One Reel)

AND all because he was trying to act the role of a good Samaritan and amuse a baby Felix lands at the rock pile. Hard lines, but humanitarians often get stung that way. Felix's imitation of Charley Chaplin, I thought, was very good, but the crying baby he was trying to get to sleep evidently did not share my critic's viewpoint. Accordingly the obliging cat tries a stick of candy and then what looks to the child like a larger stick of candy, a barber's pole. Result, arrest, conviction and stripes and the rock pile. Foiled once in an attempt to escape, the second time he and a fellow crook succeed. They bore their way to freedom. A horse converted into a zebra facilitates the escape afterward, but the horse pays the penalty, because of the artificial stripes, by taking Felix's place behind the bars.

An amusing tale that will bring laughs rather than tears at the woes and tribulations of the long-suffering cat that owns up to a Pat Sullivan parentage.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Peace Deputy"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IMAGINE reading to a bunch of cowboys a book on "The Life Serene"! That is what Fred Gilman did in his running down a bunch of crooks. You see the cowboys laid aside their guns and so were easy marks for the marauders. But all this, as far as I can make out, was to egg the crooks on so Gilman, who was in reality a deputy sheriff, could get them right. And he did. First he doffs the professional clothes and puts on his sheriff's habiliments and then things happen. He rescues Barbara Kent from two of the gang by lassooing them. Then after worsting several individual members of the gang, he gets the ringleader. Of course, Gilman's real identity is revealed by the sheriff whose deputy he is.

It has a rather ingenious twist and the piece is filled with all kinds of action such as lovers of westerns delight in. George Hunter, the director, has done his megaphone work well. March 26th is the release date.

"Hokus Pokus"

(Universal-Bluebird—One Reel)

FOR an unpretentious one-reeler, this is not so bad. Neely Edwards gets peeved because his sweetheart, Consuelo Dawn, has a crush on a "Svengali." He decides to take up hypnotism himself. He gets half of a book on the subjects, but being unable to pay the balance due, is up against it because the crafty "professor" has torn off the half that tells how to bring subjects out of a trance. Inasmuch as Neely has hypnotized Consuelo's aunt, Lydia Yeamans Titus, and she thinks she is his wife, he is up against it. Evidently, if the system is sound, Doctors Steinach and Voronoff may just as well go out of business. The aged but frisky actress acts up all over the place to Neely's great embarrassment. A crack on the head brings Lydia out of her trance and she gets the hypnotist through a revelation of her bank book. Absurd? Yes, but filled with amusing situations.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"A Dozen Socks"

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THIS is not a hosiery comedy, but deals rather with the socks of the prize ring. Alice Day is supposedly in love with Barney Hellum, a sort of third assistant trainer for Danny O'Shea. That affair goes aglimmering when she meets the Romeo of the prize ring with all sorts of Mack Sennet beauties courting his manly favor. Alice is no exception. The teller of the tale and director take the characters out of the gymnasium to the beach, where Barney wanders into the ocean, as does Alice. This affords Danny a chance to rescue her, but, contrary to tradition, he does not seem disposed to marry her. Just so much more reason for an Alice Day persistence in getting the man she wants, in this case, of course, Danny. She succeeds.

It is not nearly as amusing as other comedies in which the leading players have appeared, but it will doubtless serve.

Marjorie Zier is the fourth of the featured players. Earl Rodney directed; J. A. Waldron supervised. Carl Harbaugh and Phil Whitman put their heads together to fashion the story. Released March 13th.

"All For a Bride"

(Pathe-Fable—One Reel)

IT must be the spring. This observation is made despite the fact that this latest Aesop Fable was drawn and photographed in the winter for release on March 13th. Charlie Cat is disclosed chasing flies and mice; he tires of this sport and goes off to serenade Fanny Feline. Who among cats or mortals would not do the same? Making love is the most thrilling of sports no matter what the period of the year; that is axiomatic. While Charlie is serenading her, a tough cat comes along and knocks Romeo off the ladder. Woman-like, Fanny insists that her would-be lover lick the roughneck. He trains with Milton Mouse. Despite the fact that the tough guy is murdering his sparring partners, the lovelorn cat, always mindful of the injunction of his beloved to return no more until he has proved his physical prowess, gets into the melee. A pail over the head of the champion helps Charlie to put over the knock-out punch. That is the clinching argument with the female of the species, who hates brutality but insists upon "her man" being a cave man. Fade-out Charles and Fanny in a "when a young man's fancy" close-up. —PAUL THOMPSON.

"Hitting the Trail"

(Educational-Life Cartoon—One Reel)

"NIBBINS" and "Pal," his pet dog, ride the rods. All goes well until the train encounters a stubborn mule on the track. The mule loses the argument, but that ends the train ride of the amateur hoboes. The aroma of hot cakes is wafted the way of the travelers. No money, no cakes, but one of the cakes starts on a journey and the two hungry ones pursue it. The journey's end for the cake is in the mouth of a policeman. The latter's pursuit of "Nibbins" and "Pal" results in their hopping a passing freight which runs wild. They are saved from sure death because a giraffe sticks his head out of a passing truck and his neck, looking like a gate-crossing bar, they transfer to this.

This is a simple little story that Artist McCrory tells, but filled with heart throbs. The characterization of the leading players is unusually well done. Credit also the director and continuity man for evolving an at all times interesting and absorbing story. — PAUL THOMPSON.

An Affair of the Follies

Simple and Obvious and Fairly Well Done

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE is not much dramatic weight to this number, it being quite an inconsequential celluloid composition. The title is about the only provocative thing about it and there is no question that it will attract audiences eager to glimpse another exposition of stage life. The patrons will see a simple little yarn about a Follies chorine who frowns upon a sugar daddy to marry a poor but honest clerk.

Good, experienced hands were employed in framing this picture.

These people did their best to invest it with spirit, and in all fairness the picture succeeds in having its moments. But it is light and obvious and the plot has seen better days. It has the girl giving up the dressing-room to keep house as the clerk's bride. Pathos creeps in when the youth loses his job and the girl returns to work. But happiness shows its pretty hand when the wealthy suitor convinces the boy that his bride is one of Nature's noblewomen. There is no villainy, which means no element of suggestion intrudes to stir up a triangle. The settings are tasty enough and the acting is competent as turned in by the principals.

The Cast: Lewis Stone, Billie Dove, Lloyd Hughes, Arthur Stone, Arthur Hoyt, Bertram Marburgh. Director, Millard Webb.

THEME: Romantic drama of chorus girl who marries poor youth after a mild flirtation with wealthy man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The conflict in developing romance. The settings. The fine supressed acting by Lewis Stone. The appeal of Miss Dove. The pathos.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The title can stand for all the teasing you can give it. Play up Billie Dove in her stage costumes, etc. Mention Lewis Stone and Lloyd Hughes. Bill as colorful story of a chorus girl.

DRAWING POWER: Should draw them through its title. O.K. for any house.

Produced and distributed by First National.
Length, six reels. Released February, 1927.

Blind Alleys

Not So Entertaining

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE is not very much inspiration in Thomas Meighan's newest entry. Owen Davis, the ever-busy playwright, concocted it and if the original idea contained any novel twists they have not been visualized in the adaptation. The story makes a slight gesture toward a domestic mix-up, but instead of its developing some bright and breezy complications it becomes wholly obvious and lacking any quality of suspense.

The story presents a plot of a young separated couple—the husband being knocked unconscious by a Broadway taxi and taken to a hospital while the bride has some experiences of her own with a gang of kidnapping gangsters. Much is made of solving the hero's identity, though the young wife's adventures are hardly stressed at all. It all ends with the husband being reunited to his bride at the moment when life looks very dark for him.

"Blind Alleys" does not measure up to Meighan's histrionic stature. The effort sought in bringing the couple together is executed in a rather laborious fashion. There are some interesting shots of Broadway night life, but for the most part the game of hide-and-seek becomes pretty tedious after four reels. The acting is fair enough, with Greta Nissen wearing a dark wig to represent a South American girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The separation. The adventures of heroine. The atmosphere of Broadway. The excitement in some of the early scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Might tie up with a teaser campaign around the title—using such lines as "You're not going up Blind Alleys in seeing Thomas Meighan's new picture." Feature Greta Nissen and bill film as story of separated couple in New York.

DRAWING POWER: Star's name will attract them. Suitable for average houses anywhere.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players-Lasky.
Length, six reels. Released February, 1927.

The Monkey Talks

French Play Makes Successful Movie

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

CASTING the same man for the leading role in a picture version of the play in which he had scored in Paris, London and New York has at least the merit of the unusual. In this instance it was wisely done. Jacques Lerner is the actor who plays the role of a human being pretending to be a monkey who talks and thereby becoming the vaudeville sensation of the Folies Bergeres in Paris. Lerner is admirable and convincing.

For those to whom the story is unfamiliar it may be worth while telling the tale. It concerns a small traveling French circus which is stranded. The idea of the smallest of three inseparable companions—Jacques Lerner—(the other two are: Don Alvarado and Raymond Hitchcock) is to recoup their fortunes by disguising himself as a monkey that talks. This is done and a sensation in vaudeville created. Lerner and Alvarado are both in love with Olive Borden (another vaudevillian) and she with Alvarado. Of course Lerner cannot confess his love because of the necessity for preserving the disguise.

Malcolm Waite, a lion trainer, and his sweetheart, Jane Winton, for revenge steal Lerner and substitute a real monkey, thinking thereby to ruin the act of the others. The real monkey attacks Olive in her dressing room but she is rescued by the escaped man-monkey. Jacques Lerner pays with his life for his rescue of her.

The Cast: Olive Borden, Jacques Lerner, Don Alvarado, Malcolm Waite, Raymond Hitchcock, Ted McNamara, Jane Winton, August Tollaire. Director, Raoul Walsh. Author, Rene Fauchois. Scenarist, L. G. Rigby. Cameraman, George O'Connell.

THEME: Man impersonates monkey in vaudeville. Falls in love with and loses life rescuing the girl who loves monkey-man's pal.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Interesting stage story. Filled with thrills. Well directed and acted and staged.

DRAWING POWER: Excellent.

Length, 5,500 feet. Released February 20.
Produced and distributed by Fox.

His Rise to Fame

How Heavyweight Champions Are Made

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

WERE it not for the fact that the hero (George Walsh), at the start of this film is addicted to playing the races, filling a little blue book with the names and addresses of skirts, doing the night clubs and other things quite foreign to the life story of the ex-marine, the reviewer or spectator might think Gene Tunney had inspired this romance by Victoria Moore. It is the story of a man who conquered not only in the ring but outside of the squared circle where, mayhap, it counts for most, morally if not financially. It is a sort of dime-novel thriller that will doubtless please many of the admirers of the Fordham athlete, star football player, oarsman, boxer, baseball star, track man, etc. In brief, George starts as a waster but reforms because he falls in love with the pure cabaret performer, Peggy Shaw, who in the past has explained so eloquently through Pathe why and how so many of the world's most popular songs are written. A punch on the jaw makes him see the light. He determines to get into the physical condition where he cannot be summarily ejected from a night club.

He is framed in the first important fight. A blackjack blow causes a loss of memory. In a sanitarium he keeps up his physical training and when a fall from the flying wings restores his memory he runs away to save his mother from office-building scrubbing, his sweetheart from a worse fate at the hands of the arch villain and ultimately to win the world heavy-weight title. That's all.

The Cast: George Walsh, Peggy Shaw, Bradley Barker, Mildred Heardon, Martha Petelle, William G. Nally, Ivan Linow.

THEME: Waster who reforms and wins world's heavyweight pugilistic title. Melodrama.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Two prize fight sequences. Walsh's appealing acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Walsh's growing fame. Constantly increasing interest in athletics.

DRAWING POWER: Good in one-day or neighborhood houses.

Length, 5,790 feet. Released February 15.
Produced by and distributed by Excellent (Samuel Zierler) Pictures Corp.

The Princess on Broadway

Tale of a Waitress Who Made Good

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE heroine (Pauline Garon) slung hash in a cheap restaurant. Serving two chorines she herself became ambitious for a stage career. This she was able to realize through the friendship of the hero, Johnny Walker, who had part interest in a theatrical producing firm. A season on the road in one night stands and she returned to New York. Posing as a titled Russian she is given the star part in a Broadway musical-comedy that goes over. Then she is taken up by Ethel Clayton, who is "in society." Her son is the backer of the heroine's show and interested in her, but honestly and not in any left-handed manner. Mother has a penchant for night courts and women of the street. But one night Pauline's sister is one of the prisoners brought in from a raid. She is, of course, quite innocent, a victim of untoward circumstances. But inasmuch as Pauline has to acknowledge her and also her non-Russian but East Side heritage the society marriage is all off. It is alright, though, because Johnny has loved her all the time and gladly takes her off Harold's hands. The latter sees the light too late.

It is a sort of servant girl's romance of the stage which will doubtless please the unexacting in pictures. But it cannot, by any stretch of the imagination, be called real or true to life. It shows its "Dream World Magazine" story origin at all times. Several quite capable and well-known players are engaged in acting it out. What little humor there is is supplied by Neely Edwards masquerading as a taxi-cab driver.

The Cast: Pauline Garon, Dorothy Dwan, Johnny Walker, Harold Miller, Ethel Clayton, Neely Edwards, Ernest Woods. Author, Ethel Donahey. Scenarist, Doris Schroeder. Director, Dallas Fitzgerald.

THEME: Cheap restaurant waitress' rise to theatrical fame.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Evenly balanced cast. Glamor that always accompanies back-stage glimpse of theatrical life.

DRAWING POWER: Fair.

Stark Love

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

KARL BROWN has done a fine thing in picturing for the screen the mountaineers of North Carolina and Tennessee. The most obvious comment is that it belongs in the same category with "Moana" and "Nanook," by that master craftsman, Robert Flaherty, and the Persian trek across desert, mountain and plain of "Grass." It is one of those achievements in the moving picture world that insures a more or less enduring fame for the man who had the vision and the courage to do it, and this regardless of whether he ever does another piece of work in his life. As important sociologically and scientifically as the illustrious trinity which preceded it, there is the inevitable thought, on the part of a trade reviewer particularly, whether it will prove to be good "box office." Frankly I hesitate to venture an opinion; probably it will, it must, enjoy a great success d'estime, but it is a question just as it was of the others whether the great paying public will welcome it in sufficient numbers to make it a real money-maker. I rather doubt it. Yet it has an intensely human story, slight though it be, that should hold the majority of theatregoers even if they do not realize the wonder of the perfect naturalness of the people and the scenes thrown on the screen.

The Cast: Forrest James, Helen Munday, Silas Miracle, Reb Grogan. Director and author, Karl Brown. Adaptor, Walter Woods. Cameraman, James Murray.

THEME: Conflict between father and son for same girl. A study of mountain people untouched by civilization.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Vividness of the manner in which the everyday life of these people is depicted. Its naturalness of setting and characters. The photography. Amazing histrionic ability of the actors.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Story of how Brown conceived and carried out his project.

DRAWING POWER: Should be excellent but will it be?

Length, 6,000 feet. Release date, not determined.

Nobody's Widow

Weak Story; Excess Footage; Names Will Help

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THE presence in the cast of such box-office names as Leatrice Joy and Charles Ray constitute your best selling angle for this production whose chief fault is its extreme length—extreme because the story doesn't warrant it and could have been told in two reels. The absence of about fifteen hundred feet of film would help materially as, projected in a length of 6700 feet in the theatre in which reviewed, it was evident that, after viewing several anti-climaxes, the audience was becoming restless. Everyone and everything connected with the picture did yeoman service, but they didn't have enough to work with.

The best sequence in this tale of the trials and tribulations of a newly married couple is the burlesque bit contributed by Ray and Phyllis Haver. Miss Haver gives a highly exaggerated account (pictorially) of the events preceding the discovery of Ray in her room by Miss Joy, who, in the story, is Ray's wife. You see Ray had married Leatrice in reel one and spent the rest of the footage explaining awkward situations, one arising through the turning up of a former girl friend who insisted on a last kiss when informed he was married, which the wife witnessed, and later playing cats-paw for Miss Haver, who was trying to pique her fiancé. It will click if cut.

The Cast: Leatrice Joy (starred), Charles Ray, Phyllis Haver, David Butler, Dot Farley, Fritzi Ridgeway, Charles West. Author, Avery Hopwood. Director, Donald Crisp.

THEME: Husband and wife, estranged because of seeming infelicity of husband, are brought together after explanations.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The sets and gowns worn by female leads. The burlesque bit by Ray and Miss Haver.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease the title. Use press sheet posters and ad cuts.

DRAWING POWER: Should prove fair for middle class patrons.

Distributed by Producers' Distributing Corp.

Tom Tyler in Amusing Vehicle

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE second-string Western star of F.B.O.—it being granted that Fred Thomson is first—Tom Tyler, has quite an amusing and interesting vehicle in this picture based on William Wallace Cooke's story, "Knight of the Range." It just bursts with plot and counterplot.

Tyler is discovered at the opening reading the tale of King Arthur's Court given to him by Peggy Montgomery, daughter of the ranchman, Jack Richardson, by whom Tom is employed as a cow-puncher. Down the road comes "Doc Knight" (Barney Furey) an itinerant medicine man. His aid is a negro encased in a suit of armor. Peggy's father has brought back from San Francisco a self-confessed millionaire, whose marriage to Peggy he quite approves, not knowing that the millionaire is a crook. That he and we learn later when he tries to press his unwilling attentions on Peggy in the deserted cabin. There is also wandering around a real bad man for whom a warrant is out. Pursued by the sheriff this bad 'un corrals the suit of armor. Discarded, this suit is then put on by hero Tyler that he may get to the side of his beloved. Love's Greatest Mistake

Liberty's Frederic Arnold Kummer Serial Filmed.

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

WITH a quotation from Henri de Balzac, the gifted French novelist, it is explained that the title means "for doubt to enter into love." It is this which provides the motive for the picture, the doubt on the part of the hero as to the heroine's morality. Not enough that he is willing to condone her theoretical past with the Wall Street villain, the fact that he thinks she had such a past is enough to alienate her and drive her almost into the arms of the man who can carelessly bestow opal necklaces on the lady, or ladies, of his choice. I say "almost" advisedly because the young architect arrives by one of those curious coincidences at the rich man's home to receive an award at the same time that the girl has made up her mind that it really doesn't matter after all; she might as well get the price her good looks entitle her to.

It is not an exalted type of picture, but unquestionably is possessed of interest. The tale is typically big-city-ish, of the girl who nearly went wrong but stopped at the brink. The secondary villain is not one of the old brand but a polished, courteous man-of-the-world who happens to be unhappily Park Avenue-y married and consequently somewhat handicapped in the matter of honorable attentions. In other words, he and the other characters are human beings and recognizable as such.

THEME: Country girl in big city tempted by the rich man's proferred luxury and her moral triumph.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Convincing atmosphere of story. Good comedy touches.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Logically the Liberty Magazine angle. Young Sutherland's growing fame.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 6,007 feet. Released February 12.
Produced and distributed by Famous Players-Lasky.

Hi-Jacking Rustlers

Average Western—For Small Houses

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS production should have no trouble getting by with the patrons of the neighborhood theatres as it has that which still makes the Western popular—action, comedy and a hard-riding, hard-shooting manly chap in the role of the hero. Though the "critics" may decry the lack of originality in theme in this type of picture it still holds true that the not-too-discerning patron still gets a kick out of the "hero, heroine, the mortgaged land and the bad man who steals cattle but suffers in the end for his misdeeds." Naturally children will prove your best audiences but, reviewed during a regular theatre performance, it was noticed that the youngsters' enthusiasm proved contagious as the older portion of the spectators rooted just as hard for the hero, in a quiet manner, as did the juveniles vocally.

A detailed description of the story would prove superfluous; suffice it to say that it has all the ingredients seen in productions of this classification during the past and which, no doubt, will be in evidence in future efforts. And why not, when the hero's trouncing of the villain at the end of the fifth reel still makes 'em blister their hands with applause.

The Cast: Jack Perrin, Josephine Hill, Billy Lamar, Leonard Trainor, Bud Osborne, Al Ferguson, Walter Shumway, Starlight (horse), Rex (dog). Directed by Ben Cohn.

THEME: Hero circumvents cattle rustlers and bank robbers. There is a romance.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Perrin's riding and performance of boy and dog. The fast action throughout.

EXPLOITATION HIGHLIGHTS: Play up fast action thriller. The title means nothing.

Produced by Ben Wilson. Released by Rayart Pictures.
Length, 4,935 feet. Released November, 1926.

Husband Hunters

Mating Time for the Chorus Ladies

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

TIFFANY has here a sophisticated and interesting picture. It deals with the members of the chorus whose bible is not the social register, but Dun and Bradstreet's rating. The eligibility of men met at parties is determined by their financial standing. In this rather sordid pursuit of husbands—not confined, understandably, to the ladies of the chorus, but practiced rather generally by so-called society—amusing experiences ensue. The screen marriage, for instance, of Mae Busch, the ringleader of the chorines, to Walter Hiers. The fat comedian proves to be not a millionaire, but a poor relative bearing the honored name of Jones. Duane Thompson, on the other hand, draws a prize although she had been indifferent because she thought her man was a poor employee of the factory he owned. Jean Arthur, the heroine, gets Charles Delaney, or he gets her, after she has narrowly escaped "going wrong" with the millionaire villain, Robert Cain.

"Husband Hunters" is comedy-melodrama but mighty good melodrama. The sphere which it deals with, the stage, is always interesting if well done and this is no exception. It is an amusing, interesting story well directed and acted.

The Cast: Mae Busch, Charles Delaney, Jean Arthur, Walter Hiers, Duane Thompson, Mildred Harris, Robert Cain, Jimmy Harrison, Nigel Barrie, James Mack, Marcin Asher, Alfred Fisher. Director, John G. Adolfi. Author, Douglas Bronston. Continuity, Esther Shulkin. Film Editor, James C. McKay. Art Editor, Edwin B. Willis. Cameramen, Jos. A. Dubray and Steve Norton.

THEME: Rich husband, seeking chorus ladies. Villain who attempts seduction of heroine, but is foiled.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Comedy element. Musical comedy production scenes. Good direction and acting.

DRAWING POWER: Excellent.

Length, 5,600 feet. Released February 15.
Produced and distributed by Tiffany.

The Man from Hardpan

Leo Maloney Inherits Ranch and Girl

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

FORD BEEBE, responsible for most of Leo Maloney's stories, even if the star does direct them, is entitled to quite a bit of credit. Invariably he gives a new twist and evolves new or novel situations that make the Maloney westerns more interesting than the general run. The star, too, has a likeable personality that invariably goes over. The combination achieves its usual result with "The Man from Hardpan." It will maintain Maloney's standing. Mention should be made of an excellent characterization by Rosa Gore as a hardened, disappointed servant.

Leo is a drifter until he learns he has inherited half of the estate of a friend of his father's and the management of the ranch. The newspaper story which informs him of his good fortune also prints a half-tone of the daughter inheriting the other half. En route to the ranch he is knocked senseless by two escaped convicts seeking revenge for a beating administered them in a cheap lunch room. Eugenia comes to succor Maloney. The papers proving his identity have been stolen by the highwaymen. The servant woman (Rosa Gore) swears her own son (Murdock MacQuarrie) is the heir to the estate and that Leo is masquerading, being really the escaped convict for whom the authorities are looking.

The Cast: Leo Maloney, Eugenia Gilbert, Rosa Gore, Murdock MacQuarrie, Paul Hurst, Ben Corbett, Albert Hart. Author, Ford Beebe. Director, Leo Maloney. Photographer, Vernon Walker.

THEME: Western. Hero-Wanderer inherits management and half interest in ranch. Escaped convict takes his place but ultimately is thwarted.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Leo Maloney's popularity. Above assets.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 5,814 feet. Released March 6.

New York and New Jersey

"IT'S an ill wind that blows nobody good" — or words to that effect—and that goes for last week's storm that ripped up sections of Long Beach and caused havoc among shipping on the Sound and along the Jersey coast. Yes, that same ill wind that threw up waves with such force down at Avon-by-the-Sea, was the means of curtailing the weekly butcher bill of one of our well-known New Jersey film men, one Eddie Carroll by name. Early on the morning of the storm, armed with an idea and a big basket, Eddie combed Avon beach and managed to collect as many crabs, lobsters and clams as could be comfortably carried back home. After presenting the first collection to the wife and kiddies, Eddie went back and filled the basket up again. The force of the waves had thrown the shellfish far up on the beach and left them too stunned to withstand fast-working Eddie's assault.

Coincident with the announcement that he would open the Regent Theatre, 81st Street and 1st Avenue, New York City, Jos. Steinkritz also let go some information concerning the approaching marriage of his son to Miss Edith Slutzkin. It is reported that Brandt Bros. Enterprises have taken over the Small & Strausberg Terminal Theatre, Dean Street and 4th Avenue, Brooklyn. The Terminal is comparatively new, having opened but a little over a year ago, and its acquisition by William and Harry Brandt gives these two well-known exhibitors another fine type of neighborhood house for their fast growing circuit.

After having two film room fires in as many weeks, due to absence of sprocket holes and brittle film, James Samon, proprietor of the Sunshine Theatre, Coney Island Avenue, is somewhat peevish, and can one blame him for feeling that way?

There are not many exhibitors who can step out on the stage of their theatre and warble a popular song, but there's one over in Jersey who can do it any time—and how! That's Stanley Sobelson, who, with his associates, operates a string of houses in the northern part of the State.

Milton had a narrow escape a few nights ago when a speeding auto almost knocked him into an uptown gutter.

It is reported that Al Harsten has given up the operation of the Metropolis Theatre, 138th Street, New York City.

Al Moley and his side-kick, Eddie Seider, are busy boys these days between taking care of film deliveries at the Prudential and promoting theatre novelty acts. Another burden on Al's mind is the future line up of the New York Giants. It seems that John McGraw has not fully confided his summer plans to Al, as in the past, and it is quite possible that these two are not at present on what might be called the friendliest of terms. The transfer of Frankie Frisch is said to be the cause of the alleged bitterness between these two old pals.

ANOTHER VIEWPOINT ON EFFECT OF APERTURE SIZE ON

Screen Illumination

It seems as though the editor of this department were continually "putting his foot into it." Not content with having stirred up things in other directions during the past year or two, he has now become involved in an argument—or let us say difference of opinion—with Arthur Gray, chief projectionist of the Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass., who, we feel quite sure, needs no introduction to the majority of projectionists of the country.

Gray, in eight pages of typewritten matter, takes us strongly to task in the matter of our statements on effect of aperture size on screen illumination as published in the January 7th and 14th issues of the News. It appears that he holds radically different views on this subject of aperture size and his patience with us has become so exhausted that he can no longer restrain himself from "showing us up," good and proper.

But, above all, he is magnanimous and gives more evidence of being the perfect gentleman we know him to be, from personal contact. He allows us a loophole through which to escape in case we wish to backwater and beat a retreat, by claiming that we knew all along that certain factors affecting the validity of our statements had been neglected by us purposely, in order to establish the point we had in mind.

We Will Stand by our Guns

We shall not, however, take the advantage of Gray's kind offer, although we appreciate the spirit which prompted it. We are willing to stand by our guns, and if proven wrong will not hesitate to acknowledge defeat instead of attempting to crawl out of it.

There is nothing we appreciate so much as a fair and square argument, and despite the fact that Gray is at an obvious disadvantage in that he must first send his written arguments to the editor, we shall see to it that Marquis of Queensbury rules govern throughout, so that the best man may win.

As for judges—the projectionists at large will have to serve in that capacity, since what will follow in these columns will represent the opinions of two men, each of whom hold different views on the same subject. A subject, which, by the way, is of extreme importance, since if the editor's views are correct, they will eliminate from consideration one of four factors, which, until now, has been considered the principal one governing the limiting of illumination of the picture screen. These factors now stand as follows:

1. Brightness of screen.
2. Size of Aperture.
3. Diameter of Projection Lens.
4. Projection Distance.

It is our contention that item No. 2, the Size of Aperture, has no bearing on screen illumination whatever, and therefore, should be eliminated from the above listing. But Gray holds other views and insists that we are all wet and says that the size of the aperture will always remain one of the principal governing factors of screen illumination.

Our only regret in this whole matter is that limited space makes it impossible for us to present both sides of this fracas in one issue to avoid breaking the trend of thought, which usually results from splitting an article up into two or more sections.

Nevertheless, it is the only thing we can do under the conditions, so we will have to make the best of it. We will, therefore, print Gray's complete argument "as is" in two sections, and make our reply to his arguments in one or two following sections.

Other Views Appreciated

After all has been said and done on both sides, we will appreciate hearing from other projectionists as to which of the two views they hold. Gray's article seems to be complete and self-contained, but if more space is required for him to elaborate on certain phases, we will not hesitate to grant it. The importance of the subject is sufficient to receive the necessary space wherein to arrive at a definite conclusion once and for all.

It is far better to settle one thing definitely, especially such an important one as this, than to leave the question suspended in mid-air to be argued over later without arriving at a satisfactory solution.

Gray presents many arguments, which will call for careful thought and serious study on the part of the readers. He writes in simple, direct fashion, with no verbiage, so there should be no trouble in following his trend of thought. There are several instances in which we believe he should have gone to greater length in explaining, or rather, stating, things, but we think that he wished to limit his article to a reasonable length and so found it necessary to introduce brevity.

A case in point is his citation of the stereopticon form of spotlight, wherein he makes no mention of the diameter of objective lens used in each of the cases. It is vitally necessary to mention lens diameters in each case, but his wording is such as to lead us to believe that the diameter is not changed but remains the same for each case. Unless we hear from Gray to the contrary on this point, we shall assume this to be so.

He might also have strengthened his argument by resorting to the use of diagrams, but as his write-up is exceptionally clear and lucid, we believe that the readers in general will have no trouble in following him.

In the early part of the article reference is made to another correspondent, Joseph M. Van Dyke, Antigo, Wis., whose letter was published in the February 11th, issue.

Without further ado, we will publish the first half of Gray's article. Follow it closely and be sure to save each issue so that you will be able to put them all together for a complete review of both sides of the argument when it is all over.

Arthur Gray's Views

"I suppose that if I am foolish enough to become involved with you in a controversy on anything pertaining to light rays, or to light-ray action, I am due for the literary licking of my young career. Nevertheless, I find myself unable to resist the temptation to cross pens a bit with you on the subject treated within your article in the January 7th and 14th issues of the News.

"If only a certain Mr. Dennison and a Mr. Hill were here with me now, I should feel assured of having their moral support, if nothing more substantial, and should act accordingly. As it is, I must go it alone, and woe betide me if I slip.

"I realize that in your article you have purposely sacrificed precision of statement in favor of readability, but I fear that in so doing you have treated some phases of it inadequately, and have thereby conveyed a somewhat different meaning. Otherwise, I cannot satisfactorily explain to myself certain things upon which we most certainly seem to hold different views—and, in the hope of clarifying these certain things lies the sole excuse for this outburst.

Disagrees With Editor's Views

"Thus, I beg to most tactfully and humbly differ with your most able presentation of the subject, and most flatly disagree with the statement of your correspondent (Van Dyke—Ed.), that 'all this talk about increasing the size of the aperture to raise the screen intensity is the bunk; it can't be did.' If by this is meant that under practical standards of projection it is impossible to increase the size of the aperture without raising havoc with present limitations of film, lenses and projection standards, then, of course, he is right, and nothing more remains to be said on the subject.

"But my understanding of the matter is that we are all assuming that it IS possible to increase the size of the aperture, but that

Unrivaled screen quality

The photographic superiority of Eastman Film—zealously safeguarded by Kodak Research Laboratory experts—naturally makes prints on Eastman Positive Film from negatives on Eastman Negative Film unrivaled in screen quality.

And, since the public appreciates screen quality, insistence on prints on Eastman Film will have a favorable box office reaction.

Prints on Eastman have the black-lettered identification "Eastman" and "Kodak" in the transparent margin. Look for it.

Photo shows the new Powers high intensity lamp, which, the manufacturers claim, is the result of extensive redesigning, largely on account of the demand for higher amperage arcs

Powers Introduces New Model H. I. Lamp

Meets Demand for Higher Amperage Arcs and Incorporates Many Improvements

THE Powers' High Intensity Lamp, which originally was known as the G. E. Lamp, and manufactured by the General Electric Company. Later this lamp was called the Powers' High Intensity and manufactured in improved form by the Powers' Division of the International Projector Corporation. It now has undergone extensive redesigning, a number of important changes and improvements having been made.

The earlier lamps were extensively used and gave satisfactory service while medium currents were employed but the demand for higher current ratings has made necessary many changes in construction. The first lamps put out by Powers were installed in lamphouses originally designed for the ordinary arc and this created many annoying difficulties and limitations. As now designed, Powers' High Intensity Lamps may be operated up to a maximum capacity with an assurance of satisfaction.

Ample for Heavy Duty

The new lamphouse has been designed with ample allowance for the heavy duty the lamp is called upon to perform. Ventilation has received full consideration—a 6″ stovepipe vent has been provided in the top for connection to a standard 6″ vent flue to the outer air. The lamphouse is 26″ long by 26″ high by 15″ wide over-all. Extra large doors of double thickness, ventilated between the surfaces, when opened leave the lamp entirely accessible, ready for removal or cleaning. A heavy wire mesh inserted in the base of the lamphouse affords a ready and continuous flow of cool air circulating at all times through the lamphouse, serving to keep the apparatus moderately cool.

The condenser mount of the new lamphouse is of the adjustable type. It is designed so that the condensers may be adjusted vertically and laterally, giving accurate alignment. This is an important patented feature of this mount. Additional adjustment has been provided for the spacing of condensers so that condensers of extreme thickness, such as the 6½″ G. E. fused quartz, may be accommodated.

Can Use 5″ Condenser

The inside dowser has been continued to protect the collector lens from becoming coated with white ash when the arc is struck. An auxiliary dowser of heavy construction has been added to the end of the condenser mount cone in order than change-over attachments may be readily placed in use. This cone is of very large proportions, being over 5″ in diameter at the point at which it connects to the condenser mount assembly. This enables the projectionist to use a 5″ front condenser, which size condenser, it has been shown, materially increases the illumination and gives even light on the screen. Extra heavy door latches have been provided.

Although the lamphouse has been improved in a number of important particulars it is the lamp which has received major consideration. The improvements made upon the lamp are here briefly described:

A new type revolving carriage assembly has been adopted, the rear bearing of which has been extended through the entire rear support, to eliminate wear at this point. The large beveled gear has been made integral with the sleeve which formerly was slipped over two set-screws, which makes for easy assembly and assures alignment of these important parts. The vertical bearing in the rear support casting has been lengthened, giving a greater bearing surface and accurate alignment of the vertical feed shaft. An additional bearing of very rugged construction has been added to the rear of the lamp to support the negative feed shaft beyond the negative feed gear and driving clutch.

In former lamps the asbestos guide for the positive carbon did not function perfectly and efficiently in all regards. This old guide has been discontinued and the guide for the positive carbon in the front assembly of the lamp is now formed in the front of the revolving carriage. Wear at this point has been greatly reduced as the carbon revolving carriage and guide for the positive carbon now revolve as a complete unit. By this method of construction, alignment of all parts is assured.

New Feed Assembly

One of the most important features of the new construction is a new positive feed assembly. The older type of detent spring has been entirely discontinued and in its place has been mounted a flexible attachment by means of which the positive carbon is accurately and positively fed a predetermined distance at each revolution of the revolving carriage. This new assembly is adjustable so that the rate of feed may be varied for different diameter carbons.

Extra heavy positive contact shoes have been provided to carry excessively heavy current. Ample contact surface makes it unnecessary to put undue tension on the carbon in order to secure sufficient contact. These contact shoes are protected by a baffle plate of heat-resisting material.

The negative assembly has been considerably reinforced and a new carbon clamp of rugged construction added, eliminating the danger of bending this part when tightening the negative carbon.

Greater Forward Adjustment

Current is conducted to the negative carbon by means of solid silver corrugated connector strips. This type of construction eliminates the danger of the burning off of the negative contact cable. The new lamphouse makes it possible to secure over a half inch greater forward adjustment, and with the additional adjustment provided in the condenser mount assembly, a perfect spot may be obtained.

In earlier types of high intensity equipment the slight adjustment obtainable could be secured only by turning the forward and backward adjusting screw many times. This adjusting screw itself was in close connection with the negative feed shaft and thereby interfered considerably with its operation. In the new lamp the backward and forward adjusting screw has been moved to the left almost 3″, thereby leaving plenty of room for manipulation. This new adjusting screw has but five threads per inch. The backward and forward adjustment of the lamp within the lamphouse may now be almost instantly made. New positive and negative feed handles have been provided, the positive has two cranks upon it for speedy adjustment. The negative feed crank has been made much more rugged and of considerably greater length.

Inquiries and Comments

you hold there can be no gain in screen intensity by so doing. Am I right? I think I am, inasmuch as you used a specific case of an aperture larger than standard (the Widescope process) to substantiate your argument that no increase in screen illumination followed.

"You also stated a condition where a standard sized aperture could be reduced to an area only one-sixteenth of an inch square without resulting in any decrease in screen intensity. Well, maybe yes, and perhaps no. It all depends. There is a 'dark gentleman in the lumber' in both of these cases, and while you are perfectly aware of their presence, you have neglected to tell us anything about them. Right or wrong, probably wrong, here is my own understanding of the whole matter:

Aperture and Spot of Standard Size

"Let us start from a condition where the aperture is of standard dimensions, approximately 39/32 inches wide and .6795 inches high, and with a spot of customary size, say, one and seven-eighth inches in diameter. I think you will agree that by extending the area of the light source (any type) and that without appreciably affecting its intrinsic brightness, it is a relatively easy problem to form a spot at the aperture that is larger than normal and still retain the same intensity in foot candles as is obtained with the smaller, standard size, spot. It is, however, of no avail to do this, as a large proportion of the spot will be incident on the fooling plate and unavailable for screen illumination.

"However, it is a fact that we can quite easily obtain a spot larger than present usage dictates and of the same intensity. Being larger in area and equal in intensity, it will have more lumens. More lumens mean a potential increase in screen illumination, but in actual existing projection practice they remain a potentiality and nothing more.

"Were it possible to concentrate these added lumens into a spot of the standard size and thus obtain an increased intensity at the aperture, an immediate corresponding increase in screen intensity would follow.

"But, and here is the gist of the matter, in thus concentrating the spot, a change in the focal length of the condenser lens, or of the reflecting mirror, or a re-alignment of the 'working distances,' or a combination of these things is necessary. This, in turn, entails an increased transmission loss, which leaves us with a spot the same size as before, but with no greater intensity. Furthermore, it is obtained only with a higher amperage and at a correspondingly greater cost and is, therefore, less efficient.

"Finding that labor along these lines proves an unsuccessful method of obtaining an increase in screen illumination, we will revert to the condition where we succeeded in obtaining a spot having the same intensity as the standard one, but which, being larger in area, has more lumens.

"Now, if the aperture is enlarged sufficiently to utilize the same proportionate area of this larger spot that it utilized in conventional practice with the standard aperture and customary spot, we will most certainly succeed in passing more lumens of light through the aperture. This being so, I think we can get them, or a larger percentage of them, to the screen. If the screen image is not changed in size, and there is no reason to change it, as we are concerned with intensity rather than with dimensions, it is obvious that there will be a greater number of lumens incident on the same screen area than before, and consequently, the intensity in foot candles will be greater.

Reports Lively Business in Equipment Field

According to recent reports from the plant of the J. E. McAuley Mfg. Co., Chicago, manufacturers of Peerless reflector arcs, there is exceptional activity in this end of the equipment field and a night shift has been added at their factory.

This company has published a new booklet on the Peerless arc lamp which any projectionist or theatre owner may have by addressing the firm.

Hallberg Issues Booklet on Reflector Arcs

J. H. Hallberg, pioneer inventor of motion picture apparatus, who has lately reentered the field with the introduction of new equipment, has announced the publication of a bulletin which contains full instructions for installing and operating Hallberg reflector arc lamps and motor generators.

The booklet, which is but a short time off the press, will be of benefit to any present or prospective user of Hallberg reflector arcs and generators.

Exhibitors who wish to obtain a copy of this bulletin may do so by writing J. H. Hallberg, New York City.

Studio Briefs

Paula Howard, a former Hollywood school girl who was recently given her first opportunity by Marie Prevost in one of that Metropolitan star's releases, was chosen by Nils Olaf Chrisander, European director with De Mille-Metropolitan, for one of the principal roles in "The Heart Thief," starring Joseph Schildkraut with Lya de Putti.

Three character actors of the stage and screen have joined W. C. Fields' support in the Paramount star's new starring picture now under way at the Astoria studio of the company. They are Frederick Burton, Frank Evans and J. Roy Bennett. Others in important roles in the Fields comedy are Mary Brian, Claud Buchanan, Hattie Delaro and Barney Raskle. Gregory La Cava, author of the story, is directing Fields.

Flora Finch, one of the screen's first comediennes, will do picture work in California for the first time in many years. Hunt Stromberg, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executive, announced her addition last week to the cast of "Captain Salvation," the Cosmopolitan production which John S. Robertson is directing. Lars Hanson is playing the title role. Pauline Starke and Marceline Day are the two leading ladies.

Charles Athloff has joined the cast of "The Holy Terror," the John Golden stage production, which was just started on its way to the screen at the Fox Films West Coast studio with Buck Jones as the starring player.

Howard Bretherton has been signed to a long-term contract by the Warner Bros. because of his direction of Rin-Tin-Tin's "Hills of Kentucky." His next production has not been assigned.

Claud Buchanan, one of the Paramount Junior stars, has been selected for the juvenile lead in W. C. Fields' new picture, "The Timid Soul." He will play opposite Mary Brian, whose role is that of daughter to the star. Buchanan has played small parts in various productions made at the Long Island studio, but this is his first important assignment.

Photography has been finished on "The Price of Honor," one of Columbia's present season pictures, and Director Edward H. Griffith is now busy cutting and editing the production into shape. Malcolm McGregor and Dorothy Revier handle the romantic parts, while William V. Mong and Gustav von Seyffertitz contribute dramatic portrayals. Erville Alderson and Dan Mason conclude the cast.

James T. Donahue, scenarist of "What Price Glory," "Two Arabian Knights," "Cheating Cheaters," and other pictures, has been signed by Warner Bros. to do the script for "The Heart of Maryland," Dolores Costello's next starring film. Alan Crosland is scheduled to direct this production.

Flash, a handsome cream-colored horse which is considered a real equine find, has been "signed" to a long-term contract by Paramount. For the last two years the horse has been trained by Bill Hurkey, rider, and has been under the care of Jack Moore, foreman of the Lasky ranch. Flash will make his debut under his new contract in "Arizona Bound," Gary Cooper's first film as a Western star.

Hayden Talbot, journalist, has been placed under a contract which keeps his services exclusively with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company, where, for some months past, he has been a member of the scenario staff. The announcement was made following the completion of Talbot's first story, as yet untitled, for the studio. He also collaborated on "Buttons."

The role of heavy in "Arizona Bound" will be played by Jack Dougherty, who starts work in a few days, when the new Paramount Western will be placed into production.

The second feminine lead with Babe Ruth and Anna Q. Nilsson in "Babe Comes Home" will be played by Ethel Shannon, who was recently starred in a series by an independent producer. Wid Gunning is producing the picture for First National. Ted Wilde is directing.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer started production on "The Thirteenth Chair," a mystery story, on February 13, with Chester Franklin at the megaphone. Lionel Barrymore is featured in the new mystery drama and the cast includes Jacqueline Gadsen, Charles Delaney, Polly Moran and Fred Kelsey. The story is an original by Franklin and Douglas Furber.

The cast of Director Rowland V. Lee's present Paramount assignment, "The Whirlwind of Youth," was completed this week with the engagement of Carol Holloway, Tom Costello and Michael Dark for the remaining roles. The list of players, headed by Lois Moran, now includes Donald Keith, Alyce Mills, Gera Veronina, Larry Kent, Charles Lane and Gareth Hughes. Location trips are now being made to Pasadena and Beverly Hills. The principal location trip scheduled for next week will take the unit to Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Kate Corbaley, scenarist and author of "The Fire Brigade," has been given a new contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Miss Corbaley has been identified with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer scenario staff for the past two years.

The completed cast for "Too Many Crooks," Fred Newmeyer's picture which marks Mildred Davis' return to the films, now consists of George Bancroft, El Brendel, Betty Francisco, Gayne Whitman, Otto Matiesen, William V. Mong, John St. Polis and Tom Ricketts.

Camera work on the screen version of "The Poor Nut," which Jess Smith is producing for First National release, started this week at the Hollywood Tech Art studio. Incidentally there are about six Irishmen taking part in the production of Elliot Nugent's stage play. Jack Mulhall has the title role, Charlie Murray is one of the featured players, Cornelius Keefe is another member of the cast, as are Maurice Ryan and Paul Kelly. Then Director Richard Wallace has taken on Jimmy O'Shea as his assistant.

George Fitzmaurice has filmed initial scenes on his first production for First National under his new contract, "The Tender Hour." The story is laid in Paris and Russia before the war and the picture will be rich in colorful scenes. In addition to Ben Lyon and Billie Dove, the cast includes Alec B. Francis, Montagu Love, Laska Winter and others.

Tom O'Brien, Joe O'Neil and Johnny Mack have joined the cast of Jackie Coogan's "The Bugle Call." Members of the supporting cast are Mary Todd, Mary Jane Irving, Nancy Price and Nelson McDowell.

F.B.O. has engaged Peter Milne to write an adaptation and continuity for a motion picture to be based on the story "The Great Mail Robbery" by John Johns. This title will not be used for the picture, according to an announcement from F.B.O. It will be included among the Gold Bond series for the 1927-28 schedule.

F.B.O. has purchased for adaptation to the screen "A Game in the Brush," by Georges Surdez. It is a love story of the South Sea replete with romantic and melodramatic incidents. It will be one of F.B.O.'s Gold Bonds for the season of 1927-28.

Herbert Rawlinson has been cast for his first "father role" as Jackie Coogan's dad in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Bugle Call." Claire Windsor is the only other player so far chosen for the film, production on which is scheduled to start this week under Edward Sedgwick's direction.

"Diamonds in the Rough," the next Milton Sills vehicle, will be produced by Ray Rockett. The discovery of the diamond fields in South America and the rush that followed will be one of the features of the production for which Mary O'Hara is writing the scenario. Effective scenic backgrounds are being sought and sets constructed for interiors. Mr. Rockett is now assembling a supporting cast. Charles Brabin will direct.

Robert Dillon affixed his signature this week to a contract whereby he becomes a member of the Warner Bros. writing staff for the coming season. His first work will be on "The New Boy," Syd Chaplin's next starring vehicle for the Warners. He is now at the Del Monte studio where the story is being whipped into shape.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Cruise of the Jasper B"—Producers Distributing Corp., London

Norwood Weekly Herald: "'The Cruise of the Jasper B' has been made on big lines—on the same lines, in fact, as the super-productions. The buccaneering spirit which gives the film such an atmosphere of romance and adventure, has seldom been more successfully captured."

Yorkshire Budget: "The amusing screen version of Don Marquis' story is pulsing with thrills from start to finish."

Sunday Express: "America beats the world in comedy and 'The Cruise of the Jasper B' is one of America's best."

"The Fire Brigade" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Madison Theatre, Detroit

Free Press: "The Madison Theatre, a fire-bug's paradise. . . . Any real fire fan can go there and absorb the whole thing without being emotionally fagged out for weeks ought to submit to a psychopathic examination. . . . It is thrilling throughout, has comedy and pathos and tragedy . . . Taken as a whole it is excellent. . . . Some startling technical effects have been introduced. . . . A part presented in color can only be described by the word beautiful."

Times: "'The Fire Brigade' is a thrilling number, packed with suspense and heart-throbs and glowing with good old-fashioned melodrama. . . . Almost moved to tears, so it was with the audience. They applauded each move of the hero. They shouted. They couldn't help liking it. . . . It is a gorgeous entertainment, thrilling, always and keyed to such a point as to send any number of the audience out into the street."

News: "Man, woman, or child will be unable to resist appeal. Frenzy of excitement at its opening. . . . Picture is assured of success before its career is fairly begun. . . . There have been many pictures before based on the fire-fighter, but 'The Fire Brigade' is the first to really ring the bell. . . . It is a fifth alarm in every respect. . . . A thrill that will make you jump from your seat. . . . If these scenes fail to arouse a tug at those old heart-strings, then you can label yourself as a pretty evenly balanced piece of human freight."

Mr. Cecil B. De Mille,

My dear Mr. De Mille:

I am stopping in a busy hour to thank you and your organization for the thrill of the year.

Last night I went to the Writers Club to see what I thought was to be a nice little picture of familiar pattern. To my astonishment, out of a clear sky, came what in my opinion is worthy of the extreme designation of masterpiece.

Weighing my words, I class it one of the ten best pictures I ever saw, and I find it hard to recall one which so gripped me in every foot of its progress.

Such a co-ordination of brilliant direction and forceful acting is rare indeed, with thought, imagination and fidelity to truth in every scene. I am sure the critics will rave over it.

I never saw a sample of Howard's work until last night. Hold on to him.

I hear great things of "The King of Kings."

--Renewals

A magazine boasts of the number of subscribers who renew their subscriptions when they expire. "Renewals" in large quantities furnish the magazine one of its big arguments in selling space to advertisers.

"Renewals" of contracts are a good test of any business, for they indicate satisfied customers, the best proof of a product of merit backed up by service.

Educational Pictures are showing today in practically every theatre now operating that played them seven years ago, when we began national distribution. They have played these theatres every one of these seven seasons. And to this number have been added every year a large number of other theatre accounts that have in turn become "renewals." Today they number 13,000, an impressive total.

This is the greatest testimonial exhibitors could give to any company, and we are justly proud of it. We are proud also of the fact that we can look forward to the same sort of "renewals" when our splendid program of short features for 1927-1928 is announced soon.

Fair Values for Pictures

HAMMERING down rental prices has been practiced pretty generally ever since the industry started. It arises, of course, from the buyer-seller situation; and it will go on indefinitely.

FROM all branches of the industry, Motion Picture News has received many complimentary expressions about which appeared in a recent issue. The next appearance of The Showman will be in the issue of April 1. Many interesting editorial features are in preparation, including a complete technical article on the Movietone.

But there is a healthy buyer-seller situation, where the bargaining is confined to the box-office value of the product; and an unhealthy and dangerous buyer-seller situation, where the buyer takes unfair advantage.

This latter type of buyer injures the whole economic scheme of the industry. What he should justly pay, and doesn't, some other exhibitor will have to pay, who shouldn't.

This sort of thing seems to be gaining some headway. We hear of circuits, with big purchasing power, who pay too little for films, because the producers are not in position to build against them. On the other hand, if the producer threatens to become a theatre competitor to the seller, or is one already, the story is quite different.

The producer is entitled to a fair return for his picture, which he won't get if the circuit bargains on the basis of whether or not it is afraid of the producer.

It is also true, as Joseph P. Kennedy pointed out last week, that big-scale financing of theatres by producers not already in exhibition, is not for the good of the business.

In other words, the theatre situation seems pretty well taken care of. Let's give a thought for a moment to pictures.

The first thing to remember is, it seems to us, that the public cares not who owns the theatres so long as the pictures are good. Now, the pictures cannot continue to be good, if they don't get fair rental prices from the theatre.

Everybody is proud of the fine theatres that are built and building. Nobody for a moment will attempt to discount their great importance in the film scheme.

But, just as surely, it will not do, in our belief, to lose sight of the fact that the picture supply must be kept steady in quality; and must earn for producers fair prices in keeping with the value of the product.

Putting up artificial barriers against picture values is not for the good of the business. We point out the danger because it has come to our attention recently that such practices exist with some large chains.

It does not follow that every chain underbuys. There are good chains and bad chains. The bad chain discriminates against the producers with which it is not allied, and in favor of the producers with which it is allied.

It all comes back to our oft-repeated belief that percentage is the economic and wise method of playing pictures. Because, with percentage, the public is enabled to exercise freely and without interference its judgment on pictures. The public, not the industry, is the final arbiter of picture values.

W A Johnston

ENGLAND

By William

SUMMING up the theatre situation in France it would seem, just at present, to be directly at odds with the situation here.

In this country, it is generally considered inadvisable to build a large theatre without a producer association or picture tie-in of some kind so that adequate product may be assured.

In France you cannot run a large theatre profitably on any one brand of American pictures.

An analysis is interesting:

France, as I have said, is somewhat back along the road of motion picture industrial progress. Consequently, in a general way, the theatre situation there today parallels our own of several years ago.

We can all remember easily enough the time when a "show window" theatre, that is, one run to exploit a particular output of pictures, was also a hazardous enterprise—certainly not a good theatre enterprise. It still is hazardous, in a measure.

But pictures have greatly improved.

Still, even today, the picture alone is not enough. The modern and magnificent theatre was from the beginning a public attraction. That is still more true of the present ten million dollar palaces where the luxury alone is, apparently, worth the price of admission.

Then from the beginning we added large orchestras—so that the movie palace became a great educator of music with the masses.

Then we developed the stage of the picture theatre, prologues, presentation, straight vaudeville—till recently $10,000 acts have been put on.

Now we have the Vitaphone, the Movietone and other such devices to follow.

France today has little of all this enhancement of the picture—certainly not the palatial theatre and very little in the way of music and stage appeal. In addition there is a professed desire for French pictures with French stories.

The Situation in London

In London we have a different situation.

First and importantly, American pictures are popular; so are the stars. There is no great racial gap in picture appeal.

Just here a reflection may be in order.

London audience appeal does differ, and so does it differ between all cities and countries.

We haven't so much homogeneity between our great divisions of states. And there is grave danger therefore in the standardization of theatre presentations. I believe, in fact, that along with overbuilding and, even more so, standardization is the greatest danger the American theatres are heading for today, backed as they are by such ambitious plans of theatre consolidation. There is a wide variance in taste among the peoples of this country.

To continue with London—American pictures, as I say, have drawing power. So have the British theatres. They are advanced and advancing right along. They are behind us in presentation and especially in exploitation.

The Britisher is instinctively not a publicity man. He is more inclined to avoid it. As someone says, he puts his garden in the rear of his home so that he may enjoy it the more in private. The American wants to show his off.

It is just this basic difference which may have most to do with the contrast today between the British and American branches of the industry.

A man of consequence in the British industry, a Britisher, said to me: "Somehow we don't seem to produce producers—not many."

Perhaps it's a plain lack of native showmanship. It doesn't follow that a nation may lead all lines of creative industry. For instance, we are not, in this country, very good at shipbuilding.

British Trade Better Organized

In Great Britain the problem of producer-owned theatres in key cities is to the fore. Just recently a rather foolish boycott was attempted.

We had this same row over here seven years ago. It was rated, then, as an industrial crime for a producer to operate a "show window" theatre against his exhibitor customers. Today the practice is regarded with general equanimity. In Great Britain they are not so amiable about such matters.

Just the same there are two sides to this matter. John C. Graham, Paramount's head in London, put his side to the trade in a straightforward and comprehensive manner. And I believe the British trade will work the problem out in its customary sane way. These questions are economic ones and therefore impersonal. It isn't a question of American producers versus British exhibitors. It is a trade matter in which there is an economic clash between producer and exhibitor activities and objectives.

It would seem that if the American producer finds it advisable to operate theatres—in London or anywhere—then the British producer and renter have the very same matter to consider and, perhaps, act upon.

My impression of the British trade is that it is better organized than our own. It has more solidity and sanity, a substantial personnel. They move soberly and frankly. There's less subterfuge, less politics, less fourflushing.

They don't get as excited over their own trade evolution as we do.

A. Johnston

Third of a Series of Articles Based on Personal Survey

Wherever I asked about the quota, I got pretty much the same reply: "Oh well, it will all come out in the wash. If it is right it will work. If it isn't right, it won't work out and it will then either become ineffective or it will be repealed, and a better order substituted."

In Great Britain they repeal their obnoxious and disastrous laws.

I must say that I believe a good deal of this trade soberness and solidity is due to an excellent trade press. The British trade papers are well organized, progressive and headed by capable and responsible men of film knowledge and experience. I believe too that they exert a good influence upon the lay press, which is of the utmost importance.

Everywhere I went in Western Europe I found the newspaper men of much consequence. In London George Atkinson is a power. In Paris, Boisyvon of L'Intransigeant, an important afternoon paper, and J. L. Croze, film editor of Comedia and dean of the film writers, are men of much practical knowledge and advanced thought. All these men have much to do with the critical problem of the international film industry, broad and vital as it is. It is to an extent in their hands and the hands of the trade press.

It should also be said here that a lot of film men in Europe and a lot of newspapers are eager readers of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Some have been for over ten years.

The American trade may well and deeply consider today the fact—and it is a large fact—that Europe gets its reflection of us, our policies and plans, from the American trade press.

London is considering today another theatre problem—the advanced run of the important pictures in the London city theatre. Later run houses in the neighborhood say that it hurts seriously their patronage.

New York and London

New York has a very large transient population. I do not know the exact figures—I have heard—quotations of from 150,000 to 250,000 daily visitors—but at least a good sized cityful of people journey in and out of New York every day. They come prepared to see and pay for Broadway attractions. Hence the remarkable run, for instance, of "The Big Parade" at the Astor Theatre (a legitimate house) now considerably over a year in extent and with a box office record of more than $1,300,000.

This picture undoubtedly draws to an extent from the New York neighborhoods, yet last summer this picture had crowded houses for three days in Great Neck, a small residential suburb only fifteen miles from Times Square.

New York draws from many states—many countries you might say; and Broadway is famous. Chicago is a great railroad center and the Loop has its great crowds, yet Chicago, like London, is distinctly a city of neighborhoods. Modern picture theatres there appeared first in the neighborhoods; later on in the Loop or downtown section.

London and Paris have their provincial and tourist visitors. Paris has a residential population of nearly 50,000 Americans, and I am told that last summer the American Express office dealt with 11,000 people over one week-end. But neither London nor Paris can compare with New York's influx of transients, so a protracted first run would undoubtedly get its patronage from the neighborhoods.

The heart of London is the old city, comparatively small in itself. A large circle around this small one, encompasses another city. And from this circle you go, on all sides, to the suburbs.

In the smaller circle are the West End theatres, some of which are pre-release theatres: The Plaza, Capitol, Rialto, New Gallery, Tivoli. The Plaza is owned and operated by Paramount, the Rialto by Universal, the Tivoli by Loew-Metro. The latter company will soon have the New Empire, now being rebuilt on Leicester Square.

Many of the suburban theatres are notable ones, and, with the sole exception of the Plaza, considerably advanced in size and attractiveness beyond the West End theatres; for instance, the beautiful Pavilion at Shepherds Bush. It is quite apparent that the big theatre development in London will be found in the neighborhood sections.

Shorter Runs in England

The Plaza, opened last March, has adhered very closely to a policy of week runs, this despite the fact that the program of Famous Players pictures there has embraced many that have scored long runs in New York's Times Square theatres. "Beau Geste," now in its seventh month at the New York Criterion, was limited to a four weeks' run at the Plaza; "For Heaven's Sake," which ran seven weeks at the New York Rialto, to three weeks; three weeks also was allotted to "We're in the Navy Now," which did seven weeks at the Rialto.

J. V. Bryson, in connection with Universal pre-release runs at the Rialto in London, has adopted a policy of conferring with exhibitors as to the length of the run, etc., in an attempt to meet their wishes and at the same time be fair to his own picture.

The great trouble, he tells me, is the long lapses between the advanced run and the regular release to exhibitors. For instance, "Michael Strogoff," now running at the Capitol (and successfully), after a

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

IT was just five years ago on Mar. 5 that Will H. Hays entered the industry. During that period he has literally revolutionized the business by constructive work in many directions.

To estimate properly the magnitude of the job Mr. Hays has already so successfully performed, it is only necessary to think back to the commercial chaos that existed in the industry when he came into it. All that is gone now; and in its place is genuine stability in every department of motion pictures.

Reviewing these accomplishments in detail would be reciting largely the history of the industry for the past five years. The reforms within have been matched by the wonderful advance in public good-will which the industry now enjoys.

Anybody who knows Will Hays knows that he works tremendously hard. He has a multitude of problems on his hands almost all the time. There is no fanfare of trumpets, no bally-hoo, about the performance of his great task. He is doing it surpassingly well by hard work and great ability.

The simple truth is that Mr. Hays' work for the motion picture ranks right up with the topmost achievements of this generation.

THE rumored extension of the Fanchon & Marco presentations to the East is an interesting possibility. These acts, which have been a West Coast feature for years, are unique in their snap, ingenuity and showmanship. The personnel of the acts, trained by Fanchon and by Marco, has been of the highest calibre. Their introduction into eastern bills would be a stimulating influence.

JUST what effect the opening of the Roxy Theatre will have on Broadway business is an interesting speculation. The situation is widely changed now from what it would have been a year or two ago, since the Capitol, Strand and Paramount are really the only regular weekly change houses left, so there should easily be room for another.

We imagine that when the shooting dies down it will be discovered that the Roxy is doing business—and the others likewise. There were dire predictions of what the opening of the Paramount would do to the other Broadway houses—but look over the figures for the Strand and the Capitol since that date.

Certainly for a time it will mean strenuous competition among houses who'll vie with each other in special presentations to meet the type of entertainment which Roxy will provide. Spirited bidding for pictures will be in order, with the Roxy in a position to pay unheard of prices for big attractions, thanks to the seating capacity.

Meanwhile, New York buzzes with talk of the opening, which takes rank as a civic event. Our sympathies go to the person making up the list of guests for that evening.

liberal advertising campaign gets its first booking next September.

There is something radically wrong with such a system.

Great Britain—and France, too—are ideal for the scheme, often hoped for in the U.S., of simultaneous showings, in many theatres backed by National advertising. Great Britain is comparatively small and compact and has newspapers covering the entire country. So has France. This is so ideal a proposition as to be theoretical today: but it will happen in time.

In conclusion, my brief stay in London—and I regret greatly not to have seen all those I know and know of in trade—includes a flying trip to the British national studios, where Herbert Wilcox is finishing "Madame Pompadour." I met the charming Dorothy Gish, who likes London, and Antonio Moreno, who has a prominent part in the picture. The "Madame Pompadour" sets were most attractive. The studio plant embraces two 300-foot stages.

The Boy Stood On, Etc.

ED WYNN, a comic of the stage, who now draws down a potent wage, beneath the Famous Players-Lasky banner, is giving to the silversheet, those gags with which his mind's replete, in his most mirthful, laugh-evoking manner.

One day last week in wet locale (so say McCarthy, Shreek, et al.), he nearly put the "real" in realism, when filming scenes near Buffalo, the spot where honeymooners go, and might have caught his death of rheumatism.

As sap detective Wynn is cast, in "Rubber Heels," and toward the last, comes near the brink of old Niagara's torrent, as in midstream aboard a boat, disguised as chunks of ice afloat, he trails a jewel-box without a warrant.

The scene went well till near the close, when suddenly a shout arose, men shrieked and fainted—one chap had a spasm—for the barge that bore The Perfect Clown had drifted where, by looking down, he saw the bottom of the icy chasm.

He quickly signalled to the shore, and watched Niagara no more, while workmen drew the boat to shallow places; and ne'er again, he made a pledge, would he make movies on the edge, of such a risky place for making faces.

Peter Clark Moves

PETER CLARK, the guiding spirit of Peter Clark, Inc., and the foremost authority on stage rigging, is moving into new quarters in West Thirtieth Street, New York City, to permit of expansion, improvement and the taking on of new lines. Clark started 20 years ago on the proverbial shoestring, building the simple stage rigging re-

By dint of personal application, constant study and unending supervision of his business he has made his enterprise stand head and shoulders above any in the industry, and has practically revolutionized stage rigging in the process.

A Serious Comedian

VISITING the Paramount Long Island studio last Saturday and a desolate looking place it was, with the shutdown about to go into effect—we found W. C. Fields in his dressing-room awaiting a call from the stage, where Director La Cava was putting Mary Brian and some of the minor players through their paces.

There is nothing of the patronizing attitude toward pictures which some players from the "legit" display in Mr. Fields' makeup. He quite frankly likes and enjoys working in pictures. All his life he has lived in hotels, and the business of having to be at the theatre at eight o'clock every evening has come to be a nightmare. Being very fond of the great outdoors, he is looking forward with relish to working in California.

There is no mistaking the earnestness with which Fields is trying to give exhibitors and public what they want. He studies box-office reports religiously—but about the only conclusion he has reached so far is that when he thinks they're good, they're usually bad, and when he thinks a picture is weak it's likely to be very good.

Despite printed rumors of his return to the stage, Fields will stay in pictures if the public likes him—and after "The Potters" and "So's Your Old Man," there should be no room for doubt on that score.

Foxites Frolic

BY the time this is in print the first annual Fox Fun Frolic and Dance will be history and this must be written in advance, but from where we sit it is easy to predict that the stock line. "a good time was had by all," will be in order on Saturday morning. The entire minstrel production, "A Night in Minstrelania," is to be broadcast by Station WMCA from 9:30 to 10:30 Friday evening, direct from the grand ballroom of the McAlpin, where the party will be staged.

We are promised that Director Francis Weldon has made this minstrel first part something to be proud of, and it will be presented entirely by members of the Fox Films eastern organization. There will be special music, special settings, special lighting effects 'n' everything. No less important is the "Fox Snooze," which Truman Talley and his Fox News staff will contribute to the evening's merriment. Then comes the dancing, with Harry Kosiner's Knickerbocker Collegians furnishing the strains of jazz—and at midnight a buffet supper will appear, amid prolonged applause. Olive Borden, Neil Hamilton and Marie Dressler will be on hand, it is promised, together with Broadway stars, to help make it a memorable evening.

Neilans in Gotham

MARSHALL NEILAN and Blanche Sweet arrived in New York last Saturday and immediately started on a theatre-going orgy. The trip was made primarily to look at the plays and the screen pair lost no time in lining up their program of playseeing.

The producer-director has a double motive in viewing the plays. He is on the look-out for screen material to bring back with him to Hollywood and to produce at his studios. Besides there is no form of recreation he takes such keen interest in as the theatre.

Crosland's Four On Broadway

MARKING an innovation in film history, a motion picture director will have four big productions running concurrently on New York's Broadway this month, when the newest feature of Alan Crosland, "A Million Bid," is added to the trio of his directorial achievements now flickering on the Great White Way.

Of the quartet conferring the distinction on Crosland as a director, three are starring vehicles of John Barrymore. The first of the trio is "Don Juan," now in the eighth month of its run at the Warner Theatre.

"When A Man Loves," now in its second month at the Selwyn Theatre, is the second.

The third and last of the trio of Barrymore pictures is "The Beloved Rogue," from the story of Francois Villon, which recently opened at the Strand.

The feature completing the quartet, "A Million Bid," is a Warner Brothers special to have its world premier at the Colony Theatre in March, according to Jack L. Warner.

Patsy Ruth Leaves W. B.

UPON the completing of "The First Auto," her present starring vehicle, Patsy Ruth Miller will leave the Warner Brothers fold to join the free-lancers. This, she feels, will give her a chance to exercise more selection in the choice of roles and stories, with greater opportunities. The relations with Warner Brothers continue entirely cordial, it is understood, and the move is a friendly one.

Miss Miller has come ahead rapidly. Just five years ago she graduated from Mary Institute in St. Louis, and came to Los Angeles with her parents. Her first picture was with Douglas MacLean; she was a member of the first group of Wampas Baby Stars; and within a year she played Esmeralda in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." She has been with Warners for two years. Her previous vehicle, not yet released, was "The Girl Champion."

"Stark Love" Commended

ONLY one feature received the asterisk award from the National Board of Review this week—Karl Brown's "Stark Love," which is pretty much the talk of New York, so far as pictures go. "Stark Love" is one of those exceptional pictures that doesn't fit into any of the stock classifications and hence is likely to be labeled by the sales department a weak sister, but make no mistake—here is a picture. In advertising this picture we shouldn't play up the fact that it is made with a cast which never before appeared before the camera and that it was written and directed by a cameraman. Let them find that out for themselves—after they've seen the picture, because to give the impression that there is anything amateurish about "Stark Love" is not only unfair but untrue. Sell it as 100 per cent. picture, and not as an experiment.

The week's other asterisk went to Pathe Review No. 15.

"Schotty" in New Post

CLARENCE C. SCHOTTENFELS has resigned from Moving Picture World to take charge of sales, advertising and publicity for United Color Pictures, Inc. "Schotty" has a very wide acquaintance in the trade and is thoroughly familiar with all branches of the industry. He began his association with filmdom at the old Imp studio under Carl Laemmle, sixteen years ago. Subsequently, he was with Reliance-Mutual; operated his own state rights exchange; was associated with Louis Myer at the Craftsman Laboratory; for two years edited and titled pictures; and then joined the advertising staff of "Exhibitors Trade Review," whence he went to a similar position on the "World." United Color Pictures has acquired the former Urban plant at Irvington.

U. A. British Head Here

MAURICE SILVERSTONE, United Artists' general manager for the British Isles, with offices in London, arrived in New York this week for conferences with Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors, and Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president and general manager of foreign distribution. Mr. Silverstone will be in New York—his native city—for another two weeks, after which he will return to London.

Thomas Gerety's Mother Dies

THE mother of Thomas J. Gerety, who is in the advertising department of Warner Bros., died this week. Sympathies are being extended to Mr. Gerety in his bereavement.

A Preview of the Roxy Theatre

THIS is in the nature of a preview of the Roxy Theatre. I expect to be there on the opening night, but I feel so assured of its complete success that this foreword will do quite as well as a review.

There have been many arguments about this theatre (I have had some vehement ones myself) over the theatre's possible supply of pictures. It is already fully evident that Roxy is going to have a lot of good pictures from many sources—all he wants, all he can take care of.

And that is a healthy sign, one that this whole industry may well be proud of.

I believe, in fact, that everyone in this business—Will Hays, and the executives of every company in his association, and the heads of the big theatre chains, and the owners of all other picture theatres, are going to be proud of this theatre, very proud.

It is a beautiful thing in itself, a majestic and artistic edifice dedicated to the best in moton pictures. It will be famous the world over, and reflect much credit from all quarters upon the American branch of the world industry.

It will be run by a master showman; everyone concedes him that place in the entertainment world, and as never before in his remarkable career he is decidedly in earnest and putting forth the best that is in him. In this theatre he will still further advance the picture theatre in the public's appreciation.

This theatre has no trade strings on it. It will select pictures regardless of politics and stereotyped standards and present them for all they are worth, giving them every chance that every new kind of picture deserves to have. The Roxy will be the open door for the unusual picture that might not otherwise get its opportunity for showing in a great theatre.

So that among all the theatres of this country, this theatre is going to stand out alone and supreme.

And in this eminent position it will do for motion pictures that which is our common interest, high and low—elevate them in the mind of the world public.

"U" Opens New Capitol in Somerville, Mass.

The new Capitol Theatre in Somerville, Mass., the latest addition to the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, was opened this week, the initial offering being "The Cheerful Fraud," a Reginald Denny vehicle.

The new Capitol is a 1,800-seat house and cost more than $250,000. It runs on a first-class vaudeville and feature picture policy.

Roy Calderone, the manager of the new Universal Theatre, was joined in the opening celebration by Harry Goldberg, assistant to the head of the Universal chain theatres, and by William Stevens, of the Unity Theatrical Agency, which supplies vaudeville to the Capitol.

Famous To Erect $1,500,000 House in Brooklyn; 4,000 Capacity

A MOTION picture theatre, similar in design to the Paramount in New York City, will be erected by Famous Players-Lasky in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn, N.Y. The house, seating four thousand, will cost $1,500,000. It will occupy a block of 66,000 square feet on the block bounded by Flatbush and Tilden avenues, Twenty-second Street and Duryea Place. This house is the second large project planned for Brooklyn by Famous, as another house is to be located at Flatbush Avenue Extension and DeKalb Avenue.

The site is L-shaped and was purchased from various owners for the motion picture interests through Charles A. O'Malley. The purchase gives Famous control of a whole block, with the exception of the corner at Tilden and Flatbush avenues. Thoens & Flaunlacher, Inc., Albert Lohman and George H. Gray were the brokers in the deal. A large part of the site was sold by Flatbush-Duryea Corporation.

In addition a theatre with a seating capacity of 4,000 is to be erected by Famous on Jamaica Avenue and Merrick Road, Jamaica, L.I. Charles A. O'Malley, real estate expert of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., represented the buyer. Alper & Thanhauser of 745 Seventh Avenue were the brokers in the transaction. Mr. Ralph Riccardo, president of the Jamaica Central Corporation, was represented by Attorney Goldberg of the Firm of Levy, Guttman & Goldberg.

West Coast Chain Will Expand Says Franklin

Unanimous Election of New President and General Manager Confirmed in Telegram from Gore Bros.

WEST COAST THEATRES, INC., will expand and the same policy now in effect will be carried out, stated Harold B. Franklin, newly-elected president and general manager of the California chain, this week. Mr. Franklin received a lengthy telegram from the Gore Brothers confirming Franklin's unanimous election as president and general manager of the company. Mike Gore resigned the office to become chairman of the board of directors.

The telegram, couched in a congratulatory tone, stated that the West Coast Board of Directors felt assured, in view of the past performances on the part of Mr. Franklin in building up the Famous Players theatre circuit and carrying out the conception of Sam Katz in the formation of the Publix Theatres Corporation, that West Coast is making a valuable acquisition in obtaining his services.

Mr. Franklin's statement was as follows:

"West Coast Theatres, Inc., under the direction of its founders, has been built upon the foundation of presenting clean, wholesome amusement to the patrons of those houses. That policy will be carried on by myself to the utmost of my ability. I believe that those founders built carefully and with a keen foresight to the future of the motion picture theatre as the ultimate entertainment for the masses of our nation.

"It will be naturally part of our plan to hold what has been so carefully constructed and to expand the circuit, carrying forward the same policy that has made the circuit the greatest factor in entertainment on the Pacific slope.

"I do not contemplate any radical changes of any nature and more particularly, wish to stress the fact that those members of the working personnel of the circuit who have been working for the best interests of the West Coast chain, will be retained in their present capacities.

"As yet I have not set a definite date of departure for myself to Los Angeles. It will, however, be some time shortly after the first of April."

New House for Medford; Corporation Formed

THE Mark-Strand Circuit will erect a new theatre in Medford, Mass., to cost approximately $400,000 and to seat upwards of 2 500. Title has been taken to land at the side and rear of the Boston & Maine Railroad terminal and an extensive parking space is provided. Construction will start this week and it is expected the theatre will be open inside six months. This is the fourth new theatre for Medford to be started this year and makes a total of about 7 200 seats to the 2,200 seats already there.

A corporation to operate the Mark-Strand Theatre in Medford has been organized, known as the Strand Theatre Co. of Medford. Mass., with preferred stock of $50,000 and 500 shares of no par common. Incorporators are Mary K. Lynch, Somerville, Mass.; Joseph M. Levenson, Boston, and Alexander C. Kirkpatrick, Wollaston, Mass.

M.P.T.O.W. Sectional Meet at Spokane

Attended by several score of Eastern and Western Washington exhibitors, the sectional meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, held recently at the Davenport Hotel in Spokane, Wash., was declared to be highly successful and evidenced a greatly growing interest in the affairs and participation in the M.P.T.O.W. A feature of the meeting was the large attendance from Seattle.

Will Starkey, head of the Starkey Amusement Enterprises and first vice-president of the M.P.T.O.W., called the meeting to order. Frank Zoerlin of Spokane Theatres, Inc., welcomed the visitors, and President H. W. Bruen of Pacific Theatres, Inc., made an excellent principal address. A summary of the activities, finances, etc., of the state body was given by Executive Secretary James M. Hone. The body went on record as opposing present censorship bills pending in the state senate, and discussed plans for an Eastern Washington Theatrical Pot Pourri to be given in Spokane in the near future.

Royster to Manage Chain of Southern Theatres

The Southern Amusement Company, in announcing its intended expansion of operations to conduct a chain of motion picture theatres in North Carolina, has also made public the engagement of Nat L. Royster, well-known theatre manager, to fill the post of general manager of the chain now in the process of formation. To date, no announcement has been forthcoming from Southern Amusement relating to the make-up of the chain. It is expected, though, that information will be released within a few days.

Southern Amusement also reveals that extensive improvements are to be made on the original theatre operated by the company in Charlotte, N.C. Improvements will consist of a new front, interior changes and the installation of Vitaphone equipment.

Mr. Royster has recovered from an illness which kept him for several weeks in a Charlotte hospital.

Fields Denies Rumors of His Return to Stage

Reports that he intends leaving the screen and returning to the stage were vigorously denied by W. C. Fields, who asserted that "theatrical producers who declare that they have me under contract to appear before the footlights under their management are mistaken." The former Follies and vaudeville star is now making his fourth stellar comedy under the direction of Gregory La Cava.

Albany Censor Bureau Is Moved to New Dep't

The Albany bureau of the motion picture censorship commission was moved during the first week of March from the State Capitol to the Educational Building, as the work is now being directed by the State Education Department. The bureau was first opened in the State Capitol in 1921.

Giant Merger Under Discussion

Stanley Reported Seeking to Bring Keith-Orpheum, Pathe and P. D. C. Into First National Pool

FOLLOWING the merger of First National, Stanley and West Coast Theatres, Inc., under Stanley control, a much bigger merger appears to be a possibility, according to information received from several sources this week.

The controlling factors in these negotiations are believed to be Stanley and the Keith-Orpheum interests. In other words, just as Stanley and West Coast brought about the original First National deal, so Stanley and Keith-Albee are now apparently seeking to swing into the line-up Pathe and Producers' Distributing Corporation. F.B.O. has not been approached, according to Joseph P. Kennedy, President of F.B.O.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS, on the basis of information covering a long period, is of the opinion that it is the theatre interests concerned rather than the production-distribution companies which are actively promoting the merger, or working agreement, as it is called in some quarters.

"The First National situation," as it has been termed, first arose over a year ago at the Atlantic City meeting. It was then apparent that the Stanley interests would eventually come to the front, and this is what has happened in the last few weeks.

When announcement was made of the election of Harold B. Franklin as head of West Coast Theatres, it was evident that further developments were in the offing, and they came rapidly this week.

The first step, according to all indications, would be the definite alliance of U.B.O. with Stanley. Their relations are already close, and have been for some time. It is possible that the merger of these theatre interests has already occurred, or that a working agreement has been reached, by which Keith-Orpheum have taken their place in the triple theatre alliance with Stanley and West Coast.

Kennedy Denies F.B.O. Merger Connection

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY, head of Film Booking Offices, flatly denied that F.B.O. was in any way connected with the rumored merger of Stanley, First National, Keith-Orpheum, P.D.C., and Pathe interests, when seen on Thursday.

"We are not interested in this merger in any way," he said, "and have not even been approached. We have nothing to gain by such a move, are not interested in it, and you may deny it as strongly as you like."

At the same time it is also evident that negotiations are under way to swing North American Theatres, Inc., allied with P.D.C., into the theatre group, which would thus become a quadruple alliance, and be the controlling factor in the situation.

It should also be recognized that other exhibitor interests in First National are included in the theatre line-up of the Stanley-West Coast group.

The Keith-Albee interests sought to enter the industry on a big scale, following the decline of straight vaudeville, and their merger with P.D.C. followed. Keith-Albee apparently now seeks to go still further, and in conjunction with Stanley, to swing what would be the biggest of all mergers in film history.

In Wall Street, these newest merger negotiations came out into the open this week, when the "Wall Street Journal" bulletin carried the following:

"It is understood that following arrangements which have been consummated merging First National Pictures, Inc., the Stanley Company of America and West Coast Theatres, Inc., negotiations are proceeding to bring the Orpheum Circuit, Keith-Albee and possibly Producers' Distributing Corporation and Pathe Exchange, Inc., into the group. Whether this means a further merger or merely a working agreement is not yet known."

Doremus & Co., who are understood to speak with authority for Stanley, gave out this statement:

"Directors of the Stanley Company of America, when questioned regarding reports of the huge combination with Keith-Albee and Orpheum, and other vaudeville and motion picture circuits, said that while consideration was being given to further expansion plans, no actual steps had been taken toward such a consolidation.

"The rumored combination will receive little attention until the consumption of the recently projected one million dollar merger whereby the Stanley Company of America and the West Coast Theatres Company will take over control of First National Pictures, Inc.

"Several banking institutions are interested in the triple consolidation now being worked out. The Stanley Company of America, which has the financial backing of Edward B. Smith & Company, is the largest company in the proposed combination and is expected to be the dominant factor in the new organization.

"Among the companies mentioned in theatrical circles as likely to be included in the larger amusement group are: the Keith-Albee and Orpheum Vaudeville Circuits; the North American Theatres, Inc.; Pathe Exchange, Inc.; Producers' Distributing Corporation, and the Film Booking Offices."

The banking interests concerned in the projected giant merger would be these: Blair & Co., holding Pathe and Keith-Albee issues; Chase National Bank and Chase Securities Co. through Theodore Schulze & Co., and Jeremiah Milbank, connected with P.D.C. and North American Theatres; E. B. Smith & Company, bankers for Stanley, and Hayden, Stone & Company, through connections with First National Pictures and West Coast Theatres.

Offer Reported Made to Big Executive

MOTION PICTURE NEWS learns that one of the biggest executives in the industry, not now connected with Stanley, First National, West Coast, or any of the companies named in rumors of the giant merger said to be in negotiation, has been sought to head the new combination.

It is understood that he has the offer under consideration, but will not commit himself in any way as to whether he will accept it. He also declines absolutely to talk for publication.

Whether the giant merger is consummated or not, it is known that this executive has been asked to head the Stanley - First National - West Coast group. This much can be said: his acceptance of the post would have far-reaching results in several quarters, and would precipitate a very interesting situation.

Universal Acquires Colony Theatre as Permanent Broadway Home

ANNOUNCEMENT was made at the Home Office of Universal Pictures Corporation, 730 Fifth Avenue, that on September 1st it would take over the B. S. Moss Colony Theatre as a permanent home for Universal productions. This is the same theatre which Universal leased for a short time last year for this same purpose. With this permanent home, Universal will be enabled for the first time to assure exhibitors of exploitation runs of length and advertising value for the entire New York territory.

It is understood that one of the biggest figures in the exhibiting world will become managing director of the Colony.

The Colony will close in time for a thorough renovation and refinishing in order that "The Cat and the Canary" can open there on September 3rd.

Fitzpatrick-McElroy-Saxe Deal Reported

May Combine in Construction of Theatre in Wisconsin; F & R Acquires Two More

AN affiliation of two theatre circuits may be the result of a reported deal between the Fitzpatrick-McElroy group operating in Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois and Indiana, and the Saxe interests which confines itself to the Wisconsin theatres. The two are alleged to have entered into a deal to jointly build a theatre at Marionette, Wis.

Bringing the chain up to 125, the Strand and Haynie, Fairmont, Minn., have been added to the Northwest Theatres (Finkelstein & Ruben) circuit. The deal was closed with W. L. Nicholas by J. F. Cubberley, contract executive of the circuit, who has engineered all the deals in the chain's expansion program.

The Strand and Haynie long have been operated by Hay & Nicholas, but holdings of the late William Hay recently were taken over by Nicholas. The Haynie now is undergoing extensive remodeling. Recently, it was reported that a new theatre would be built here in opposition to the Strand and Haynic.

Cubberley has just completed a deal for a site at Rochester, Minn., where Northwest Theatres, which now operates two houses in the city, will build a $200,000 house. A number of other deals in the Minneapolis company's expansion program now are pending.

Samuel and Nathan E. Goldstein, who operate the G-B Theatres Corp. in Springfield, Mass., will spend more than $3,000,000 in an expansion program just getting under way. The program is to be extended throughout New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut, with a minimum of ten new theatres to be built.

The brothers have purchased a site for a theatre at Chicopee, Mass., and soon will announce extension of holdings in New York State, working eastward from Utica, where they now have a house. Proposed Connecticut theatres will mark the first to be operated by the corporation in that state. Eastern Massachusetts is to witness expansion of G-B holdings with invasion of Boston held likely.

Besides the Broadway and State here, G. B. Theatres Corp. also owns and operates the Strand, Westfield, Calvin, Northampton; Victory and Strand, Holyoke; Rialto, Westfield, State, Utica, N.Y.; State Pawtucket, R.I.; Colonial, Palace and Union Square, Pittsfield; Plaza, Northampton; Playhouse, Chicopee; Strand, Palmer; and the Casino, Ware.

Ohio Block Booking Bill

Measure Introduced Making Compulsory Buying of Group Misdemeanor; Arbitration Attacked

FOLLOWING the lead of Indiana in seeking to abolish block booking through legislation a bill has been introduced in Ohio making it a misdemeanor to force exhibitors to buy more films than they need; also outlawing the compulsory feature in arbitration. It is known as "a bill to prevent unfair competition" and makes either violation punishable by a fine not to exceed $250. It is understood that the Ohio exhibitor organization is back of the measure.

The bill as introduced in Columbus states that hereafter it shall be unlawful for any producer or its agent to compel any exhibitor or lessee to buy or rent more motion picture films than desired under threat to refuse to sell any. Also that it shall be unlawful for any producer or its agent to require or compel any exhibitor or lessee to submit to arbitration in any controversy between the two factors. Section three of the bill explains that the foregoing does not apply to any contract or agreement entered into prior to taking effect of this act.

Section four states that violations of the provisions of this act will be punishable by a fine in any sum not to exceed $250 and each and every day that the violation continues shall be deemed a separate and distinct offense.

Questioned as to the effect of the bill in case of passage, Cleveland exchange men stated that the abolition of block booking would undoubtedly raise the price of each individual film released to the exhibitor.

Famous Canadian Acquires Six Vancouver Theatres

A group of six suburban theatres in Vancouver, B. C., known as the Langer circuit, has been acquired en bloc by Famous Players' Canadian Corp., Toronto, it is announced. The Langer chain includes the Regent, Windsor, Victoria, Alma, Grandview and Kerrisdale.

Famous Players already has three large houses in Vancouver, B. C., these being the Capitol, Dominion and Broadway. H. M. Thomas, Western Division manager for Famous Players, is in charge of the Vancouver Capitol, succeeding Ralph Ruffner, who died a few months ago after managing the theatre for six years.

Action Against F. P.-L. Canadian Dismissed

Justice Rose has dismissed the action brought by the Canadian Performing Right Society Limited at Toronto against Famous Players Canadian Corporation for $10,000 damages for alleged infringement of copyright and for an injunction restraining defendants from playing certain music in Famous Players theatres in Canada. The plaintiff must also pay costs.

Murnau Signs Five-Year Contract With Fox Films

A FIVE-YEAR contract to direct pictures solely for Fox Film Corporation has been signed by F. W. Murnau, German director who has just completed "Sunrise," his first American production and, according to Fox Films executives, the largest thing dramatically and physically that the corporation has ever turned out.

F. W. Murnau

The director plans to arrive in New York March 14 and will sail aboard the "Olympic" for Germany on March 25. After he has produced one picture for Ufa, he will return to Fox Hills next October. He will not go to Berlin directly as he intends visiting London, where he will remain three days, and thence to Paris for a short visit, returning to Berlin in April.

News' Theatre Survey—Part II

Analysis by States and Population Groups Completed; Survey Extends Over Three Years' Period

By J. S. DICKERSON

IN last week's issue MOTION PICTURE NEWS presented compilation of information in its theatre survey alphabetically by States, up to and including Missouri. This week the balance of the States appears.

Presentation of these statistics by THE NEWS completes a survey initiated nearly three years ago. The data is, of course, kept up-to-date by constant additions or eliminations, so that THE NEWS' theatre list is at all times live.

We desire to point out also that our theatre information has been obtained, not only from industry sources, but from expert sources outside. Thus its accuracy is strengthened by checking and re-checking through methods not commonly used by statisticians in the film business. We shall be glad to explain to anyone interested the various steps by which we arrived at these invaluable figures.

Edison's Views Scored by Harry Warner

Declares Inventor's Statement Against Talking Pictures Shows Unwarranted Prejudice

Harry M. Warner

IN a recent interview on general topics given by Thomas A. Edison at his Fort Myers, Fla., estate the inventor was queried concerning his opinion of the talking picture, as exemplified in the Vitaphone, as to whether it would "take" in this country. "No, I don't think the talking picture will ever be successful in the United States," replied Mr. Edison, also stating that the idea was not new, for he had made experiments on the project some fifteen years ago. The interview has been given considerable space in the daily papers.

This week H. M. Warner, president of Warner Bros., which is interested in the Vitaphone, issued a statement taking issue with Mr. Edison's views on the "talking picture" in which he takes the stand that the inventor's criticism shows unwarranted prejudice as he (Mr. Edison) is "undoubtedly unfamiliar with exactly what the latest device for synchronizing sound and action has accomplished." With reference to Mr. Edison's experiments of fifteen years ago Mr. Warner declared that the inventor probably discarded the idea, as he had not, at that time, the aids so necessary in the making of a modern talking picture.

In his interview Mr. Edison declared "there are many things needed more than the talking moving picture in these times." This drew from Mr. Warner the question as to whether anything can be "relegated to insignificance when it is endowed with such tremendous educational possibilities as the newest synchronizing invention." Assuming the correctness of the oft-repeated declaration that the motion picture is the only means of universal expression and the medium through which the music of each country will extend all over the globe and you have untold possibilities. "Even if you discount its great power for popular entertainment, the singing or talking pictures would find ample justification in this one faculty of spreading great music," continued Mr. Warner.

He next took up the importance of the instrument as an historical record. "No one will contest the value of such a record, could it have been secured, of Lincoln's Gettysburg address or, more recently, Woodrow Wilson's war message to Congress." In the future, records of such happenings can be kept, thanks to the very device which Mr. Edison would dismiss as having no lasting importance, continued the Warner president and then:

"Such an eminent authority as W. C. Durant, who, as far back as 1908, made the prophetic statement that the day would come when General Motors would be the Steel Corporation of the automobile industry, only last month, in a published interview with financial reporter, B. C. Forbes, had this to say of talking pictures:

"'The thing that has the biggest possibilities of anything and everything I have come across in the last forty years is the Vitaphone.'"

Pool Seeks Use of Photophone; Competition Looms in Field

THAT the five companies who recently named a committee to formulate "a program calculated to standardize systems and methods of synchronizing sound with pictures" will enter the talking picture field in competition with Vitaphone and Movietone is indicated by negotiations now under way with the General Electric Company. These negotiations are for an arrangement for use and development of the Photophone, controlled by General Electric and the Radio Corporation of America.

The Photophone was recently successfully demonstrated at the Rivoli Theatre in New York City and at the State in Schenectady. It is a combination of the Hoxie Pallophotophone and the Hewlett loudspeaker. Its demonstration followed six years of experimentation. By this method of synchronization, sound is reproduced on the film which is projected by an ordinary projector to which a special attachment is made.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Universal, Famous, Producers' Distributing Corporation and First National are the five companies making up the pool.

"Rough Riders" Premiere at Cohan Theatre, New York, March 15

On Tuesday evening, March 15, Famous Players presents "The Rough Riders" at the Cohan Theatre, New York City. The production, based on the story of the famous First Volunteer Cavalry Regiment, organized by General Leonard Wood and Col. Theodore Roosevelt for the Spanish-American war of 1898, will be shown twice daily.

John Fish Goodrich wrote the screen story from the intimate data supplied by Hermann Hagedorn, personal biographer of Col. Roosevelt, and Victor Fleming directed. The cast includes Noah Beery, George Bancroft, Charles Farrell, Mary Astor, Charles Emmett Mack, Fred Kohler, Col. Fred Lindsay and General Wood and Frank Hopper as Roosevelt.

Keith-Albee Will Have Two Types of Houses

Pictures and Vaudeville in One Group; Other to Run Straight Variety Program

FINDING that many theatres originally planned for the presentation of straight vaudeville have had more success with a policy of variety program and pictures; also with the intention of restoring so-called "big time" vaudeville to its former prestige, the Keith-Albee Circuit has formulated a new policy with the regard to the latter phase that will mean the operation of two types of houses. One group will offer a program of pictures with vaudeville, the other to present high class acts with two performances daily and no films. The Palace, Cleveland. is among those theatres found more remunerative with pictures and vaudeville.

Up to the present time Keith-Albee and the Orpheum Circuit combined have about twenty weeks of straight vaudeville between Portland, Me., and Portland, Ore. Under the new plan K-A and the Orpheum will organize a new division of major variety houses which, extending from Coast to Coast and taking in cities in Canada, will present straight vaudeville in houses of an average seating capacity of 1,500. About forty weeks of straight booking will be offered.

Several million dollars have been set aside as a building fund for the construction of theatres in towns not equipped with suitable houses and for the remodeling of others which are to be transferred to the new policy. In accordance with the new policy the Keith Memorial Theatre in Boston will have its seating capacity cut from 3,600 seats to 2,000 and will become the New England headquarters of "big time" vaudeville. In New York two straight vaudeville houses will be added in Brooklyn and one in the Bronx.

The Majestic in Louisville, the Colonial in Dayton, and the Temple theatres in Rochester and Detroit are among those which will be remodeled to conform to the straight vaudeville plan.

Kennedy Starts Harvard Film Course March 14

Consists of Eleven Discussions by Industry's Leaders; Lectures About Fifty Minutes Each

THE Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration announces that March 14th will inaugurate the series of lectures and discussions by leaders in the motion picture industry, which will form an integral part of its curriculum in the course in Business Policy for the second half-year. This series will be given under the direction of Joseph P. Kennedy, Harvard '12, president of Film Booking Offices.

The first address, "Introduction to Discussions on Motion Picture Industry," will be delivered by Mr. Kennedy on March 14th, and will include a general outline of what it is hoped to accomplish by the lectures. On Tuesday, March 15th, Mr. Kennedy will introduce Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, who will cover the motion picture industry generally with his topic, "The Motion Picture Industry."

The complete schedule of speakers, together with dates and topics they will discuss, follows:

March 14, J. P. Kennedy, "Introduction to Discussions on Motion Picture Industry"; March 15, Will Hays, "The Motion Picture Industry"; March 17, Jesse Lasky, "Production Management Problems"; March 19, Adolph Zukor, "Executive Management"; March 22, S. R. Kent, "Distribution"; March 24, R. H. Cochrane, "Advertising and Exploitation"; March 26, Dr. A. H. Giannini, "Finance"; March 29, William Fox, "Foreign Development"; March 30, Marcus Loew, "Theatre Management"; March 31, H. M. Warner, "New Developments in Motion Pictures"; April 2, J. P. Kennedy, "The Future of the Industry."

The lectures will run about fifty minutes each. Although Cecil De Mille and Milton Sills were previously scheduled to speak with the others, they have been unable to get away from the Coast in time to be included in the above schedule. They will, in all probability, deliver their lectures in the second or fourth week in April. Cecil De Mille will talk on motion picture directing, while Milton Sills will concentrate on motion picture acting. A definite announcement concerning the lectures to be delivered by these two men will be made shortly.

So far practically no study of the motion picture industry has been made by the school. It is in the hope tha the men who have seen the rapid and phenomenal growth of the industry will be able to isolate from their experience a few typical "cases" to present to the school with the background which they alone can furnish, that this part of the course has been arranged.

All the lectures will be given under the direction of Mr. Kennedy, who will appear at each one. The speakers will be entertained at lunch by Dean Donhan and other members of the Business School Faculty. The talks will be delivered in the new Business School buildings of the George F. Baker Foundation, which were erected from the gift of five million dollars donated by Mr. Baker. The speakers will be shown through the buildings at their visit to Cambridge.

William Smalley, New York Exhibitor, Ill

William Smalley, owner of about fifteen motion picture theatres in Central New York, and who is one of the best known exhibitors in the central part of the state, is seriously ill at his home in Cooperstown, from pneumonia. About three weeks ago, Mr. Smalley had his teeth removed in the hopes that his general physical condition might be benefitted. Mr. Smalley was in Albany about two weeks ago and then went to Utica to consult with his dentist. Word reached Albany last Saturday of Mr. Smalley's present illness.

"The King of Kings" Premiere at Gaiety, New York, April 15

THE Gaiety Theatre, New York City, has been leased by Producers Distributing Corporation for the purpose of housing "The King of Kings" which will be presented there for the first time on the evening of April 15. The lease begins April 10 and the five days preceding the opening will be devoted to the remodeling of the house to screen effects and providing the final rehearsals of Hugo Riesenfeld's orchestra. Dr. Riesenfeld is now working on the musical score in New York after studying his subject at first hand in the Culver City studio, where the De Mille production was made.

Re-Apportionment of "U" Sales Divisions

Metzger Sub-Divides Country into Two Separate Territories; Kramer and Herbel Managers

THE sales organization which, up to the present, has functioned under a three division plan, has been re-aligned so that in the future there will be two sub-divisions, East and West, the Eastern territory taking in Canada, announces Lou B. Metzger, general sales manager of Universal. Earl Kramer, present manager of the Eastern division, will also handle the larger territory and H. M. Herbel, present Western unit head, will control the larger Western district sales.

Metzger stated that the new move is a result of the request of Ralph B. Williams, who has been sales director of the Southern division under the three division plan, that he be transferred to Atlanta with jurisdiction of the Southern territory. Under the new plan Mr. Williams will have charge of the Atlanta, Charlotte, Charleston, Jacksonville, Memphis and New Orleans exchanges. This group will form part of the Eastern division and Williams will act as resident sales director and assistant to Earl Kramer.

Another reason for the move is the fact that Dan Michalove, who has been supervising the Southern exchanges, in addition to his connection with Universal theatres, has become so involved in his theatre work that he asked to be relieved of his sales supervision duties.

In addition to the Southern exchanges listed in the foregoing, Kramer will have under his jurisdiction the following offices: New York, Albany, Philadelphia, Washington, New Haven, Buffalo, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, and the Canadian exchanges, Toronto, Montreal, Calgary, Winnipeg, St. John and Vancouver. In addition to Williams, he will have two other assistants: Clair Hague, the general sales manager for Canada, and a newly appointed assistant sales director, Phil Dunas, who will have supervision over Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit and Pittsburgh.

Herbel, whose Western territory is increased by all the former Southern exchanges West of the Mississippi, now has a territory that embraces the following exchanges: Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Des Moines, Sioux Falls, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake, Butte, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and the following Southern exchanges: St. Louis, Kansas City, Dallas, El Paso and Oklahoma City.

He now has two assistant sales directors, D. S. Mitchell, who supervises the Rocky Mountain and West Coast exchanges, and Norman Truog, who has been handling the Missouri Valley group. A third assistant sales director will be appointed for the Western Division and a re-arrangement made in the local supervision of the exchanges East of the Rockies.

First National Sales Drive

Launched Under Direction of Sam Spring; Convention at Burbank in May

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES, INC., under the guidance of Samuel Spring, secretary-treasurer and chairman of the sales cabinet, has just completed plans for the launching of its sales drive.

Following the affiliation of the Stanley Company of America, the West Coast Theatres and First National, the sales managers, Ned Marin, Ned Depinet and A. W. Smith, Jr., have started the sales field force with a spirited spring-summer drive. President Lieber has sent personal wires to all branch managers.

At the annual Sales Convention, announced for May 20-23 at the Burbank Studios, the salesmen will have an opportunity to see for themselves the productions under way. Elaborate plans for this convention are being developed by John McCormick, general manager of West Coast production, and M. C. Levee, general executive manager. From now until that date the entire sales organization is out to establish new records in what is called an Appreciation Drive. This drive is already well under way.

With the contracts closed during February still coming in, it is announced that sales for the spring and summer pictures are in excess of the quota in all parts of the country.

Attractions available during the next five months include Norma Talmadge in "Camille," two from Colleen Moore, with a third just released and still playing first-run theatres; one Constance Talmadge; two from Harry Langdon; two Milton Sills; one Richard Barthelmess; three Ken Maynard; one Corinne Griffith; Babe Ruth and Anna Q. Nilsson in "Babe Comes Home"; two Johnny Hines; Charles Murray and George Sidney in "Big Bertha," to mention only a few of the outstanding pictures already scheduled. One of the most important releases of the year, regardless of season, will be Robert Kane's "Convoy," a dramatic story based on the part played by the American Navy in the war.

With the spring and summer program all set, the production forces at the $2,000,000 studios at Burbank are concentrating on a line-up of specials and regular releases for the season of 1927-28. It is probable that there will be nine specials during that period, including a super-production of Max Reinhardt's famous stage spectacle, "The Miracle," recently purchased from A. H. Woods for $150,000.

Effort to Change New Jersey "Blue" Legislation Fails

A bill whereby the question of Sunday closing throughout New Jersey would have become a matter of local option was unsuccessful in passing the House of Representatives of the Jersey Legislature, who refused to pass it by a vote of 30 to 27. By the terms of the proposed measure a petition of 18 per cent of the voters would have called a referendum.

"U" Renews Contracts With Montagne and Logue

Edward J. Montagne's contract with Universal has been renewed as has also the contract with Charles Logue. The former is scenario editor of Universal and the latter is in charge of feature comedy scripts under Montagne's supervision.

Kane to Star "Discovery" in $50,000 Story

BOB KANE, producer for First National, believes that Adrienne Treux, an extra whom he recently "discovered," is possessed of real screen ability; he has, therefore, announced his intention of starring her in "Dance Magic," a forthcoming "special" for First National release for which he paid a price said to be $50,000. The story, now running in the Ladies' Home Journal, is by Clarence Buddington Kelland. The scenario is now being made by Adelaide Heilbron. The picture is to be put into work March 21, as soon as Miss Truex arrives from the Coast. Members of the supporting cast will include Ben Lyon, Barbara Stanwick, Sam Hardy, Louis John Bartels and June Collyer, another "find" of Kane's. Victor Halpern will direct with Ernest Haller as chief cameraman.

Fanchon-Marco National Presentation Possibility; Stanley-F. N. Move?

WHAT is seen as a move by the Stanley-First National interests to compete actively with Publix in its presentation policy is the report this week that the Fanchon and Marco presentation circuit may become national in scope. The Stanley-First National group are conferring at present in Los Angeles, and a likely possibililty is the annexation of the West Coast Theatre chain; another reason for the belief is that Harold B. Franklin, now president and general manager of the West Coast chain, in commenting on the Fanchon-Marco report, stated, "Fanchon and Marco have done splendid work for West Coast in the past and West Coast might be expected to extend them every co-operation in any expansion program undertaken."

It is stated that the presentation producers have been approached by Eastern capitalists with a plan for nationalizing the circuit, with Fanchon and Marco to incorporate for a million and a half, a million being retained by the producers and the balance allotted to a syndicate of houses served by the circuit. Fanchon and Marco are at present under contract to West Coast Theatres, which provides presentations for close to three hundred theatres.

Under the reported plan, the presentation acts would go North from Los Angeles to San Francisco, Tacoma, Portland, Seattle and Vancouver. Minneapolis and St. Paul are reported being sought as the next cities on the eastern leg of the circuit. In these cities, Northwest Theatres (Finkelstein & Ruben) faces invasion of Publix and the Fanchon & Marco presentations are expected to be a strengthening factor in meeting this threatened competition. Milwaukee, Chicago and Detroit are seen as next objectives, with the plan eventually extending to all key cities where First National franchise holders are not allied with the Publix group.

Major Edward M. Bowes

Naked Truth Dinner Plans

Major Bowes to Direct Festivities; Burlesque and Comedy News Reels To Be Offered

THE success of the Naked Truth dinner scheduled for the evening of Saturday, April 2nd, at the Hotel Astor, has been clinched beyond all doubt.

This was made evident following an announcement from Walter Eberhardt, president of the A.M.P.A., that the entertainment committee has obtained the consent of Major Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol Theatre, to act as director of the festivities.

Additional plans for the affair were made known after a meeting of the committee with Major Bowes at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Tuesday, March 8th.

Working with Major Bowes to make the Naked Truth dinner the best ever held in the history of the A.M.P.A. is the entertainment committee, consisting of Arthur James, Hopp Hadley, Hal Howe and Ed McNamee. Tom Wiley is completing the hotel arrangements, and Ken Hallam is getting the properties ready.

President Eberhardt announced that there will be the usual comedy news reel burlesquing the history of the motion picture industry; also there will be a special comedy news reel produced entirely by Rose Pelswick, motion picture critic of the "Journal."

There will be two brief sketches written by A.M.P.A. members. In one sketch the actors will be Ben Lyon, Sam Hardy and Louis John Bartels, the original "Show-Off." Also there will be personal appearances by many celebrities of the stage and screen.

The speakers of the evening will be announced later.

Arrangements to broadcast the Naked Truth festivities by radio to the world at large through Station WJZ have been completed by Al Selig.

One innovation of the dinner will be a double dais, with all of the past presidents of the A.M.P.A. seated on one and all of the speakers on the other.

The tickets at $10 each are going fast, more than 200 selling during the first three days after they were made available.

Those who want them are urged to get action early. Any of the A.M.P.A. officers will sell tickets. Walter Eberhardt may be reached at First National Pictures, 383 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Fountain Square Theatres Formed in Minneapolis

The Fountain Square Theatres Corporation, a new operating company, has been formed in Indianapolis. Louis B. The company has taken a long-term lease on property on Prospect and Shelby streets, Indianapolis, where the Fountain Square Theatre and Dance Hall and a four-story building will be erected. U. A. Circuit Takes Over Liberty, Kansas City; Plans 1,000-Seat Theatre

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, chairman of the board of directors of the United Artists Theatre Circuit, announced this week the tenth link in the announced chain of twenty pre-release theatres where the productions of the United Artists will be shown. The Circuit has taken over the Liberty Theatre, located on Main and Twelfth Streets, Kansas City. The house will be closed shortly and all but the four walls of the present structure will be torn down and a 1,000 seat theatre constructed —the house to be opened to the public September 1.

A modern refrigeration plant will play an important part in the theatre as will also radio connections which will be effected so that members of the United Artists organization passing through Kansas City may broadcast through the Middle West.

Sterling to Make Eight for 1927-28 Season

Eight feature productions comprise the Sterling Pictures line-up for the 1927-28 production year, Henry Ginsberg, Sterling president, announces from Hollywood. Every endeavor will be made, states Mr. Ginsberg, to inject quality in the eight productions, on which he plans to make greater production expendiures than on Sterling pictures heretofore.

Mrs. Wallace Reid is also the star of the productions. The two subjects are, "The Satin Woman" and "Hell Ship Bronson"; preparation has already been started on the scenarios and advance production plans. They will be produced under the personal supervision of Mrs. Wallace Reid and will be released in conjunction with another star series, soon to be announced, and a program of coming Gothams.

"White Pants Willie" New Johnny Hines Vehicle

C. C. Burr has secured "White Pants Willie," Elmer Davis' "Liberty Magazine" story, as a vehicle for Johnny Hines. The comedian has already plunged into preliminary work on the forthcoming picture, having given up his plans for a vacation. Both he and Burr are now busily engaged with their scenario and gag staffs, or Peter Milne, Howard Green, Kerrie Clark, Horace Woodmansee, George Amy and Director Charles Hines. To date Burr has made no selections as to Hines' supporting cast. It is expected that the production unit will start work April 1 or thereabouts.

Morgan and Dwight D. Graves, all of Bridgeport. Most of the shots will be made in England. The scenario was prepared some months ago and has been approved by Methodist bishops, clergymen and laymen. It will be shown for the first time at the Triennial World Conference in May, 1928.

Scotia Films Completes Writing of Fourth Story

A story depicting the lives of Scotch fishermen and women and the fourth story that the Scotia Film Company of Hollywood, Cal., will place into work, has just been finished. John C. Fowler, a former leading stock actor in the East and Middle West, is interested in the productions in company with Spottiswoode Aitken, film character actor formerly connected with the legitimate stage of America as well as that of Europe. It is said that strong melodrama and comedy is coupled with original ideas and effects in the making of these stories.

The script of "Tam O'Shanter," another of the Scotia Films, has had many new ideas injected into it in the past few days, it is said.

First National Purchases "Harold Teen," Comic Strip

The world's screen rights to "Harold Teen," the comic strip by Carl Ed, of which it is claimed that it has the widest circulation, continuously, of any similar strip in American newspapers, have been acquired by First National. This same firm recently produced "Ella Cinders," a story woven around another character from the comic strips. The development of a story around the Carl Ed creation is now in process and production will probably be started in the near future.

Second Swanson Film to Be Made in California

GLORIA SWANSON will produce her second independent production for United Artists, an original story by Ouida Bergere, in Hollywood; she will leave for that locality about three days after the world premiere of her "The Love of Sunya," at the Roxy Theatre, which takes place Friday of this week. It is two years since Miss Swanson made a film in Hollywood.

John Boles has been signed to a long-term contract by Miss Swanson and is to play opposite her in her second production. Albert Parker, director of "The Love of Sunya," and Pierre Bedard, production manager for Miss Swanson, left for California this week to select locations.

Von Sternberg Assigned Gangster Film

Paramount's "Underworld," a story of gangster life by Ben Hecht, will be directed by Josef Von Sternberg, director of "The Salvation Hunters," it has been definitely decided. Arthur Rosson, originally scheduled to direct the feature, was required to handle Betty Bronson's forthcoming film, "Grounds for Marriage," will be unable to finish that production before camera work is begun on "Underworld." George Bancroft and Evelyn Brent have been cast for roles in Hecht's story.

"Lea Lyon" Finally Cast; Has Change of Title

The three principals in "Lea Lyon," the Viennese play acquired thirteen months ago by Universal, will be played by Mary Philbin, the rabbi's daughter, Ivan Moskine, the prince, and Nigel de Brulier, who will enact the role of the rabbi, originally assigned Conrad Veidt, but which the German star has now relinquished. The different rumors that the Schildkrauts, father and son, and Lya De Putti were to play these three roles are unauthenticated, Universal reports.

The releasing title of "Lea Lyon" has been changed to "The Crimson Hour." Th continuity is now being prepared by Charles Kenyon. The direction will be in the hands of Edward Sloman.

Battle of Waterloo in M-G-M's "Quality Street"

The latter moments of the Battle of Waterloo and the flight of the defeated Napoleon from the field are to be depicted in the Cosmopolitan production of "Quality Street," an adaptation of the Barrie stage play by Albert Lewin and Hans Kraely. The war, however, will only hover in the background of the story. The story is to be directed by Sidney Franklin. The cast includes Conrad Nagel, Emma Dunn, Helen Jerome Eddy, Flora Finch, Margaret Seddon and Marcelle Corday.

Recreating "Aunt Mary" On the Screen

May Robson, Metropolitan Pictures player, is to transfer "Aunt Mary"—her character which she interpreted on the stage for season after season on tour—to the silver screen with the near production by Metropolitan of "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary." Utilizing over two hundred extras and employing George Siegman, James B. Lowe, Rolfe Sedan and Bill Dyer as the principals, Harry Pollard filmed the auction scene of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Most of the Southern scenes, filmed on the Mississippi River from Natchez to New Orleans, have been assembled, cut and titled. Other important sequences will be enacted next week.

Because of Carl Laemmle's decision that Harry Pollard would direct "Show Boat," double quick time has been ordered on "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

De Mille Studios Install Overhead Monorails

The De Mille studios have installed on a new stage an overhead monorail tram system, which facilitates the handling of large arc-lights, heavy props, sections of sets, etc., and by which it is possible to carry a weight to any given spot. The story, based on a tale by Frederick William Wallace, was prepared for screening purposes by Jack Cunningham.

Scates Campaign in Butte Covers Wide Range of Exploitation Features

THE all-comedy bill has been the object of many remarkable exploitation campaigns, but comparing with the best of them, and far superior to the majority, is the drive recently staged in Butte, Mont., by C. P. Scates, manager, and Walter D. Fleck, publicity chief, of the American Theatre. The films presented included, "Now or Never," "A Harem Knight," "Kitty From Killarney," an Our Gang comedy, "Telling Whoppers," and a cartoon.

The theatre in its first endeavor to create interest published a series of teaser ads in Butte newspapers carrying the line, "Anything Can Happen." This started a week in advance. A tie-up was effected with the Winter Garden, a large local dance hall, which put on a Harold Lloyd similarity contest, with a personal telegram from Mr. Lloyd presenting the cup to the winner.

The American also conducted a Mack Sennett bathing girl contest, the winner, Miss Edith Rowlands, being awarded a cup presented in a telegram from the comedy producer. The contestants appeared at the Winter Garden as well as on the programs at the American. Motion pictures were made of the girls through an arrangement with Pathe News. The bathing girls offered a splendid opportunity for a tie-up with a sporting goods store which gave Jantzen bathing suits to the participants, and brought publicity through window displays.

The American hit upon a novel idea in harnessing the aid of the Postal Telegraph messengers in delivering 5,000 messages to the Butte public.

An important feature of the exploitation was the striking manner in which the theatre front was decorated. Two laughing clown heads were placed at a V-angle on the marquee, and one directly over the box-office. Behind them amplifiers connected with a phonograph, broadcasted an "Okeh" laughing record, which attracted marked attention. The entire atmosphere of the American from the time a patron purchased a ticket, up to the laughing exit from the theatre, carried the laugh idea.

Local Views in Trailer on "It" at Lincoln Theatre

Manager W. S. Perutz made his own trailer for "It," using the reel four weeks in advance of the showing of the picture at the Lincoln Theatre in Lincoln, Neb. The "It" trailer was made up of scenes taken of three well-known people of Lincoln, the title of the reel being, "Do They Have It?" The stunt created wide interest and was used to added advantage later on, when a camera man, without a foot of film in the box, cranked the machine as though photographing crowds in various parts of the town. A sign reading, "Do You Have It?" was hung on the tripod of the camera, with the result that many people believed they were being filmed for the "movies" at the Lincoln.

Ties Up Feature With Local Safety Campaign

As the result of a tie-up with a local safety campaign, the showing of "Michael Strogoff" at the Eckel Theatre in Syracuse, N.Y., enjoyed the benefits of a wide exploitation drive. The event was sponsored by the chief of police and the Chamber of Commerce.

The theatre offered a block of passes as prizes to be awarded motorists cited by the police for their careful driving.

"Request Week" Scores at Des Moines Strand

A stunt which was the idea of Jess Day of the Strand Theatre, Des Moines, and which worked out so successfully that it is being used in a number of other houses of the Blank chain over the state of Iowa, was a Request Week in which seven of the big pictures of former years were returned to the Strand. This popularity contest for pictures resulted in the selection of seven pictures in which "The Miracle Man" won the largest vote. The other pictures which were given large choice were "The Connecticut Yankee," "The Dancing Fool," "Over the Hill," "Tol'able David," "Smilin' Through" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Votes were passed out to the patrons at the theatre to be turned in at the box office while a trailer run on the screen explained the reason for the contest.

"It" in Sales Slogans for Atlanta Window Displays

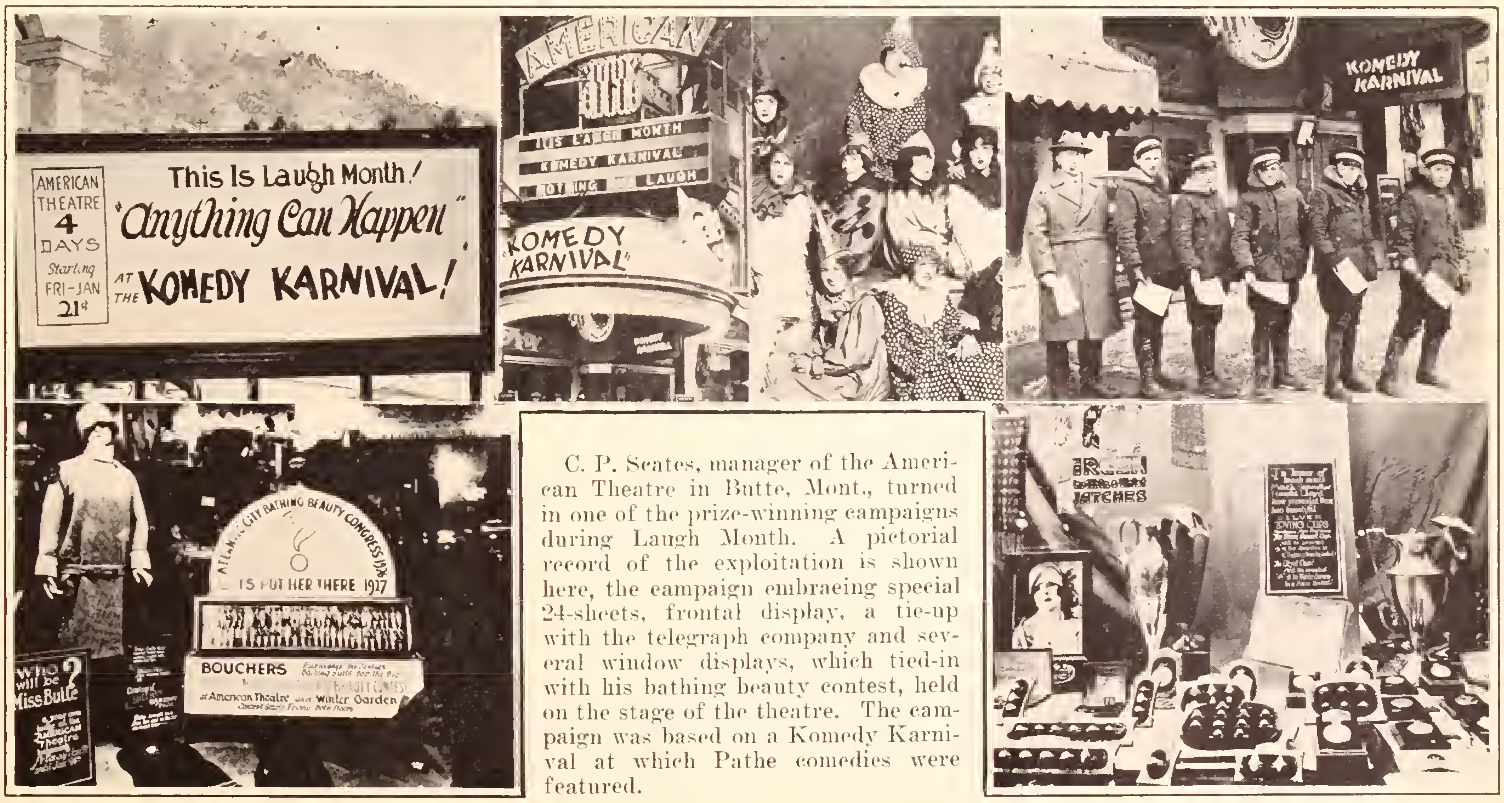
Manager Ernest Morrison pasted, planted, and published news about "It" all over Atlanta and surrounding territory when that film played at the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, Ga.

Tie-ups were secured with a number of the leading local florists, whereby they placed cards in their windows reading, "Say 'It' with flowers, see Clara Bow in 'It' at the Howard."

Girl in Stocks Feature of "Scarlet Letter" Float

Manager Walter League's ballyhoo on "The Scarlet Letter" gave people some conception of Puritan Days—when that film played the Victory Theatre, Denver, Colo.

A young lady impersonating Lillian Gish was placed in stocks, and a man in Puritan attire stood alongside the stocks holding a proclamation and a large bell. The stocks and the two characters were placed on a truck and given a ride all over the city.



C. P. Scates, manager of the American Theatre in Butte, Mont., turned in one of the prize-winning campaigns during Laugh Month. A pictorial record of the exploitation is shown here, the campaign embracing special 24-sheets, frontal display, a tie-up with the telegraph company and several window displays, which tied-in with his bathing beauty contest, held on the stage of the theatre. The campaign was based on a Komedy Karnival at which Pathe comedies were featured.

Key City Reports

New York City

LENT is here in full force, and the grosses at the picture houses are no doubt somewhat smaller than they would be otherwise, though they seem to be holding up well for the most part.

The Capitol rounded out the second week of ‘‘The Scarlet Letter’’ last week with almost exactly the $48,000 predicted for it, which, while not remarkable for the house, made a good showing for the two-week run on the whole.

This week the Capitol is showing ‘‘The Taxi Dancer,’’ which looks good for about the same as last week. A jump in attendance next week is likely, with John Gilbert in ‘‘The Show’’ coming in.

The Strand Theatre, with ‘‘An Affair of the Follies,’’ fell a little short of the $40,000 forecast for it, though the week was good. This week, with Corinne Griffith in ‘‘Three Hours,’’ attendance is strong and a prediction of $40,000 would be a safe one, from all indications.

‘‘Stark Love’’ is proving one of the surprises of the season, reaching almost $9,500 last week in the little Cameo and looking good for $7,500 or $8,000 this week. This is an unusual figure for the house, $5,000 being more common, and has resulted in the film being held for a third week.

The roadshow, attractions seem to be affected by the Lenten season somewhat more than the regular weekly change houses.

Atlanta

LOCAL business was hurt in all houses this week by exceedingly variable weather, which shifted from warm spring days to sudden cold and chilling rains. Saturday cleared, however, proving a boon to all box offices. The outstanding hit of the week was ‘‘McFadden's Flats,’’ at the big Howard Theatre. While its ticket-selling speed was imperiled Tuesday and Wednesday by the bad weather, the picture turned in an excellent week by the time Saturday night's last show had played.

Another hit was ‘‘Footloose Widows’’ at the Rialto. Starting slow, this film built to excellent returns for the week, doing an unusually good Saturday business.

‘‘The Potters,’’ on combination bill at Keith's Georgia, had especial interest because Ivy Harris, the feminine lead, is an Atlanta girl. Picture was liked generally.

‘‘The Music Master,’’ on Loew's Grand combination program, received excellent comments. The three-day change house, the Tudor, slumped badly on ‘‘Johnstown Flood’’ and ‘‘Red Hot Leather.’’ Weather affected this house considerably. ‘‘Stella Maris,’’ two days' first-run at regular second-run Cameo, had poor takings as well.

“Trail of ’98” Unit Has Special Train

A SPECIALLY chartered fifteen-car Pullman, containing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production unit making “The Trail of ’98,” has departed for the Continental Divide in Colorado where the outdoor sequences will be filmed. Charles Dorian was in charge of the party, in which are Clarence Brown, director, an assistant director, two business managers, five cameramen and a dozen technical experts and department managers. Preparations for the production of “The Trail of ’98” are being made on a large scale.

Steamers have been chartered, dog team drivers placed under contract, radio stations installed, and enough railroad equipment leased to provide sleeping quarters for hundreds of players, storage cars, diners, radio stations, hospitals, laboratories, telegraph offices, post-office, projection-rooms, commissaries and recreation halls.

Baltimore

MOVING picture business in Baltimore was affected somewhat during the week beginning Monday, February 28, by the coming of the Lenten season, but while the matinee business for Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday was somewhat off, surprising as it may seem, the last three days of the week measured up better than the first three in some cases.

The two most talked of pictures in town were ‘‘Flesh and the Devil’’ at Loew's Valencia, which proved a strong drawing card and did excellent business, and ‘‘God Gave Me Twenty Cents,’’ which pulled them in strong at the Rivoli.

‘‘Don Juan,’’ starring John Barrymore with the Vitaphone accompaniment and attractions, did fine business during its fifth week at Warners' Metropolitan and was held over for a sixth week at that playhouse, which is going very strong for Baltimore.

‘‘What Price Glory?’’ did very good during its second week at the Auditorium, a legitimate house at a $1.50 top, while ‘‘Ben-Hur’’ in the second week of its return engagement at Ford's Theatre, a legitimate theatre at $1.50 top, did good also.

The management of the Embassy was distinctly pleased with the business that was done by Lon Chaney in his reissued picture, ‘‘The Penalty,’’ which drew good houses during the entire week.

Hotel Imperial, starring Pola Negri, proved a flop with poor attendance.

Birmingham

AS a whole, business has been satisfactory in Birmingham theatres the past month, due, no doubt, to better-than-ordinary weather conditions prevailing most of the month, together with several strong attractions in the various houses. The neighborhood houses also report good business for the period.

Last week ‘‘It,’’ the Paramount picture starring Clara Bow, packed 'em at the Strand.

‘‘Getting Gertie's Garter’’ was the Empire attraction for last week, and manager-director Cunningham has supplemented it with a number of unit attractions to line up an exceptionally strong program.

Seattle

THE past week in the first-run field was disappointing, with business below the average level in all houses. At the Fifth Avenue Theatre ‘‘The Taxi Dancer’’ and a Fanchon and Marco ‘‘Yachting Idea’’ Revue attracted moderate business. The surprise of the week was the flop of Harold Lloyd in ‘‘The Kid Brother’’ at the United Artists Theatre. The picture was originally scheduled to run three weeks, but was taken off after two weeks of just average business. ‘‘Michael Stragoff,’’ in its second week at the Columbia, fared no better. At the Coliseum ‘‘The Potters’’ did a good box-office business, but this may be greatly attributed to the appearance of the widely-known Creatore as guest conductor of the Coliseum orchestra.

Oklahoma City

BUSINESS in the picture theatres in Oklahoma City was very good last week in spite of disagreeable weather. The Criterion Theare probably led in attendance with ‘‘It’’ for the week run. There was unusually good exploitation given this picture which was justified by the uniformedly full attendance. The Empress usually has a packed house on the Saturday and Sunday that begin its weekly picture, and ‘‘Orchids and Ermine’’ was no exception. The crowds were good here throughout the week. At the Capitol ‘‘Hills of Kentucky’’ ran for the first four days of the week to good business and finished up the week with ‘‘Kentucky Dancers’’ doing well. The Liberty did a good business with ‘‘Summer Bachelors,’’ but not enough to keep it through the week. On Thursday the bill changed to ‘‘Whispering Wires,’’ which made a good week-end showing.

Boston

THEATRES in Boston proper played to unusually large audiences the first three days of the past week. The expected sliding off on Ash Wednesday for the opening of the Lenten season failed to be half as big a bugbear to the picture houses as anticipated. Wednesday business was rather light but came back strong for the balance of the week. Competition continues keen, bringing out good bills. The Metropolitan played ‘‘The Third Degree’’ to packed houses six of the seven days and opened up strong Saturday on ‘‘A Kiss in a Taxi.’’ Loew's State, with ‘‘Flesh and the Devil,’’ played to crowded houses. ‘‘What Price Glory’’ continues to play to audiences taking every seat at the Majestic and holds over. "Faust" continued to fill Loew's Orpheum throughout the week. "Marriage" and "Rubber Tires" were the double features at the twin houses, the Beacon and Modern.

Worcester theatres played to record business the opening of last week with slightly smaller houses on and after Wednesday but with much larger box office receipts than at the same period a year ago. "It" at Poli's filled the house and "Tell It to the Marines" opened Saturday to capacity. "Orchids and Ermines" at the Palace, "The Last Trail" at the Mark-Strand, "Wine, Woman and Song" at the Plaza, "The Wrong Mr. Wright" at the Olympia, "The Magic Garden" at the Capitol, and a generally good program at other houses brought out the crowds.

Hartford continues to report excellent business with no dropping off in attendance during the mid-week. "Let It Rain" at the Palace, "The Mysterious Rider" at Poli's Capitol, "Michael Strogoff" at the Strand, "Flesh and Blood" at the Princess and "The Truthful Sex" at the Majestic are examples of the keenly entertaining programs which made up the week's bills.

Memphis

ON account of inclement weather last week, "Michael Strogoff," the big Universal feature, got away to a bad start at the Pantages Theatre, but Tuesday it hit a stride that augured well for attendance the remainder of the showing. Pantages is commemorating the sixth anniversary of the dedication of his Memphis house.

A switch in the billing of Loew's Palace Theatre from "Kiss in a Taxi" to "McFadden's Flats," was due to the fact that the print on the former was not completed. With only three days' billing, Manager C. B. Stiff declared that Charlie Murray and Chester Conklin are putting "McFadden's Flats" over in good shape. Loew's Palace is the home of Publix.

Manager Sullivan, of Loew's State Theatre, reports big business with John Gilbert in "Flesh and the Devil." Ben Steinback, veteran publicity man, worked out an advertising campaign embracing extra newspaper space and extra outside billing that brought fine results to the Loew vaudeville house.

The Memphis Censor Board three years ago barred Mabel Normand from local screens, but Mabel's recent illness evidently lifted the ban, because two Normand pictures—the last "Raggedy Rose"—went over big on the picture program at the Lyceum, where pictures are run in connection with tabloid musical comedy.

Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS movie houses had an off week last week. The touch of pre-spring weather, coupled with Lent, failed to swell box office receipts. "Tell It To The Marines," at the Apollo, was the feature picture of the week. It had a fair run and was held over.

"Winning of Barbara Worth" at the Circle, and "The Show" at Ohio, were the other big pictures. Neighborhood houses reported a drop.

The Vitaphone at the Circle, which made its debut in Indianapolis this week, was the feature attraction for Hoosier movie fans. The $50,000 Vitaphone which will be featured at every show marks a new era of entertainment in this city.

Central Pennsylvania

BUSINESS slightly below the average in practically all the first-run houses in the business center, was Harrisburg's record for the past week. The Colonial's offering, "The Blonde Saint," got away with a poor start early in the week, but toward the end proved to have considerable pulling power.

Only fair box office returns came in from the presentation of "The Red Mill," at Loew's Regent, and although the press reviews were favorable the film did not seem to have enough appeal to fill all the seats even at the night performances.

"The Mysterious Rider" scored fairly well at the Victoria. At the Broad Street Theatre, "The Honeymoon Express" took well. A counter-attraction, that perhaps served to reduce the crowds at the movie theatres, was George White's Scandals, which showed for the last three nights of the week and Saturday matinee at the Majestic.

Albany

THE opening of Lent did not seriously affect business at the motion picture theatres in Albany, Troy and Schenectady, according to owners and managers of the houses. Business held up especially well throughout the past week, with the result that in a number of instances the managers of the larger houses have decided to make a drive for business during the Lenten season and instead of holding some of the bigger attractions for the latter part of April and May, they will show these during Lent.

At the Mark Strand, in Albany, "McFadden's Flats" proved to be one of the biggest drawing cards in many weeks. In all justice, however, to the presentation act, which was Marie MacQuarrie's "Harp Ensemble," it should be said that this act also contributed to the enormous crowds that flocked to the theatre for the six days.

"The Sap," the first of the week at the Mark Ritz, and "Marriage" the last half, did not pull anything remarkable in the way of crowds. "An Affair of the Follies," at the Leland, did only normal business. There was, however, an automobile show running the entire week, that proved strong competition. In Oneonta "Flesh and the Devil," running for four days at the Opera House, did capacity business.

Des Moines

IN connection with the showing of "The Fire Brigade" at the Des Moines Theatre last week it was found that the rather sensational advertising and the tie-up with the fire department, etc., in a number of ways tended to attract a new trade to the theatre that had not hitherto been noticed at this house. On the other hand, regular patrons of the theatre on the first two days did not come in so large a number until by word of mouth advertising they learned that the picture was a very worthwhile feature. The picture did a very fine week's business.

"The Sorrows of Satan" was played up with a good deal of extra newspaper space and did a good bit of business though the picture itself was not entirely satisfactory and did not please generally. The Capitol Theatre has had two very good weeks with "An Affair of the Follies," which was placed with a strong bill. Billie Dove meets with warm approval from Des Moines audiences.

This last week "The Red Mill" has done very well, although the picture itself is a light feature; but, run with the whole bill of splendid offerings at the Capitol, including a fine Publix Stage Show, the picture met with a good reception. The Strand does just about the same average of business whatever is shown. "Women Love Diamonds" probably did as well as any of the pictures, the best on a half-week's run.

Kansas City

"THE PRINCE OF TEMPTERS," the feature picure, went over good and attracted favorable comment all last week by patrons. At the Liberty Theatre "Men of Purpose," a war production, under the auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, was held over for a second week, but attendance did not live up to expectations, business dwindling off at the end of the week.

At the Royal Theatre, however, Clara Bow in "It" proceeded to pack them in all week, making it self-evident that the picture would have to be held a second week. At the Newman "The Red Mill" played only to a fair week's attendance.

If the first week's attendance, backed up by a big business the second week, can be accepted as a barometer, Kansas City has accepted the Mainstreet Theatre's new policy of a movable stage and presentation type of vaudeville unanimously. Gail and Bob Sherwood's orchestra, which predominates throughout the program, has been engaged for a period of sixteen weeks, the vaudeville acts performing in front of the orchestra on the stage, which is 33 feet wide and 15 feet deep, its motive power being an elevator motor. As it now is arranged the stage may be made to move about forty feet. By changing the tracks it may be made to enter from the sides of the proscenium and completely disappear if necessary, the surface being arranged so that it can be constructed at various levels.

Milwaukee

THE beginning of Lent last week made an appreciable difference in theatre business throughout the city. Attendance was a little better on Friday and showed promise of picking up for the next week. The Alhambra with "The Cheerful Fraud," felt the Lenten slump only slightly. "Love's Greatest Mistake," at the Wisconsin, and "Paradise for Two" at the Strand proved popular. "Scarlet Letter," held over at the Merrill for a second week's showing, had fairly good support. An unusually strong vaudeville bill at the Palace Orpheum, with "Jim the Conqueror" as photoplay, took the cream of downtown business and made competition keen.

The neighborhood houses fared better during the week, and according to managers of several outlying houses, business was good.

Salt Lake City

A NEW orchestra is now at the Paramount Empress Theatre. The orchestra is under the direction of Curg Peterson, a prominent Salt Lake musician. The picture shown at the Paramount the week of February 28 was "The Marriage Clause," and is going over very good. In addition to the picture program at this theatre a presentation act is offered by Miss Carol Dore of the Keith and Orpheum Circuit, entitled "A Violinistic Interlude."

Commencing March 3rd, the Paramount Empress Theatre will run "Tell It To The Marines," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, for a period of nine days.

The presentation act offered at the Paramount Empress Theatre during the showing of "Tell It To The Marines" will be "Around the World with the Marines," a revue participated in by twenty-five people.

Minneapolis

DOWNTOWN business in the Minneapolis theatres was not much better than average last week, despite unusually fine weather, which was a good deal more like April weather than early March. The best picture business was recorded at the State, where George Beban and his company of 27 players appeared in conjunction with the photoplay, "The Loves of Riccardo." This attraction received good reviews in the papers, the "Star" and "Tribune" gave good space to interviews with Mr. Beban, and as a result the State did an excellent business.

Harold Lloyd in "The Kid Brother" did fairly well during his second week at the Strand, but the business was not sufficient to warrant a third week. This is rather unusual, as Lloyd is generally good for three weeks at the Strand. At the Garrick Estelle Taylor in "New York" showed to average houses, and the same may be said concerning Madge Bellamy in "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl" at the Lyric.

Business at the leading outlying houses, the Loring, the Rialto, and the Lagoon, was reported good. As a whole, it was a rather lifeless week, with Beban and his company providing the one bright spot on the box office horizon.

Cleveland

WITH the exception of Ash Wednesday, the first-run houses all reported normal business for the past week. "Don Juan" played to capacity houses at the Stillman right up to the final performance of the three weeks' engagement. "McFadden's Flats" maintained its record peak at the Cameo and is being held over at least another week and possibly two more weeks. "The Music Master" packed Keith's Palace both afternoons and evenings. "Altars of Desire" was surprisingly successful at the State. "The Red Mill" did fair business at the Allen. "When the Wife's Away" was a satisfactory comedy feature that topped a well-balanced vaudeville and presentation program at Reade's Hippodrome.

"The World War," official war pictures strung together and presented under the auspices of the American Legion, was such a tremendous success at the Metropolitan that S.R.O. signs were brought out the first day of the run and used every day thereafter.

Rin Tin Tin in "Hills of Kentucky" ran an average for the week at the Park, and "The City" at Keith's East 105th Street, also did average business. The Circle, featuring Vitaphone, offered "Summer Bachelors" as the film attraction. Vitaphone is still sufficient of a novelty in this city to be the main attraction of the program. The picture, however, pleased.

Neighborhood houses reported that the beginning of Lent showed a noticeable falling off of business. Al Sirat Grotto presented the London Hippodrome Circus at the Public Auditorium. Al Jolson was playing at the Hanna and the Marx Brothers were playing in "The Cocoanuts" at the Ohio. Weather was mild. Competition was keen all along Euclid Avenue. The week's business strengthened the theory that a lot of good shows presented simultaneously, stimulate business at all of the theatres.

Ottawa

DOWNTOWN moving picture theatres of Ottawa, Ontario, encountered considerable opposition during the week of February 28 through the staging of two amateur hockey playoffs, which drew record crowds, and a professional hockey game, while an additional counter-attraction was the re-opening of the Capital Theatre for dramatic stock. The picture palaces held their own nicely, however, although business on Ash Wednesday did not come up to expectations. Usually, Ash Wednesday is a government holiday and the 15,000 civil servants in the Canadian capital are free to do what they please. This year, however, the government did not declare a holiday for its employes and matinees were smaller than usual.

B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, drew well with "New York" and a harmonica contest which was staged by Manager J. M. Franklin. The Regent Theatre had a very popular bill with "Sorrows of Satan," the Delaney-Maloney fight pictures and "The Collegians." Much interest was taken in the boxing feature because of the fact that Delaney is a French-Canadian. The Centre Theatre opened poorly with "The Music Master," but business improved during the week. "The Last Frontier" was a fair attraction at the Imperial Theatre.

St. Louis

DESPITE the advent of the Lenten season the first-run theatres of St. Louis, Mo., enjoyed very satisfactory business during the week which closed on March 4.

The weather was mild on most days and the programs on the screen and stages of the several houses were attractive. Good average crowds resulted.

Sex was the big appeal of most of the pictures and this was played up in the newspaper advertising. This fact caused some unfavorable comment and resulted in an adverse editorial in the St. Louis "Star," which is the leading advertising medium of the local picture houses.

"A Kiss in a Taxi" was on the screen of the Missouri and Bebe Daniels' fans and fanettes were out in numbers to see her do her kissing. At the Grand Central and West End Lyric "Sensation Seekers" pulled their share of the week's business.

In the downtown houses the Ambassador and Loew's State, the attendance was up to expectations. "Valencia" was on the screen at the State and "Just Another Blonde" at the big Skouras house.

Neighborhood houses reported an apparent slump in business after Ash Wednesday. The outlying houses are always more quick to respond to religious seasons.

Hornblow Is Production Aide to Sam Goldwyn

A CONTRACT was this week signed by Arthur Hornblow, Jr., adaptor of the stage production, "The Captive," and during recent years associated with Charles Frohman Company and Robert Milton Company in the production of stage plays, whereby Mr. Hornblow will assume the position of production assistant to Samuel Goldwyn.

Mr. Hornblow leaves Saturday, March 12th, for Hollywood to take up his new duties immediately upon his arrival there. The arrangement calls for Mr. Hornblow being the producer's close personal associate in all matters pertaining to the preparation and filming of Goldwyn productions.

Henry Nathanson Regal General Sales Manager

Henry Nathanson, former special Pathe representative with Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, has been appointed general manager of sales in Canada for Regal in succession to Phil. Kauffman, who has gone to Berlin, Germany, to become Central European sales manager for First National. Henry Nathanson, who is a brother of N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, recently returned to Canada from Miami, Fla., where he had been enjoying a vacation.

Arthur Cohen continues as vice-president and general manager of Regal, which distributes Warner Bros., Metro-Goldwyn, Pathe and other products in the Dominion. W. F. Haynor, who has been Metro sales representative in Canada for some time, has been appointed to a new Regal position, that of general sales representative at the Toronto home office of Regal Films.

Ruth Dwyer Leading Lady In Monty Banks Film

Following camera tests of over a score of pretty applicants, Ruth Dwyer has been chosen as leading lady to Monty Banks in the Pathe comedian's "A Perfect Gentleman," production on which has just begun with Clyde Bruckman, director of "Horse Shoes," again wielding the megaphone over Banks. Jean Arthur, Banks' leading lady in "Horse Shoes," could not be secured for "A Perfect Gentleman" because the latter production conflicted with a First National picture in which she was already working.

Ernie Wood, who appeared in "Atta Boy" and "Horse Shoes," will also have an important role in "A Perfect Gentleman."

George Beban Plans School for Thespian Training

Screen aspirants will be trained free of charge at a school in Hollywood, if the plans of George Beban, as outlined in an interview in Minneapolis, come to pass. The actor stated that he would retire from screen and theatrical work at the end of the present season and would open a school to coach at his own expense candidates who aspire to the cinema.

THE CHECK-UP

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

PATHE'S premier contributors of two-reel subjects, Hal Roach and Mack Sennett, are represented on the Pathe short feature bill for March 20 with a two-reeler apiece. The Sennett offering is "A Small Town Princess," while the Roach Star comedy bears the title of "Duck Soup." "Cash and Carry" and "Jail Birds" Two New Christies

"Cash and Carry" and "Jail Birds" are the titles of two new Christie comedies just completed and soon to be released by Educational. The first is an original by Sid Herzig and stars Bobby Vernon with Frances Lee appearing opposite him. The second features Neal Burns and Edna Marion heads the supporting cast. In the Vernon comedy supporting roles are taken by George Hall, George Burton, Phil Salvadore, Jack Gray, Tom Dempsey, Bob North, George O'Dell and Charles Meakin. Walter Graham directed. Bill Irving and Billy Engel are two of Burns' supporting players in "Cash and Carry," which Arvid Gillstrom directed from an original scenario by Frank Roland Conklin.

Lantz Concentrating on "Hot Dog Cartoons"

Putting aside, for a time at least, his "Un-natural History Cartoons," Walter Lantz, artist-animator of the Bray studios, will concentrate solely on the "Hot Dog Cartoons," starring that Lantz creation, "Pete, the Pup." The latest adventure of the canine star was "S'matter Pete?" and the next one, now in production, is "The Lunch Hound." Following this there will be "Pete's Pow-Wow" and "Jungle Belles."

How Schaefer Won Laugh Month Prize

Campaign Embraced Practically Every Known Tie-Up Form

THE exploitation and publicity campaign conducted by David Schaefer at the Central Theatre, Jersey City, which won him the first prize in the Laugh Month contest, was so comprehensive that it would be difficult to find any angle which had not been covered. Business for the house increased 35 per cent. during the Laugh period, states Mr. Schaefer, but the campaign was put over at little expense due to the fact that most of the decorated material was preserved from last year's Laugh Month and the tie-ups were secured through co-operative advertising.

The campaign included use of a screen trailer for two weeks in advance of the special Laugh Week which was the center of the Central's Laugh Month activities; a free co-operative advertising tie-up with all the street cars and buses in Jersey City; endorsements from the Governor of the state of New Jersey, the mayor and other officials of Jersey City, pastors of all denominations and others of importance, which endorsements were used in a full-page newspaper co-operative ad and in other ways.

Mr. Schaefer also distributed 5,000 "Laugh Insurance Policies," arranged a tie-up with the College Humor Magazine in which 5,000 of these magazines were distributed; gave away much valuable merchandise through other tie-ups with dealers; decorated the entire front of the theatre elaborately with electric light festoons and cut-outs; displayed a mechanical clock saying "It's time to laugh," and used a phonograph which continuously played laugh records. The interior of the lobby was profusely decorated; all ushers and musicians were dressed in grotesque laugh costumes. Many other attractive features were arranged, such as balloon and confetti showers in the theatre during the performances, a street parade ballyhoo, souvenirs, etc.

A "Komedy Karnival Week" was featured at the American Theatre in Butte, Mont., in a masterly campaign which won the second prize for Manager C. P. Scates. Teaser ads, contest tie-ups, a Mack Sennett bathing beauty contest, tie-ups with a sporting goods store, distribution of 5,000 telegrams in a tie-up with the Postal Telegraph Company, distribution of 5,000 numbered tickets to school children giving chances on twelve "Our Gang" dolls and attractive lobby displays featured Mr. Scates' comprehensive campaign.

(Fox-Van Bibber—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is a hectic, action-filled, slap-dash farce-comedy which will evoke many laughs. While it boasts a Richard Harding Davis origin, it would be hard to trace the ancestry to that gifted writer. But that does not matter. Probably undiluted Davis would be caviar to most film fans, while Andrew Bennison and Phil Whitman, scenarists, must satisfy, as they unquestionably do, otherwise Fox would not continue to employ them. The usual formula is employed in this one. "Van Bibber" Earle Foxe is the goat. In this particular picture there has been an unusual number of automobile robberies. The thieves have shown the greatest possible nerve and daring, even stealing a patrol wagon. Van Bibber solves the problem and captures the ring leader. Not that he is bright, but through the famous Van Bibber luck.

While these may not be the most intellectual pictures in the world, they possess the unquestioned merit of much action, good acting and being the cause of many laughs. Not only is Foxe good, but he is ably supported by Ralph Sipperly, Ben Bard, Virginia Bradford and Harry Dunkinson.

Directed by Orville Dull. Supervised by George R. E. Marshall. Story by Richard Harding Davis. Scenario by Andrew Bennison and Phil Whitman. Cameraman King Grey. Released April 10.

"The Magician"

(Pathe-Æsop Fable—One Reel)

THIS is one of the funniest and one of the wildest fables which has been released in months. I have always mentally bowed to the men who can sit back and week after week think out situations and ideas for their animated cartoons and never duplicate. And this is beyond anything that has been dreamed of for months. Start with the premise that Thomas Cat is possessed of magic and then think of what he does with this magic gift. He not only creates out of the air a dress for his beloved but an interchangable car that is an automobile one moment, a motor cycle the next and a bicycle the third. And into a chop-suey joint where the yellow peril is at its yellowist. A pursuit up and down the sides of buildings with countless followers of Confucius after Thomas.

The moral of the tale is so perfectly true: if you look for trouble in this world you do not have to look far because always it is waiting around the corner. This is not the phrasing of the lesson but it is the spirit of the cartoon—PAUL THOMPSON.

"A Small Town Princess"

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THIS is an unusually pretentious two-reeler in the amount of money that obviously has gone into the making. The story, by Phil Whitman, satirizes the movie craze. Madeline Hurlock comes from a small, Middle-West town to Hollywood. She has a movie complex and is one of the 'steen million who are crazy about a typical movie actor, portrayed in this instance by David Manor. She meets him in the movie capitol and also because she finances herself as a Russian princess gets a contract from a pair of movie producers who co-star the two. Billy Bevan, who comes from the same town that she does, is logically given the "go-by" once she has met the actor. He in revenge, because he is supposed to be a Russian Bolshevik, threatens to blow up the office and the producing plant of the movie producers.

Assembled about Bevan and Miss Hurlock is quite an extraordinary company. Names such as Nat Carr and Budd Ross, famous not only in the moving picture world but also in the legitimate theatre, are found in the cast.

"Somebody's Fault"

(Educational-Hamilton—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

IF it were possible, the studio electrician should have his name in the marquee as the star of this production, for it is through his ingenuity that most of the laughs are achieved. Lloyd Hamilton helps considerably, but most of the fun is in the amusing mechanical mishaps occasioned by the tapping of a high voltage wire to produce "juice" for an ordinary lighting system.

Hamilton gets a job as an electrician's helper and together they proceed to repair defective wiring in the home of Estelle Bradley. Hamilton, knowing nothing of electricity, balls up the works to such an extent that the final scene shows the home demolished.

Hamilton, with the studio staff's help, has succeeded in turning out a rather entertaining effort.

"A Perfect Day"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

THEY won't stand up in their seats and cheer for this one, but it will induce a few quiet chuckles. The children will get quite a kick out of the antics of the cast and the props because of the slapstick, but those over twenty-one may find the going slow. George Davis and Phil Dunham visit a girls' school which houses a very pretty miss in the person of Estelle Bradley, likewise a rather homely one—Elfie Fay made up for this role.

Follows the usual mistakes at the dinner table (candlesticks for asparagus tips), the moving of a prop piano, playing the bass fiddle with a sword as the bow, etc. The ending is rather abrupt, but I was satisfied.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Duck Soup"

(Pathe-Hal Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IN the same Pathe release of March 20th with the Mack Sennett comedy, "A Small Town Princess," featuring the beauteous Madeline Hurlock, is a Hal Roach picture in which the same actress plays the leading role. I have seen few pictures in the past several months that have as complicated a plot as this one possesses. Two tramps, seated on a park bench, are about to be picked up by the local police and catapaulted into the forest-fire patrol. Fleeing from their oppressors they take refuge in an aristocratic Beverly Hills mansion whose owner has just left for an African hunting trip. The tramps start to sub-lease the house to an Englishman and his bride. Before they succeed in doing this the owner returns. From this premise you can deduce the rapid-fire fun which Fred Guiol, the director, has created. F. Richard Jones supervised the comedy.

In the company are not only Madeline Hurlock and Stan Laurel, who are starred, but also Oliver Hardy, William Austin and James Marcus.

"Hot Lightning"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

FAST action and the knockabout antics of the male members of the cast are the highlights of this Mermaid production, which features some fairly good comedians. Clem Beauchamp is invited to become manager of a hotel, which he does after experiencing considerable difficulty in gaining entrance. Once he does, the fun begins when the slapstick type of comedy ordinarily seen in productions of this brand is brought into play. Clem and George Davis, aided and abetted by the rest of the cast, succeed in making a shambles of the guests and the rooms before they become the victims of a rain storm accompanied by a gale which finally wrecks the hotel.

"Felix Sees 'Em in Season"

(Educational-Sullivan—One Reel)

A MILDLY amusing effort is projected in this latest Sullivan cat cartoon, which deals with the cartoonist's observance of the arrival of spring through the eyes of Felix. Coincident with the coming of this season is the period in which everyone is afflicted with that mysterious malady known as spring fever. The greater portion of this reel is devoted to pen and ink impressions detailing the efforts of birds, beasts and fish to battle the ennui superinduced by the disease and their failure to overcome it. Felix fares no better, even to the extent of tolerating a mouse.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

Film Fun Contest Winner In New Billy Dooley Comedy

Ruth Perrine's initial work in pictures may be glimpsed in "Dumb Belles," an Educational-Billy Dooley comedy in which the gob comedian has the principal comedy role. Miss Perrine won the recent Film Fun test.

Metropolis

Fantastic and Unusual Film Is Truly Different

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

AS different from the usual run of films as "The Last Laugh" and "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" is this weird, fantastic and exceptionally interesting product of Ufa—which flies the Paramount banner. The picture is difficult to define. In calling it a sort of dream play one cannot go far wrong. It projects an uncanny idea which appeals to the imagination. The parties involved in making it—these include the players—permit us to peer into the future and see the outcome of it all when man has electrified industry and brought forth the triumph of mechanical power.

The central plot concerns the rebellion of a youth to subscribe to his father's idea that the latter's workers are hopeless plodders chained to menial tasks. It also builds a romance seen in the infatuation of the boy for a girl evangelist. The heroine also experiences some unhappy moments when she is employed by an electrical genius as the model for a mechanical girl.

These points mentioned above provide the skeleton of the plot. But the real interest of the film is found in its camera effects which are truly unique. These present a wealth of graphic shots having to do with electrical and mechanical apparatus. It is certainly rich in photographic appeal.

The Cast: Alfred Abel, Gustav Froelich, Rudolf Klein-Rogge, Theodor Loos, Heinrich George, Brigitte Helm. Director, Fritz Lang. Cameras, Karl Freund, Gunther Rittau.

THEME: Fantastic story of what the future has in store when we are governed by electrical and mechanical puppets.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The marvelous camera shots. The detail. The lighting. The imaginative scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up as something vastly different. Appeal to all classes—stressing the imagination behind it. Play up its theme and emphasize its mystery, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Should attract all intelligent patrons. For the best houses.

Produced by Ufa. Distributed by Famous Players.

Mother

Kathleen Norris' Novel Picturized

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THIS has a lot of the melodrama which most movie-fans love. For a finale there is a train wreck which is most effective and thrilling. In this disaster the mother not only saves her son from a runaway marriage with a flapper but also saves her husband from going through with an affair with a blonde. (Curious how the Anita Loos theory always bobs up in life or plays!) If one were to evolve a line that tells the whole story of this Kathleen Norris novel, made into a picture by J. Leo Meehan, it would be the trite but possibly true line "the woman pays and pays and pays."

Belle Bennett inherits some money. With true feminine and wifely self-sacrifice she uses this money to establish her husband in business. Man-like he forgets the self-sacrifice which she has been capable of and starts to philander with the afore-mentioned blonde. As though this were not enough of a burden for a woman to carry, her son plays the game of the younger generation. That means, if you require an explanation, carrying a pocket flask and seeking the company of flappers and youths of his own age, the "flaming youth" type. He refuses to recognize the danger signal and heads straight for disaster. Then comes the denouement of the train wreck in which not only the son but the husband are rescued.

As said before, it is wild melodrama but quite well done. It is another achievement to the credit of Director Meehan.

The Cast: Belle Bennett, Crauford Kent, William Bakewell, Joyce Coad, Mabel Julienne Scott, Sam Allen, Charlotte Stevens. Director, J. Leo Meehan. Cameraman, Allen Siegler.

THEME: Self-sacrifice of a woman for her husband and son.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Good acting of a well-balanced cast. Melodramatic finale in train wreck.

DRAWING POWER: Should be good.

Length, 6,885 feet. Released May 1st.
Produced and distributed by F.B.O.

Let It Rain

Humor and Gags Are Fairly Amusing

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS picture doesn't provide such a happy occasion for Douglas MacLean as some of his recent efforts. It is quite trivial, always obvious and relies solely upon its gags and humor to score its points. The influence of "We're In the Navy Now" as a mirth provoker is very pronounced here, but it doesn't click with half the appeal—probably because we have seen so much of the marines the past season.

The piece carries more melodrama than what is anticipated in the title. After showing some scenes aboard ship in which the central figure and his boy friend don't take marine life very seriously (they're always cutting up didoes before their superior officers—to say nothing of falling for the charms of a fair visitor) the characters experience plenty of high jinks which alternate with gags and red-hot action.

The marine is assigned to the job of guarding the mails—and the land scenes provide most of the punch. There is some good slapstick employed in capturing the robbers. And the subtitles are pithy and to the point. As for the acting it is competent all the way.

THEME: Comedy-Melodrama based upon romantic and humorous adventures in life of marine who wins his stripes in capturing mail robbers.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The scenes aboard the ship. The meeting with the girl. The conflict between the marine and the gob. The slapstick and action aboard the train. The atmosphere. The subtitles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The title can stand a lot of teasing. Bill it as companion piece to "We're In the Navy Now." Use stills of star. Tie up with Legion posts, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Star's popularity, background of story and title should attract them. O. K. for any house.

Length, six reels. Released March, 1927.
Produced and distributed by Famous Players.

The Return of the Riddle Rider

Arthur Reeve Turns the Trick Again

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

SUPERLATIVES one uses sparingly. Consequently, when they are used they have a value that really means something. Only superlatives can do justice to the Universal thriller that marks the return to the screen of that character, "The Riddle Rider," who possesses all the fascination of the unknown which intrigues us all. Granted that we are all children and love a detective story, whether it is written by "Old Sleuth," Gaborieau, Stevenson or Kipling. And from that premise you will deduce the hold that this serial is going to have on the fans who see it. You will emerge, as I did, from the first chapters admiring the kind of brain that can evolve so many complicated situations that you find yourself lost trying to figure out what will happen next and how the hero and heroine will be rescued from the scrapes into which the writer has plunged them.

It is a sort of super-western which not only includes hard riding and all the other things which you associate with that type of picture but also intrigue, politics, a love story and every other ingredient that you can possibly ask for. For a matter of fact there are enough plots and complications to serve for several pictures. From the foregoing, I think, you will gather that I recommend absolutely "The Return of the Riddle Rider."

The Cast: William Desmond, Lola Todd, Tom London, Henry Barrows, Grace Cunard, Lewis Dayton, Norbert Myles, Scotty Mattraw. Director, Robert Hill. Authors, Arthur Reeve and Fred J. McConnell.

THEME: A western mystery serial that deals with political corruption and every other element that you can possibly demand in one picture.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The constant succession of thrills in every chapter. The photography. The ingenuity Arthur Reeve displays in his plot construction.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: All of the foregoing.

DRAWING POWER: Should be excellent.

Length, ten chapters of two reels each. First chapter released March 8th.
Produced and distributed by Universal.

New York and New Jersey

OF course the following is rated by all good trade papers as "front news," particularly at a time, when a motion picture palace said to be the greatest in the world, is about to open its doors to the public. We refer to the Roxy Theatre—and as it was our privilege to wander through this great playhouse—named after a great showman—it is not entirely out of the way to make a short statement in this column, for surely, it is located in this zone.

The Roxy is everything the owners claim—and that's considerable, if you have perchance followed the trade paper articles and newspaper advertising. The ideas of the architects and those of Roxy, undoubtedly interwoven in the blue-prints, have at last materialized into a monument to the industry that above all is dignified in every sense of the word. Dignified, yet enough flash to satisfy any of those who may wish to escape drab environment.

Space will not permit going into detail here and therefore, but a few points are brought out. One in particular is the illusion of size. Standing on the stage and looking toward the balcony one is prompted to question the 6,200 seats claimed. But our guide replied, "yes, that's what everyone says, but the seats are there—count them if you feel like it." And that was part of the architect's art in designing the Roxy—vastness and intimacy combined.

Backstage is a revelation. There is a huge cyclorama that weighs in the neighborhood of 9,000 pounds and is raised, lowered and shifted by electric motors. All the heavy pieces are moved in this manner. There are big spots and little spots on both sides and in the rear. More different spots than this writer ever saw in any theatre. And don't forget that there is a completely equipped rear projection room for "effects." Except that we might mention that there is a big asbestos curtain that measures a foot in thickness, we will stop right here—for there's no end. Go see for yourselves one of the finest motion picture theatres ever built.

Peter Adams and brother, of Newark, may or may not be planning to increase their theatre holdings, but anyway, they've recently purchased property on Market Street, Newark. At present, they operate the Newark Theatre, Newark, and the U. S., in Patterson.

Marsh Amusement Company has taken over the City Island Theatre, now under construction.

Two motion picture theatres in Brooklyn have closed, owing to the fact that the property owners have other plans in view for the future. One is the Comedy Theatre, Jamaica. owned by J. J. Alterman. This house ceased to function the early part of this week and it is said that the building will be replaced by a large and modern theatre. Fanny Lightstone's Select Theatre, reported last week as about to close its doors, is now definitely said to be out of business, due to the owner having exercised a "sixty day" clause in the lease. It is reported that a Woolworth store will take the Select site. In all probability Exhibitress Lightstone will soon be operating another theatre.

An interesting change of management in a local theatre is Ray Lestrange's appointment to take charge of the New 125th Street, located on 125th, between Third and Lexington avenues, Harlem. This house is a link in the circuit operated by Steiner, Blinderman and Harsten and has had considerable newspaper publicity in connection with certain public officials who were not entirely convinced that a nursery type of entertainment was being shown inside its doors. On account of these officials who every once in awhile visited the house in a none too friendly manner, the box office is said to have suffered, and it will be Lestrange's job to get the house back on a more lucrative basis. This, he is undoubtedly well equipped to do, having had plenty of experience in all phases of the show business, legitimate, vaudeville, road shows and pictures. He has also been a publicity and exploitation man and has been connected with various theatrical enterprises along these lines. His friends wish him success in an endeavor which he has been singularly successful with in the past—that of building up and reorganizing theatres.

Incidentally, it will be recalled that Ray Lestrange's father was "Mike" Lestrange, veteran player who used to don the mask and breast-protector for the Brooklyn Nationals.

The Hudson Theatre, 155th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, closed for a short time on account of a small fire, reopened last Saturday.

Calderone's new Mineola Theatre, equipped by the National Supply Company, will open Friday evening of this week.

The City Hall Theatre was another house recently visited by fire but is again open for business, due to replacement service from National Supply.

Julius Joelson will establish headquarters at 1560 Broadway, March 15, according to report. The present office is at the Crescent Theatre.

The American and Model theatres, Yonkers, are to change over to new ownership about the middle of March, it is said. The future owner is unnamed at the present time and is a newcomer in the motion picture business.

Harry Harris will add another house to his growing circuit when he takes over Leo Brecher's Washington Theatre, 147th Street and Amsterdam Avenue. The house will be closed for the next three weeks to permit alterations.

Another house to be closed for a period of four weeks to make alterations is Leo Och's Costello Theatre.

Joe Hornstein, Eastern zone manager for National Supply, is back from a Chicago business trip. National has moved their big office staff from the third to the fourth floor of 1560 Broadway. This was due to an increase in personnel brought about by business growth.

The new studio of the Kilgen Organ Company, also on the fourth floor of 1560 Broadway, will soon be ready for its formal opening. Broadcasting will occur here in tie-up with National Supply. W. S. O. M., radio station of the Hotel Somerset, will probably be used as the medium.

L. J. Bennett has taken over the Rialto Theatre at Pekin, Ill., and will be in personal charge of the house.

The Grand Ball and Movie Frolic Committee, headed by Ludwig Siegel, is working hard in preparation for the big event to be held at the Stevens Hotel Wednesday, May 4th. A handsome one-sheet is in the hands of the printer and advertising trailers are being prepared which will be shown at all Chicago theatres. The Movie Ball Committee is to meet with the musical directors from various theatres within the next few days and complete arrangements for the entertainment program which will be an important feature of the Ball. Eddie Grossman has been given charge of the program and it is reported that considerable advertising space has already been signed up. Mr. Grossman is making his headquarters at the Exhibitors' Association of Chicago's office, 845 S. Wabash Avenue.

Divisional Manager Cleve Adams of F.B.O. arrived at his local headquarters Saturday, after a prolonged swing around the circuit, and left again on Monday evening for Milwaukee, where he will remain for several days.

Frank Schaefer of the Crystal Theatre is well again after being confined to his home for several days with an attack of the grippe.

William C. Brockhoff has purchased Seipp's Auditorium at Palatine, Ill., from Manager Brown, and is now operating the house on a three change a week policy.

Bill Jenner, former Chicago exhibitor, and now connected with First National, arrived in Chicago Wednesday, en route to New York. A number of Mr. Jenner's old Chicago friends gave him a hearty welcome.

Cleveland

THE National Theatre Supply Company's Cleveland office has undergone a complete change of personnel. Leo Dwyer, manager of the office since the taking over of the Theatre Supply Company of which he was president, by the National Theatre Supply Company, has resigned. His resignation became effective immediately. Mr. and Mrs. Dwyer are leaving Cleveland on Monday. They will tour to Florida and remain there several months. Dwyer said he had no plans for the future. George Armstrong has succeeded Dwyer as local manager. Armstrong is well known in these parts. He was manager of the Argus Company, five or six years ago, when that company operated in the Sloan Building. W. C. Denny, also formerly with the Argus Company, is now district manager for the National Theatre Supply Company, covering Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Detroit and Pittsburgh. Frank Masek remains with the organization. Masek headed the Exhibitors' Supply Company prior to its amalgamation with the national organization.

The Gross and Johnson Messenger Service has taken over the operation of the central shipping room of the Film Exchange Bldg., formerly handled by the Paige Brothers.

Bob Pank, who shares honors with Tommy Carroll for the success of the Ohio Booking Offices, formed to present discovery nights at the various local Loew houses, was married last Saturday to Miss Mary Stovering at St. Colman's Church. M. A. Malaney, publicity director for Loew's Ohio Theatres, and Thomas Carroll, manager of Loew's State Theatre, represented the Loew organization at the ceremony. William Sweeney was best man and Katherine Lynch was maid of honor. Following the ceremony, breakfast was served to thirty-five intimate friends of the bride and groom. Stress of business necessitates a postponement of a wedding trip. This is planned for next month, and will include a trip to Cuba, and the Bahama Islands. Pank's marriage was a complete surprise. Always a hound for publicity, he kept this dark right up to the bitter end. Even though he didn't let us in on the secret we shall be broadminded and wish him a thousand years of happiness.

Boys and Wallace, owners and managers of the Ohio Theatre, Alliance, have almost completed their new Alliance house, named the Strand. This is a downtown house with 700 seats. It will be done around May 1st.

Bert Botzum is remodeling the Strand Theatre, Canton. A complete new front is being built. The inner lobby is being changed. New decorations and new equipment have been purchased from the National Theatre Supply Company. And Manager Joe Calla is wearing even a broader smile than usual over the prospects of the rejuvenation.

Milton Korack returned as manager of the New Broadway Theatre, one of the U.-B. chain of motion picture theatres, just in time to celebrate the house's second birthday anniversary. March 6th is the date of the opening of the house, but the celebration will last three days.

William Raynor, manager of Reade's Hippodrome, was in Chicago last week, picking bigger and better acts for his show. Raynor is now offering vaudeville, pictures, presentation and novelties—all for the one price of admission.

Charles Kessler has joined the Lande Film Distributing Corporation.

More than $12,000 was raised as Cleveland's contribution to the Actors' Benefit Fund, in the Statler ballroom, where a special performance was given by Al Jolson and his cast of 500, the four Marx Brothers and Violet Hemming. Seats sold for $25 each.

Charles L. Casanave, president of the Associated Theatres of Ohio, has been in New York for the past two weeks. Business, not pleasure alone, took him there, and some interesting announcements will be made upon his return.

The Sigma Theatre in Johnstown, has changed hands. E. W. Babcock recently purchased the house from A. Tippett.

The Glen Theatre, Cleveland, again comes into the picture. K. A. Naegele, who took over the house about eight months ago, has sold it to Thomas Brannon. And Sam Barck, who formerly owned the Market Square, will manage the house and do the booking for it.

M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington Circuit, did not renew the lease on the Fountain Theatre, Woodland Avenue and E. 46th Street, a house which he has owned and operated for the past fifteen years. H. M. Kaplan, however, has taken a ten-year lease on the building.

George Lefko, office manager of the local F.B.O. Exchange, is eating three meals a day regularly now. His wife has returned from a three months' visit in California.

C. E. Penrod, F.B.O. division manager, spent a few days in the Cleveland office and in the northern Ohio territory last week on his tour of the district.

Robert Cotton, P.D.C. division manager, returned from the company's divisions managers' meeting in St. Louis so pepped up that he immediately staged a division meeting to tell his managers all about it. Henry Zapp came on from Detroit and imbibed of Cotton's enthusiasm. Cotton has dropped the handles he formerly attached to his name and is now known only as the Rear-Admiral. All he needs is a blue suit and a set of brass buttons and then the atmosphere will be complete.

Chester Loewe, manager of the Cincinnati P.D.C. Exchange, is sure out of luck. He was married last week to Miss Ethel Clark, of Chicago, and a few days later was seized with an attack of appendicitis. They brought him to Cleveland for an operation. He is now at Mt. Sinai Hospital, doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

J. E. Evans has purchased the Main Theatre, Scoville Avenue and E. 25th Street, from J. V. Wolcott.

Paul Gusdanovic is now managing the Ball Park Theatre, Cleveland, in addition to his chain of houses. He took the house over recently from the Atlas Savings and Loan Company.

Joe Leavitt isn't operating the public projection room of the Film Exchange Building any more. He is now chief operator at the Columbia Theatre, East Ninth Street. His brother Sam, a licensed operator, will run the machines if any one wants a hurry-up job.

Harry Lande, president of the Lande Film Distributing Company, returned from a tour of the division with a pocketful of contracts. "The Red Kimona" is booked to play an extended engagement at the Cameo, Pittsburgh. Lande also closed contracts for the picture in Erie, Newcastle, McKeesport and East Liberty.

The Lincoln Theatre, owned by Messrs. Burton and Crockett, opened last Friday with Vitaphone. This is the first neighborhood house in the city to offer Vitaphone attractions. Big preparations were made for the opening. The entire house was redecorated for the occasion, a new organ was installed, and new equipment throughout.

Central Penn

AFTER serving for one year as manager of the Savoy Theatre, Bethlehem, Fred Lidman has been transferred to manage the Embassy in Baltimore. He succeeds Benjamin Gutterson, who goes to the Bethlehem post.

A new and higher schedule of prices of admittance has been adopted by leading picture houses of Allentown, including the State and Rialto, operated by the Wilmer & Vincent Company, and the Strand, owned by Dr. Ben J. "The Show"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, State Theatre, Los Angeles

Record: "One of the best motion pictures ever offered. . . . One of the most thrilling films ever made. . . . The sweetest romance that ever found its way into celluloid. . . . Brings back the irresistible partnership of John Gilbert and Renee Adoree. . . . The audience sat spell-bound after the final fade-out before bursting into deafening applause. . . . Tod Browning has made his best film to date. . . . Renee Adoree holds her ground with Gilbert and in many instances captures the honors for herself. Lionel Barrymore is almost on equal rank with Gilbert and Adoree. This trio amaze and amuse, winning tremendous admiration."

Daily News: "The Metros, the Goldwyns and the Mayers promised thrills aplenty in Tod Browning's production, 'The Show,' and they turned out to be perfect gentlemen, keeping their word in every respect. . . . Director Browning demonstrates his peculiar knack more strikingly in 'The Show' than perhaps in any other picture. . . . A quivering tenseness. . . . The most terrifying climax on record. . . . 'The Show' packs a decided wallop. . . . It isn't all shivers and quakes. Pleasant romance and pathetic sacrifice in their charming manner."

There are scenes that yesterday brought several women in the audience almost out of their seats. . . . The cast is one that speaks for itself. Oh, for more actresses like Miss Adoree! . . . 'The Show' is evidence that the movies are progressing."

Times: "Quite the most horrific thriller of the season. For the first time since I attended a children's matinee I witnessed the spectacle yesterday of an audience gasping with unanimity at some of the things Tod Browning has in 'The Show.' . . . As far as audience reaction is concerned, I might say that there were 'oohs' and 'aahs'."

Express: "Tod Browning has an almost uncanny flair for the picturesque. . . . Queer characters come to life through his vivid pictorial sense. . . . One comes out of Loew's State haunted by the almost exotic effect the director achieves. . . . Gilbert's present role is unlike his others, but it is just as good a characterization, establishing his right to be called one of the best romantic actors on the screen today."

"The Beloved Rogue"—United Artists, St. Francis Theatre, San Francisco

Chronicle: "Is due for a sweeping triumph. It has romance—warm, beautiful, powerful. The tale of a poet who greatly loved wine, women, song and his country. It should and will take its place among the finest pictures of 1927. It is the best thing Barrymore has done."

Call and Post: "There are scenes all the way through 'The Beloved Rogue' in which Barrymore rises to tremendous heights of acting. Love scenes are beautifully and delicately handled. There is tension and suspense in the torture scenes, which permit of still further display of the Barrymore ability. A truly romantic and appealing picture."

Bulletin: "Francois Villon in 'The Beloved Rogue' is so entirely opposite to anything Barrymore has brought to the motion picture audience it is startling. We marvel at the man."

Examiner: "The picture has been turning them away ever since. News of its reception has been telegraphed the country over, for this is the world premiere. . . . Thrills, as when Villon, naked, flogged and tortured by flames, is hoisted in a crate to a watch tower, are enormous. There are beggars' routs, street parades and the like unfurled with velocity. Make no mistake, 'The Beloved Rogue' is one of the most elaborate films ever made."

"The Auctioneer"—Fox Films, Granada, Chicago, Ill.

"The Auctioneer"—Fox Films, Davis Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sun: "Rarely have screen votaries seen a more wholesome and delightful picture version of the stage success than . . . 'The Auctioneer.' "The Music Master"—Fox Films Loew's State, Boston, Mass.

Post: "A very touching, sympathetic picturization of the Belasco play. . . . Alec B. Francis comes into his own in David Warfield role. . . . Might easily have overplayed the role of the old Music Master, but instead gives a finally drawn portrayal, all the more effective because of its simplicity and sincerity. Lois Moran adds another realistic note. . . . Is so refreshingly natural."

Transcript: "An agreeable surprise. . . . Mr. Dwan's direction has been felicitous. . . ."

American: "Allan Dwan's direction is a delight. . . . For perfect atmosphere 'The Music Master' is a film not to be missed."

Lois Moran, dainty, adorable and an actress to the tips of her fingers. . . . Miss Moran has done some of her best work in this picture and those who believe that her chief charm is her youth should see what a splendid little actress she is. . . . Allan Dwan has made a fine film out of the Belasco play."

Advertiser: "Unusual film finely directed by Allan Dwan. . . . Alec Francis does valiant work. . . . Picture harbors a future star in the person of Helen Chandler, who does so well in a minor role that her name will probably soon be displayed in electric lights."

Herald: "Settings picturesque and refreshing. . . . Alec B. Francis plays the David Warfield role and, being a particularly likeable person, Mr. Francis leaves a warm feeling of friendliness. . . . Lois Moran plays the daughter admirably. She is beautiful, with a rare sweetness of manner that should take her far in the picture world. The direction is restrained . . . well done."

"The Third Degree"—Warner Bros. Paramount Theatre New York City

Daily News: "Rates first degree for action and photography. The court sequence of the film is exceedingly well done. Louise Dresser, as always, gives a sterling, sympathetic interpretation as the step-mother. A very special mention should be given to the cameraman, Hal Mohr. He employs some of the best trick photography we've witnessed in many screen seasons."

American: "Miss Costello, who looks more than ever like a young and glorified Elsie Ferguson, is convincing as the harassed heroine. . . . Dolores has a remote and pensive air that proves a rare treat in this age of giddy girls. She has 'it' in a refined way, as my flapper friend rather aptly puts it. Miss Costello's lure is as subtle as it is ever present. There is much to recommend this picture."

Times: "The sequence in which there is a murder is told with remarkable skill. And those passages in which the police are giving the third degree to the supposed culprit are brilliant. Mr. Curtiz shows true artistry in his lighting effects. Dolores Costello gives a most satisfactory performance. Mr. Fellowes is excellent as the clever and sinister schemer. Jason Robards puts much sincerity into his portrayal of the hero."

Morning Telegraph: "Holds audience interest throughout its footage."

Evening World: "Emerges as good melodrama told in large parts in good cinema. Unusually clever dissolving scenes and moving camera effects intensify the flow and movement of the picture. The situations and complications are varied to provide more than fair measure of interest. Miss Costello is lovely as a flower and acts her part every moment. There are dozens of good and imaginative scenes depicting confused mental states of the players."

Graphic: "Louise Dresser can always be relied upon to give a good account of herself in any role, and in this part she is excellent."

Another Viewpoint on Effect of Aperture Size on Screen Illumination

PART II

IN last week's issue was published the first section of an article by Arthur Gray, Chief Projectionist at the Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass., wherein he gave his views on effect of aperture size on screen illumination.

Gray's views are radically different from those we hold on the subject, since, according to him, if it were feasible to increase the present standard size of the aperture in a motion picture projector, the screen illumination would show marked increases as the aperture size was enlarged.

This issue will complete Gray's article on the subject, after which we will present our side in complete detail for the readers' comments.

Gray's arguments appear to be very logical ones and, no doubt, he will find many supporters among projectionists. The only request we make of the readers is that they withhold judgment until both sides have been given, after which we will be glad to abide by their decision.

Here is the remainder of Arthur Gray's article, printed word for word:

Magnification Kept Constant by Changing Objectives

"However, in order to retain the same area of screen image as heretofore, it will be necessary to employ a suitable, longer, focal length objective, and right here occurs the phase of the matter that has been neglected by the editor in his original treatment of the whole matter.

"With an aperture of given size and illuminated to a given intensity, the screen illumination will be in inverse proportion to the ratio of magnification, less the transmission loss. Put in another way, the intensity of the screen illumination is governed by the relative area of the image and the aperture and the intensity of illumination of the aperture. The free diameter of the objective, the width of the blades on the revolving shutter, the reflection and absorption losses at the lenses, etc., are all contributing factors, and indeed, limiting factors in obtaining screen illumination, but they are not fundamental ones.

"It is really the relation in size which exists between the aperture and the screen image (the ratio of magnification) rather than the size of the aperture alone that constitutes the important influence in screen illumination. This must not be lost sight of. Thus, when experimenting with apertures of different sizes, unless the area of the screen image is kept constant by using different objectives of suitable focal lengths, there can be no real test, nor can any comparison of real value be made.

"If we increase the size of the aperture and do not change the focal length of the objective, the size of the image will be decreased in proportion with the aperture. In this case, there will be no change in magnification and consequently, no change in screen intensity.

"If the aperture is increased in size and the area of the screen image is kept constant, there will be an increase in screen illumination which will be in inverse proportion to the decrease in magnification.

"It is because of the fact that the matter of magnification, i.e., the relative area of the aperture and the screen image, was not taken into consideration that the editor found no decrease in screen illumination when the aperture was reduced in area. 'Not even when reduced to an area one-sixteenth of an inch square.' There would, however, have been a very decided reduction in the screen intensity had he maintained the area of the image constant while he thus drew the aperture down to these Lilliputian dimensions.

"Thus, we may get back to the point where it may be correctly stated that, 'if the intensity of illumination at the aperture and the area of the screen image remain unchanged, any increase in the size of the aperture will result in a proportionate increase in screen intensity.' Axiom: Why not?"

Advantage of Large Iris Opening With Stereopticon Spot Projectors

"And now let me quote the editor when he says, 'With stereopticon forms of spotlights there are no indications that higher-beam candlepowers are obtained when the iris is opened to increase the size of the spot.' In order to get a stage spot of desired intensity, I have, before now, taken advantage of a larger iris opening to secure the very effect which has just been stated as practically impossible of attainment. Furthermore, the 'impossible' method was the only one which could be successfully employed.

"As is well known, a stereopticon form of spot projector, such as, for instance, the Brenkert F3, employs an objective to project to the stage an enlarged image of an illuminated circular aperture which is delineated by an iris located at, or near, the focal plane (slide carrier). With this form of optical line-up, both the size of the aperture and the focal length of the objective play a very important part in determining the beam candlepower.

"In any stated condition where the candlepower of the light source and the area of the projected spot are given, and are to remain constant, the beam candlepower, or the intensity of the projected spot, may be materially increased by using a larger iris opening and a suitable longer focal length objective, opinions to the contrary notwithstanding.

Getting Down to Cases

"We will assume a projection distance of 100 feet. The situation requires a spot 5 feet in diameter. The objective lens on the projector is 10-inch focal length. By computation it will be found that under these conditions an iris opening one inch in diameter will produce a spot of the desired size. When this spot is projected it is found to be not bright enough, nor can the desired intensity be attained even when the light source has been pushed to the limit. This is, of course, a hypothetical case, but it can be closely approximated in actual practice and seems to lend itself readily to an understanding of the whole thing.

"We will now try to show that the size of aperture is indeed one of the governing factors in determining screen illumination. If the projectionist will now substitute an objective of 20-inch focal length and INCREASE THE SIZE OF THE IRIS OPENING to 2 inches in diameter, he will obtain a stage spot that is still 5 feet across and which will have twice the intensity as before. We may grant a slight added transmission loss if the diameter of the 20-inch objective is not slightly increased, but it will be negligent in any case and eliminated entirely if the proper free diameter objective is used.

Larger Iris Opening Gives Greater Beam Candlepower

"Let us prove the correctness of the foregoing.

"Case A. The iris opening is one inch in diameter. The projection distance is 100 feet. The objective is 10-inch focal length. The stage spot is 5 feet across. The magnification is 60 diameters.

"Case B. The iris opening is two inches in diameter. The projection distance is 100 feet. The objective is 20-inch focal length. The stage spot is 5 feet in diameter. The magnification is 30 diameters.

"In case B, the intensity of the illumination of the iris is the same as in case A, but as it has twice the area it will utilize twice as much of the beam and will therefore have twice as many lumens. As the area of this stage spot is the same in both cases, its intensity in case B will be doubled, because there will be twice as

Technical Societies Do Good Work

Intern'l Proj. Ass'n One of the Largest and Best Organized

Throughout the country there are various organizations in the technical department of the motion picture industry which are doing good work but for the most part overlooked. Some of these societies are well-organized bodies with a large membership and some are small groups, but the sum total of their activities has a very important and beneficial influence.

One of the largest and best organized of these bodies is the International Projection Association, with its headquarters located in its own comfortable clubhouse at 437 East 145th Street, New York City.

The officers of the International Projection Association are: A. L. Pollin, President; B. Norton, Vice-president; W. Guth, Treasurer and Secretary.

Many excellent lectures are given at the clubhouse but the social side of the association is by no means overlooked.

On Saturday, March 5th, the International Projection Association held a house-warming and package party which was one of the most successful and pleasant entertainments of the winter. Although on not so elaborate a scale as some of the other entertainments, there was an atmosphere of informality and general good-will which made a pleasant change after the long series of dinners given by the other organizations.

Among those present were: Mr. A. L. Pollin and the Misses Pollin; Mr. B. Norton, Mr. and Mrs. William Guth, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Roth, Mr. and Mrs. M. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. McGuire, Mr. and Mrs. M. Scherer, Mr. George Mayer, Mr. and Mrs. L. De Bella and Miss De Bella, L. Miller, J. Albrozza, J. Ambrosio.

In addition, there were about seventy-five other guests who, with the aid of an excellent orchestra and entertainment provided by Mr. Milton Berkowitz, Miss Mayer and Robert Corey, supplemented by the refreshments served and the dancing which continued during the evening, thoroughly enjoyed the house-warming of the International Projection Association.

Georgia Exhibitors Buy New Equipment

Gortatowsky Brothers, of Albany, well-known exhibitors in South Georgia, have just ordered 1,100 nine-spring upholstered seats, made by Steel Furniture Co., to be installed in their new theatre at Valdosta, Ga., which is expected to open the latter part of March.

W. L. Wynn, of Newnan, Ga., has put in an order for two Powers 6-B machines, with Peerless reflector arc lamps; Silver-sheet screen, film cabinet, Syncroverter and other miscellaneous equipment for his Ritz Theatre, which opens the last of this month.

Harry Somerville, of Daytona Beach, Fla., has just placed an order for equipment for his Kingston Theatre, consisting of two Simplex projectors, Silversheet screen, Simplex ticket selling machine, ventilating equipment and other accessories.

Use Larger Screens in Europe

Smaller American Screens Due to Superior Equip't, Says Expert

Taken as a whole, the moving picture screens used in the theatres throughout Europe are considerably larger in size than those used by American exhibitors. This statement comes from W. L. Schoening, President of the Minnsa Cine Screen Company of Saint Louis, and is certainly authoritative. Mr. Schoening is a pioneer in the moving picture industry and has been engaged in the manufacture of cine screens for more than 15 years, personally supervising the construction of over 10,000 Minnsa De Luxe Specials. Mr. Schoening goes on to say that this condition actually demonstrates the superiority of the American industry over the foreign industry, although at the outset the contrary seemed apparent. For it is the present-day perfection of our domestic projection equipment which enables American exhibitors to utilize smaller screens with more clearness and greater definition to their utmost advantage. The very fact that European productions and projecting methods are not as perfect, explains to some degree the necessity for using larger screens. Lacking the quality and polish which is characteristic of American films, the foreign exhibitor cannot avail himself of this ideal projection—typical in the United States—and at the same time derive the satisfactory results which are common to the moving picture trade of this country.

The average European installation is 14′ x 19′ to 16′ x 21′, while the typical American screen is much smaller for the average theatre. This, of course, is on a basis of the average installation, for may theatres in this country necessarily use larger screens owing to the size of the theatre. For instance, what is claimed to be the largest seamless screen known to have been installed is a Minnsa De Luxe Special, having an 18′ x 24′ picture surface, installed in the M. & S. Douglas Theatre, of New York City.

Piccadilly Theatre Installs Kilgen

Claimed to be Largest Unified Organ in Chicago

One of the outstanding features of the equipment in the Piccadilly Theatre, recently opened in Chicago by Herman Schoenstadt & Son, is the four manual Kilgen organ. The organ has over three hundred stop keys, is situated on a lift on the right of the orchestra pit and is of period design.

The organ itself is arranged behind two artistic grilles, one on each side of the proscenium. It has, of course, all the usual instruments found in large organs, such as violins, tubas, cellos, clarinets, flutes, horns, diapasons, xylophones, marimbas, etc., but

There is a piano standing on a beautifully decorated platform to the right of the proscenium, under the organ grille. This piano is controlled directly from the organ.

On the opening night the well-known organist, Leo Terry, played the solo, while Walter Flandorf, also exceptionally well known in musical circles, played the picture.

The firm that built this organ is George Kilgen & Son, Inc., who have been building pipe organs for over two hundred and eighty years. They have built some of the most famous organs in the country, among them being the organ in Radio Studio WHT in the Wrigley Building, in Chicago; the Grand Central Theatre, in St. Louis, and the Palace Theatre, in Gary, Ind.

Jonesboro, Ark., Theatre Finely Equipped

The equipment and appointments show that Universal has spared no expense in placing the Strand at Jonesboro, Ark., among de luxe houses of moderate capacity. National Theatre Supply Company, through their Dallas office, installed the following equipment: 2 Power's projectors equipped with Peerless arcs; Hertner Transverter; A.D.C. Curtain Control; Upholstered 9-spring chairs, from the Steel Furniture Company, finished in maroon leather, backs of heavy veneered oak; Simplex ticket selling machine; American Silver-sheet screen; a huge electric sign over the marquee, designed and constructed by National Theatre Supply Company; Lee Lash Scenery, such as sets and drops for the spacious stage, also heavy velour curtain; and a wide variety of Stanley lobby frames.

The Strand Theatre seats 1,262 in its orchestra and mezzanine. The house is estimated to have cost around $110,000. Universal also owns and operates the Liberty Theatre in Jonesboro, which house is also under the direction of Mr. Crumley.

Detroit Theatre Well Under Way

Steel work has been started on the new Hollywood Theatre, Detroit, Mich., the latest house to be erected by Lou and Ben Cohen, operators of five other Detroit motion picture theatres. Completion is looked for next fall.

many lumens incident on the same area as before.

"Thus, by doubling the size of the iris (the aperture) we have doubled the intensity of the stage spot (screen illumination). It is obvious that the size of the aperture has played a very important function in this respect.

Effect on Enlarged Widescope Aperture

"In Widescope projection the aperture is practically the same height as standard, but twice as wide, I think. Whether or not we will obtain a screen intensity greater than that with the standard picture depends upon whether we elect to retain the vertical or the horizontal standard dimensions. We cannot do both.

"If we choose to retain the standard-height picture, its width will be twice that of normal; the magnification will not be changed and neither will the screen intensity. If, however, we decide to project a picture of standard width, the vertical dimensions of the picture will be one-half that of normal, the magnification will thus be reduced by one-half and the screen intensity will be proportionately increased.

Important That Projectionists Should Understand Matter

"It is important that the projectionist should understand the optical principles involved in this matter, because in the case of the stereopticon form of spot projector, it has been proven that a proper application of this knowledge will result in getting the maximum results from the equipment.

"It is indeed a fact that the practical function of the motion picture projector aperture is to matt out border and frame lines on the film and thus effect a clean-cut delineation of the outline of the picture. Nevertheless, it should also be understood that the present standardized aperture or, to be more explicit, the standardized area of the film exercises a very decided and well-defined influence on the limitations of the optical line-up employed in motion picture projection.

"It should be understood that this standard area has not been selected because it constitutes the one exact size that will assure maximum screen intensity. Nothing of the kind. The size of the film image is virtually a compromise to numerous other mechanical, electrical and optical phases of the projection unit, all of which bear a certain relation to, and exert an influence on each of the others.

"And let it be thoroughly understood that in computing the light intensity of a projected image it is essential that the size of the object (in this case the aperture) be known and taken into consideration. And, furthermore, this matter of the area of the aperture will always exist as a very important influence on final results."

Some Errors in Gray's Calculations

This completes Gray's article and while this section of the article is immediately before us we would like to make a few comments by way of pointing out some places where, we think, Gray has slipped up in his calculations. Not that these mistakes particularly affect the validity of his arguments as, indeed, if his principal contention that increase of aperture size results in increased screen illumination be correct, then we are worse off than ever before since what we have to say now will only strengthen that argument.

Under the heading "Getting Down to Cases," Gray figures that to obtain a 5-foot diameter spot on a projection distance of 100 feet with a 10-inch focal-length lens, an iris opening of one inch is required. We would like to change this to ½ inch, as $X=\frac{1}{2}$ inch, approximate size of iris opening required.

Further on Gray says that if the 10-inch focal-length lens is replaced with a 20-inch focal-length lens, under the same conditions, an iris opening of 2 inches will be required. We would like to change this also to read one inch since

$$X=\frac{20 \times 5}{100}$$

$X=1$ inch, iris opening required.

These changes are not important and they do not affect Gray's principal argument, but we would like to have all data in accurate form in order to arrive at a correspondingly correct solution to the main problem.

Still More Errors

Now under the heading "Larger Iris Opening Gives Greater Beam Candlepower," Gray gives two cases, A and B, to prove his contention that more light passes through the large iris opening than through the small one.

In case A he says the magnification is 60 diameters, but in view of the correction we made above it should be

$$M=\frac{5 \times 12}{0.5}$$
$$=120 \text{ diameters.}$$

In case B he also says that the magnification is 30 diameters for these new conditions, but in view of our correction it should be

$$M=\frac{5 \times 12}{1}$$
$$=60 \text{ diameters.}$$

The rates of the two magnifications still remain the same, viz.: two-to-one, but he goes on to say that since one iris opening is twice the size of the other it will, therefore, pass twice the total number of lumens, assuming that each iris is evenly lighted to the same intensity. In other words, Gray says that if the diameter of a circle is doubled, the area will also be doubled. We say that it will be increased four times as follows:

Area of ½-inch iris opening:

$$A=\frac{0.5 \times 0.5 \times 3.14}{4}$$
$$=0.196 \text{ square inch.}$$

Area of one-inch iris opening:

$$A=\frac{1 \times 1 \times 3.14}{4}$$
$$=0.785 \text{ square inch.}$$

Therefore

$$0.785 = 4$$

Since the one-inch iris opening has 4 times the area of the ½-inch opening, 4 times as many lumens should pass through it and, consequently, according to Gray's argument the screen intensity should not be doubled but should be increased by 4 times.

Gray's last paragraph under this heading should, therefore, read as follows: "Thus by doubling the size of the iris (the aperture) we have quadrupled the intensity of the stage spot (screen illumination)."

The above was obviously an oversight on Gray's part which he failed to catch in reading over the article and our only reason for pointing it out is to put all of his arguments in final ship-shape form before presenting our own arguments to show that his contentions are entirely wrong.

In the next two articles we will give the results of some simple photometric tests which we have just conducted and will check and cross-check them in every possible shape and form in order to give them the acid test of cold logic.

We will take Gray's own example, wherein he keeps the size of both spots exactly the same and show that the size of the iris opening (or aperture) cannot possibly affect the screen intensity no matter what the conditions are so long as the three principal factors, brightness of source, free diameter of objective lens and projection distance, are not changed.

Then we will show exactly where Gray went wrong in the test he performed and also where he tangled himself up to such an extent in interpreting the results of this test that he made the natural mistake of attributing the increased screen intensity to the increased size of iris opening.

Gray overlooked one important factor and we will show, with the aid of diagrams, just where his foot slipped and the errors this slip naturally led him into.

Unrivaled screen quality

The photographic superiority of Eastman Film—zealously safeguarded by Kodak Research Laboratory experts—naturally makes prints on Eastman Positive Film from negatives on Eastman Negative Film unrivaled in screen quality.

And, since the public appreciates screen quality, insistence on prints on Eastman Film will have a favorable box office reaction.

SHORT TALKS ON

---The Winning Combination

Advertising will not put over mediocre pictures any more than it will put over a poor cake of soap or a poor can of soup. The first requisite for a successful advertising campaign is a quality product. But every retail dealer in the land knows that a product of real merit, backed up by extensive advertising, is his best seller. And this is just as true of motion pictures as of anything else.

Highest merit, supported by service and advertising, makes Educational Pictures your "best sellers" among short features. They have long been recognized as the dominant quality leaders in their field. And they were the first short features to be advertised nationally to your patrons—in fact, the only short features that have had consistent magazine advertising.

Educational Pictures have been making new friends and extra profit for a steadily increasing number of exhibitors for seven years—there are 13,000 theatres showing them now. And they are the short features you can depend on most confidently for continued quality, service, advertising support, and box-office profit, next season.

Volume XXXV NEW YORK CITY, MARCH 25, 1927 No. 12

Mergers and Men

THE New York air is filled with reports of huge mergers about to be completed; or just around the corner. No doubt a good deal of this talk will prove to be correct. Some of it won't. But, in general, the industry is in the merger era.

And this, to us, is the most interesting thing about it all: the theatre interests are the movers in the mergers. In the background—and not so far in the background either—are the bankers and the Wall Street houses. Pictures are big business these days.

But in the industry itself it is the theatre circuits that are primarily motivating various merger movements. Who, a few years ago, could have foreseen so surprising a development?

We have had mergers of production and distribution concerns—from time to time as the motion picture gained more and more in popularity. But now the pendulum of consolidation swings.

There are many factors that make it so: the stern necessity for production tie-ups; the new era in theatre operation which swings large numbers of houses under a centralized management; and of course, the banking and stock issue angles.

Showmanship

P.D.C. is launching a vigorous exploitation and selling campaign on "The Yankee Clipper."

Exploitation and sales go together—or they should. P.D.C. is seeing to it that they do. And what is more, the exploitation aids are advertised in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

We maintain that the trade paper is the place in which to show the exhibitor how he can sell the picture to the public. It is definite, needed service advertising which should be used consistently by every film company.

P.D.C. comes to the front with exploitation advertising on "The Yankee Clipper." We take pleasure in calling special attention to it. The home office sales and advertising forces have worked out an excellent campaign for the use of the field salesmen and the job is now up to them.

The advertising of exploitation aids via the trade paper is progressive showmanship, of which this industry cannot have too much.

All of which is very interesting. But there is one factor which has never changed; and never will change in this personality business. We have discussed it on this page more than once. Let's not lose sight of it now.

Mr. Hays expressed it very aptly in his speech at Harvard this week: "Motion pictures are not dead things to be regulated like commodities such as freight and food. They are not wares, to be monopolized and traded in by tickets and statutes or marked like iron and soap. They are more than a few thousand feet of celluloid film on which a series of photographs have been recorded. They contain a potency of life in them to be as active as the soul whose progeny they are. They are evidences of human thought; and human thought, on which all progress depends, cannot be tampered with with safety."

Then this further: "Ours is a business dependent almost entirely upon man-power."

Because motion pictures are not dead things, there must be very live men to deal with them, in every department of the business. Mergers there are and may be. But man-power there must be.

The big theatre chain must have expert man-power. So Harold B. Franklin goes to West Coast Theatres. A great theatre opens in New York: it bears the name of an individual and is built around a personality—Roxy.

Two recent, forceful instances of man-power as the indispensable thing in this business.

Comment on Passing Affairs

WE got a first-hand view the other day of an organization in the making—the Short Subjects Department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Fred Quimby, in charge of sales distribution, was busily engaged on contract forms and numerous other details, but he paused a moment to communicate to us the enthusiasm apparent all around the M.-G.-M. offices over the new department.

Announcement has already been made of a bi-weekly news reel to be produced by the Hearst organization and an affiliation between M.-G.-M. and Hal Roach for distribution of the Roach comedies and short features.

And, by the way, the exhibitor response to the M.-G.-M. Short Subject plans has been very fine. The M.-G.-M. offices have received a large number of wires and letters from prominent theatre men.

This is going to be a great year for Short Subjects.

MRS. ELIZABETH BEECROFT, mother of Fred J. Beecroft, Advertising Manager of The News; James Beecroft and Chester Beecroft, died last Sunday at her home at Vineland, N.J. Services were held at Vineland on Wednesday, with burial at New Rochelle, N.Y.

Sympathy is extended by The News' staff to its associate in his bereavement.

THREE asterisks were awarded this week by the National Board of Review. The first one went to "Metropolis," the Ufa-Paramount feature at the Rialto; the second to Pathe Review No. 17; and the third to "The Yellow Dog."

AN unusual situation has been created in Turkey by the threatened monopoly on motion pictures, announced recently, to be controlled by the Turkish Committee of Aviation. We are in receipt of a letter from Dr. von Engelmann, of Constantinople, commenting on this. While we are not familiar enough with the situation to judge of the correctness of his views, they are interesting at this time. He says:

"The greater part of the films projected here on the screen is imported from the United States, and competent circles will surely not be against imposing heavy monopoly taxes on this commodity, the more so as America did not ratify the Lausanne treaty and will probably not do so in the near future.

"Although the government at Angora is more than clever in detecting new sources of fiscal revenue, they mostly do not foresee all the possible consequences, for such a step is most likely to ruin a once flourishing trade, as this has already occurred in more than one case.

"To select films that are suitable for this market and that appeal to the peculiar taste of the Oriental, is not an easy task. It requires experience, connections abroad and knowledge. If motion pictures should pass from the few importers of films in Pera into the hands of the Turkish Aviation Committee, it is, in view of their ignorance of films, not difficult to foretell what the result would be.

"It is more than probable that Greece, Turkey's most dreaded economic rival, will benefit from this situation. If, therefore, Athens or Salonika should become the distributing center of films for the Near East, instead of Constantinople, this would be but a repetition of what occurred in the carpet, shipping and numerous other trades, which Turkey fruitlessly tried to monopolize."

WE are apparently in for a period of adjustment in connection with the labor angle on Vitaphone. The operators' union is demanding two shifts of three operators each in the booth where short Vitaphone attractions are shown, we understand, and three shifts where a Vitaphone musical accompaniment is used throughout the feature. This situation has arisen in Minneapolis, St. Paul, Syracuse and Philadelphia. In the latter city the Stanley Company is involved, and the decision is expected to set a precedent for the country.

Muggleduffies Meet

THE first get-together of the Muggleduffies, an organization composed of the male members of F.B.O., was held at Cavanaugh's Restaurant, 258 W. 23rd Street, New York, on Saturday evening, March 12th, at 6.30 P.M. The party was a man's get-together beefsteak dinner, with little in the way of edibles that would have appealed to the ladies.

Several of Broadway's famous stars entertained the Muggleduffies.

President Joseph P. Kennedy and Vice-President J. I. Schnitzer were among those present, which included the entire male contingent of the organization. Harry Osborne acted as master of ceremonies, while Harry Gittleson was in charge of the entertainment, with Steve Fitzgibbon handling the stage.

Foxites Frolic

THE Fox Fun Frolic celebrated at the McAlpin Hotel last Friday proved to be a carnival in fact as well as in name. Not only because of the spectacular Minstrel Show, enacted entirely by Foxites, which was broadcast for an hour by WMCA, but due to the friendliness that prevailed. An outstanding surprise was a burlesque Fox News reel, prepared by Truman Talley, which brought gales of laughter.

Fox Athletic Club deserves great credit for the splendid success of the frolic, and for the elaborate 104 page booklet that will be a joyful reminder of the event.

Olive Borden Leaves

ELATED over a letter from Winfield R. Sheehan granting permission to return to the West Coast via the Canal route during which time she will have a much deserved rest from the task of working on nine productions over a period of sixteen months, Olive Borden, Fox Films star, sailed south on March 14th, having completed her part in a new Alan Dwan production, "The Joy Girl."

A remark of Miss Borden's is certainly worth recounting. Accused of "always acting," she replied: "Well, I guess that's more or less true. At times when I should not act, I try so hard not to, that it is acting."

Renew Old Friendship

AN acquaintance that started years ago in Germany, when one was a playwright, just beginning to achieve international note, and the other just becoming famous as a director on the screen, was renewed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios when Dr. Rudolph Lothar, famous playwright, visited Ernst Lubitsch.

The two men were close friends years ago in Germany. Lubitsch, following the international fame of "Passion," "Deception" and other films he made abroad came to America and is now directing "Old Heidelberg" at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios.

Dr. Lothar, author of thirty famous plays, came to America when his drama, "The Werwolf," was produced in New York, and recently arrived in California to supervise the production of his play, "The Harlequin King," under the title, "The Vagabond Prince."

There has been widespread interest in the recently announced Paramount Short Subjects department under the direction of Emmanuel Cohen, and here are flashes of the first comedy produced for it, "Dad's Choice," starring Edward Everett Horton and made by Hollywood Productions

Selling Film in the Arctic

H. T. LONG, manager of First National's Calgary (Alberta) exchange, who just completed a two months' selling trip through the Arctic wilds, describes the trip as one of the worst ever taken by him. His account follows:

"This was positively the worst trip I have ever made. When we arrived at the end of the steel and got our dogs ready, harnessed and toboggans packed, we bade good-by to civilization, shouted 'Mush' to the dogs and were off, not to return for at least two months. The second day out we encountered a blinding blizzard, the snow falling so thick and fast that we were unable to see more than ten feet ahead; sometimes we were unable to see our lead dogs. We decided that there was nothing to do but to hold up and wait until the storm subsided.

"Before the storm finally subsided enough for us to mush again, two days and nights had gone by. This was a serious loss of time, but could not be helped. Our supply of fish that we took for dog food was sadly depleted, as we are able to take only a three-day supply at one time, replenishing our larder at different native villages. Our own stock of food was also short, so we went on half rations in order to conserve our supply.

"When we had again started to mush and had gone almost two miles, you can imagine our joy, on going over a hill, to see on the other side the town of Grande Prairie, practically snowed under. If we had only kept going a little longer we could have slept and eaten in a nice warm shack instead of a snowbank.

"However, our trip was very successful. One thing I am sorry for though is the fact that we did not have enough gum drops. This confection, as I told you before, the natives are very fond of. We started with one hundred pounds of them, but the demand was so great that the supply was soon depleted, much to the disgust of the natives in the villages we visited last."

Vidor to Film in East

KING VIDOR and his company will head eastward the latter part of this month to film a considerable number of exteriors in New York City for his new, untitled M.-G.-M. production. As soon as interiors are completed at Culver City he will pack up his megaphone and script and depart for Gotham, taking with him his leads, Eleanor Boardman and James Murray, and several of the principal players, including Bert Roach, Estelle Clark and Dorothy Sebastian.

The locale of the story is New York, and since realism is its keynote Vidor decided to have the real thing in Manhattan backgrounds.

Diva Learns from Screen

THE motion picture, in which characters run the full gamut of human emotions without vocal aid, is a great teacher of dramatic art, says Miss Queena Mario, of the Metropolitan Opera House.

Says Miss Mario: "An opera singer must know something of the business of acting as well as singing if she is to become a success on the operatic stage. A singer will invariably devote all of his or her time to the perfection of the voice and give little or no attention to the improvement of their histrionic talents. A screen player must be able to create a dramatic situation through pantomime alone. Whereas the stage artist reinforces his pantomime with an eloquent speaking part, the motion picture artist must depend wholly upon his ability to act. It is easy to see, therefore, why motion pictures are literally a school in which artists like myself can improve their own dramatic art."

Goes West to Snap Celebrities

IRVING CHIDNOFF, the Fifth Avenue photographer, will spend March on the Pacific Coast taking photographs of moving picture celebrities. This means actors, actresses, producers, writers, etc. They will be listed in "The Famous Two Hundred of the Motion Picture," to be issued by the Bookart Publishers, Inc.

Picture History in Pictures

PUBLICATION of "Masters and Masterpieces of the Screen," a pictorial history of motion pictures, was announced this week by P. F. Collier & Son Company. It is the most comprehensive and interesting work of the kind we have seen. and reflects great credit on the book editorial department of Collier's. The page size is large (12 by 16½ inches) and stills from outstanding productions of the past dozen years are beautifully reproduced. Brief biographies of players are also given. Special articles feature the history of motion pictures and specialized phases of the subject—one of which, may we make so bold as to add, is "European Contributions to the Screen," by L. C. Moen of THE NEWS' staff. Will H. Hays contributes an introduction. Collier's expect the book to reach an enormous sale, owing to popular interest in the subject, perhaps surpassing that in the War and Navy Books, which went over a million and a half copies.

A Tip For Motorists

AT the height of the recent cold snap in the Cleveland territory, Salesman Bishop, of Producers Distributing Corporation, started out for Newark, Ohio, in his car. On the way, he came to a hill which was such a glare of ice that he was unable to make it. The fact that he had no skid chains increased his difficulties. He noticed nearby a house which was closed for the winter. On the porch the tenants had left a porch swing. Bishop had a brilliant idea. He took the swing down, removed the chains that had held it, wound them around his tires and fastened them with some wire he happened to have in the car.

With this assistance he managed to get over the hill. He says that his ride to the Grand Theatre, at Newark, was not especially comfortable, but that he got "The Nervous Wreck" contract that he was after.

The First Picture Plays

THERE is still living, in New York City, a man who can probably lay claim to being the first to put a "picture play" on a screen. He is Alexander Black, a novelist, and in 1894 he conceived the idea of taking still photos of consecutive poses of action in an imagined story and projecting them on a screen with a stereopticon which dissolved each one into the next, giving an approximate effect of motion. His first picture drama was "Miss Jerry," and it was shown in lyceums all over the country. He photographed President Cleveland in the act of signing a bill, and other major celebrities, including President McKinley. His picture plays were accompanied by a 15,000-word monologue which Black delivered. Eventually the motion picture came along, and Black returned to his first love, literature.

Lois Wilson Completes Role

LOIS WILSON completed work Monday in the feminine starring role in "Broadway Nights," a Robert Kane production. which was directed by Joseph Boyle. This is Miss Wilson's first starring vehicle as a free-lance, and Kane is father to the statement that Miss Wilson has never done better work. As he was associated for several years with Famous Players during the same period that Miss Wilson was one of its banner players, he is eminently able to judge. From present signs, Miss Wilson will leave for Hollywood on the completion of this picture.

To Present Everest Film

THE Film Associates, a group organized in 1925, to help in the work of finding audiences for unusual films, has arranged for the first theatrical showing in America of "The Epic of Mount Everest." This film, which was extremely successful abroad, will be given special noonday showings at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, New York, from March 21 to April 3. Captain John Noel, F.R.G.S., who made the film, will lecture with each showing.

A $250,000 Party

AN impromptu party staged in the projection room of Warner Bros.' New York offices the other night, witnessed an entertainment that was not only unique, but positively staggering when one considered what it represented in the matter of cost.

The bill was made up entirely of Vitaphone numbers and arranged as a high-class vaudeville programme. There were fourteen numbers on it, for each one of which a special setting had been built.

The opening number introduced Mme. Frances Alda, who sang "The Star Spangled Banner," accompanied by the entire Vitaphone Symphony Orchestra. The closing number was furnished by Roger Wolf Kahn's Orchestra and mid-way in the bill was Mme. Schumann-Heink in three numbers. Albert Spalding, the violinist, and Margaret McKee were also on the programme, which ran for three hours.

At the conclusion of the bill the auditor of the corporation, after some hasty figuring, declared that those present had witnessed an entertainment that up to that minute had cost in assembling, building and in fees to artists, a sum in excess of $250,000.

New Art Film Theatre

DEVOTED to unusual motion pictures, a new theatre to be known as the Fifty-fifth Street Cinema is being constructed at 154 West Fifty-fifth Street, New York City, sponsored by the Art Cinema League.

The new house, which is to contain 299 seats, will be of the intimate type of theatre, presenting those films which appeal to the intellect or are unique in their development, but which are unable to find general release to the public.

The new theatre is to follow the Spanish mission design in architecture in the construction of the interior. The facade, however, is to carry out the English tradition.

Lya's Brief Vacation

LYA DE PUTTI arrived in New York last week for a month's vacation after finishing "The Heart Thief" for De Mille. A few days later she received an offer from Universal to play the title role in "Lea Lyon," regarded as one of the acting plums of the year, and turned around and hied herself back to the West Coast, where the time allotted to her vacation will be spent before the camera.

Here's the brilliant cast of the Fox Minstrel Show, "A Night in Minstrelania," which proved a riot of laughter at the recent Fun Frolic celebrated by the Foxites at the Hotel McAlpin, New York. British Exhibitors Rescind Boycott Against Famous

(Special Cable to THE NEWS from Kinematograph Weekly)

LONDON, March 15.—Meeting today with the General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, John Cecil Graham, managing director of Famous Players in Great Britain, agreed not to compete with British exhibitors so long as exhibitor competition exists in key towns.

Mr. Graham further agreed, on behalf of Famous Players, that the Futurist Theatre, Birmingham, is to be operated by a British exhibitor. On its part, the C.E.A. agreed to rescind the boycott resolution.

Authors' Council Formed by Paramount

Will Aid Authors in Development of Original Picture Stories; LeBaron Heads Department

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week by Famous Players-Lasky of the formation of an authors' council formed for the purpose of developing original picture stories and the encouragement of authors to write directly for the screen. William LeBaron will head the department and Owen Davis will be associate director. Mr. Davis, who is president of the Authors' League of America, will represent American dramatists, Frederick Lonsdale represents British dramatists and Alfred Savoir will represent the French. Offices will be maintained in the Paramount Building on Broadway, New York City.

The council will act independently of the editorial department of Famous, which will continue reading published stories of manuscript and plays. "It will also act as a clearing house for information as to the story needs of Paramount stars and directors," said Mr. Lasky, "and is expected to be of great help to authors in marketing their ideas by providing them with specific information on the requirements of production."

In this connection Mr. Lasky explained that through the closing of the Paramount Long Island studio authors need no longer seek advice on stories from production executives at the studios, who have other work to attend to. Now writers can go to the council, submit their ideas, and have help and guidance in working them out and develop their stories with a definite market in sight. "The last two years have shown," said the Paramount vice-president, "that the really big pictures of the screen come, not from the stage or novel, but from original ideas which are carefully developed into picture stories.

"One of the big features of the Authors' Council is that it will really be a market place for story ideas. A bulletin will be posted daily in the council rooms giving the latest information as to the story needs of the studio for our stars and directors. Thus authors will be kept constantly informed as to the changes in the production policies and the sort of material required for our production schedule. For instance, if it is decided to make a group of road shows, authors will be notified by the bulletin board that ideas are wanted that are big enough in their conception and pictorial scope to warrant the expenditure of the large sum of money which road shows usually cost. If we are in need of stories for Bebe Daniels or Clara Bow, this fact will be announced on the bulletin board. Thus if an author has ideas for stories which fit these needs he can discuss his ideas with Mr. LeBaron and his associates and, if the ideas are approved, can proceed to develop his story with some certainty that it will be acceptable.

"We feel that we are particularly fortunate in having Mr. LeBaron to organize and direct the work of the Authors' Council. I know of nobody in the entire picture business who is better fitted for this very important role. A magazine editor and author himself, he entered picture production a few years ago and in that time has proved himself one of the outstanding producers. For the last two years as associate Paramount producer he has been in charge of production at our Long Island studio, which means that he supervised the production of such pictures as 'Beau Geste,' 'A Kiss for Cinderella,' 'The Quarterback,' 'Knockout Reilly,' 'Aloma of the South Seas,' 'The Street of Forgotten Men,' 'The King on Main Street,' and others."

Stanley Gets Theatre in Philadelphia

A new $1,400,000 suburban playhouse, to be known as the Kenton Theatre, will be added to the Stanley Company of America's chain in Philadelphia, it became known today. Mastbaum Brothers & Fleisher have leased to the Stanley Company for a long term of years the structure which will rise at Kensington Avenue and Cumberland Street. The lease involved approximately $2,000,000 for the term.

Stanley and Keith Lead Merger

Theatre Chains and Their Bankers Controlling Force in Vast Merger Now Being Negotiated

ADDITIONAL developments this week in the vast merger being developed showed that theatre chains are now the ruling factor rather than distributing or producing units, and that through these the bankers are the moving spirits in the consolidation under way.

Primarily it may be said that the half-billion-dollar merger is being brought about by the Stanley group and the Keith-Albee group, with distributing and producing units figuring in largely as a source of supply of product for the houses involved. This is highly significant as showing the changing complexion of the industry.

Such a merger involves tremendous difficulties in the ironing out of financial and stock details, and the first steps will be the pairing off of individual units into larger units, which will in turn merge with each other until the process of consolidation is completed. Looking toward this move, which is for the benefit of the financial interests involved, the following steps are in prospect:

The consolidation of Stanley with West Coast.

The taking over of First National control by that group.

The merging of West Coast, North American and Pacific Northwest, all to be affiliated with Stanley.

The merging of Finkelstein & Ruben and Saxe.

The merging of this group with Stanley.

The consolidation of Keith and Orpheum.

The merging of P.D.C. and Pathe, in both of which Keith is interested.

The ultimate consolidation of all these units into one group, controlling nearly a thousand theatres, perhaps with the addition of one or more other producing companies.

Perhaps not all of these rumored deals will materialize. Some of them have been denied, though not very emphatically. The Stanley-West Coast deal is set, likewise the First National deal. Papers have not been signed in the West Coast-North American deal, but it may be regarded as certain of consummation, unless unexpected obstacles should arise. This involves more than 250 theatres in itself.

The F. & R.-Saxe move is regarded as a logical one, though nothing definite has been forthcoming on it. The Keith-Albee and Orpheum consolidation has been considered for some time, and is a logical sequel to that company's recent activities.

The obstacles delaying the P.D.C.-Pathe merger are understood to have been ironed out, and the signing of a memorandum of understanding by the principals paves the way to action by the stockholders, about which there is little doubt.

Fox and F.B.O. have both been persistently mentioned in connection with the ultimate merger, though both companies have denied knowledge of it. Fox owns a heavy interest in West Coast and would bring many other theatres and considerable production resources into the pool. Just where F.B.O. would fit in is less clear, unless as a producing unit for the group.

This week has revived talk of further consolidation moves by Famous Players to combat it, should the decision of the Federal Trade Commission be favorable, as is hoped. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and United Artists are both mentioned in this connection, with Paramount possibly getting out of production entirely.

Roxy's "Cathedral" is Opened

State Officials, Bankers, Social Elite, Compose First Night Audience; Event National Affair

THE ROXY, the Cathedral of the Motion Picture, is open. Last Friday night saw the consummation of Roxy's dream of many years—his own theatre, with everything as he wished it—and the 6,200 enthusiastic patrons at the opening bore witness to its success. Cabinet officials, U. S. senators, state governors, army and navy officials, and notables of New York life were in attendance, testifying to the importance of the event as a national affair.

As car after car rolled up to the door to discharge its load of distinguished guests, flashlights spurted their glare of light over Seventh Avenue for an instant, vying with the brilliance of the electric signs. Thousands of curious onlookers packed the surrounding streets, taxing police efforts to the utmost.

The house had been sold out weeks before, but many last minute efforts were made to obtain seats. As high as $100 per pair was offered, but those lucky enough to obtain seats were not interested in disposing of them.

Any attempt to describe the interior—its rich, dignified beauty, its softness of coloring and reserve in ornament, its comfort and luxury—must be left to another department. Sufficient it is to say that no one was disappointed in the architecture and interior decoration of the house, which is truly "the cathedral of the motion picture," with all of the impressiveness and magnificence which that term implies.

The occasion was notable for the absence of speeches and the usual ceremony which goes with the dedication of a new house. Chimes pealed forth, an invocation was read, and with a symphonic tone poem by the orchestra the performance was on. The impressive invocation was read by Stephen Wright, and at the words, "Let there be light," the house lights were brought up to show the beauty of the theatre. The dedicatory overture, magnificently played by what is probably the finest orchestra ever assembled for a motion picture theatre, described musically the events surrounding the writing of "The Star Spangled Banner," with appropriate stage pictures and lighting effects.

The ballet number, "A Floral Fantasy," followed and brought liberal applause. A motion picture showing President Coolidge, Governor Smith and other leaders, with their letters of congratulation to Roxy, gave further evidence of the momentous nature of the occasion.

Another stage number, fully as ambitious as a scene from a large musical production, entitled "A Fantasy of the South," also scored strongly. The Roxy Pictorial Review was next in order, and included special material prepared by news weekly organizations and animated cartoon studios for the event.

"A Russian Lullaby," written by Irving Berlin, was the first presentation of this number anywhere, and was effectively mounted with the aid of a rising stage and the Roxy Chorus.

Vitaphone figured prominently in the next number. An orchestral prelude was played by the theatre orchestra, after which the orchestra came to silence and a Vitaphone reproduction of a scene from "Carmen," with Giovanni Martinelli and Jeanne Gordon, was presented.

"Destiny," a brief spoken prologue to the feature, was read by Henry Stephens, and the feature came on the screen—"The Love of Sunya."

This ended the program, and at its close Roxy may well have been the proudest and happiest individual in New York that night—for the highly critical first audience has come, and seen and been thoroughly conquered by the cathedral-like beauty of the theatre which he had dreamed into actual existence.

Among the guests at the opening were Governor Smith of New York, Governor Moore of New Jersey, Governor Trumbull of Connecticut, Will H. Hays, a large party of Washington officials, Gloria Swanson and party, Senator Copeland, Senator Wagner, Harold Lloyd, J. D. Williams, Jesse L. Lasky, Albert Parker, Charles Chaplin, Lowell Sherman, Pauline Garon, Sam Katz, Mary Brian, Lee and J. J. Shubert, Irving Berlin, Hope Hampton, Richard A. Rowland, Lois Wilson, Arthur Hammerstein, Joseph Plunkett, Dr. A. H. Gianinni and Joseph M. Schenck.

THE annual meeting of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation stockholders will be held March 29, and in the notice of the meeting, to be issued today, there is a proposal to change the name of the company to the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation.

Adolph Zukor, president of the corporation, explained the reason for the proposed change yesterday. "For many years," he said, "we have extensively advertised the name Paramount Pictures as the trademark of our product. The result is that millions of people throughout the world who are familiar with the sign 'Paramount Pictures' do not appreciate that Paramount Pictures have always been made by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. In making 'Paramount' a part of the corporate name, therefore, we are taking into our corporate title the extremely valuable good-will that has been created by our product during the last fifteen years."

Dinner Internat'l Affair

Latin American Diplomats Accept Invitation to Attend A.M.P.A. Annual Function, Astor, April 2

BILLED as the seventh annual and the first international function of its kind, the dinner of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the Hotel Astor, April 2, will set the stage for international good will with especial honor to the Latin American countries. With the complete announcement of the program for the event there is revealed promise of one of the most imposing spectacles of any motion picture dinner.

For the first time in the history of the motion picture industry foreign ambassadors from the embassies at Washington, ministers and charge d'affaires, and a cabinet officer, Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, will be guests of honor and speaker.

The complete list of speakers includes: Will H. Hays, who will act as toastmaster; Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce; two South American ambassadors; Mayor James J. Walker and A. M. Botsford.

The international aspect of the dinner will loom formidably in the array of Latin American diplomats who will sit at the speakers' table. Those who have been invited as speakers or guests—and most of whom have already accepted—are:

Mr. Honorio Pueyrredon, Ambassador of Argentina; Dr. Herman Velarde, Ambassador of Peru; Senor Don Manuel C. Tellez, Ambassador of Mexico; Mr. S. Following the completion of the speaking, which will take approximately an hour and will be broadcast over Station WJZ, there will be an hour's entertainment staged under the direction of Major Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol Theatre.

Two film travesties, the annual burlesque news reel and a special reel produced by Rose Pelswick, will be shown.

Under the personal supervision of Major Bowes, soloists and ballet members of the Capitol Theatre's family will offer numbers specially prepared for the A.M.P.A. dinner. It will be the first time that members of the Capitol ballet have been allowed to perform outside the theatre.

The entertainment will last about an hour. James Caruso's A.M.P.A. orchestra will furnish music for dancing until an early hour.

Weil Heads "U" Theatres Exploitation; Rothstein Controls Film Dept.

UNIVERSAL Chain Theatres Corporation this week engaged Joe Weil, former exploitation manager of Universal Pictures Corporation, to organize and operate an exploitation and presentation program for its 260 theatres. Nat Rothstein, whom Universal Pictures sent to the Coast last year to accomplish certain exploitation features, has finished his work there and arrives in New York this week; he will put into execution exploitation plans for "U" pictures and also supervise the company's exploitation department.

Mr. Weil plans a uniform publicity, advertising and exploitation service for all "U" theatres which will be organized and centered in New York with extension to all branches of the chain. A uniform program will be published and a magazine will be started for the benefit of all the houses.

Plans Film of His Ancestor, Alexander Hamilton

Announcing that a year's plans will finally be culminated when work begins soon upon the filming of the life of his illustrious great-great-grandfather whose name he bears, Alexander Hamilton has arrived in New York to attend to some of the vital questions relative to the production which will attempt to portray the story of the Colonial days and which is intended as a tribute to the first Secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

Although the title has not yet been determined preparations are already under way for the production which many national financiers are backing. A major portion of the story's locale will be laid in the West Indies where Hamilton lived a great deal of his life. Romance and dramatic action will be the keynote, it is said.

Hamilton is associated with Jess Smith Productions, Inc., as treasurer of the company.

Sparks Opens Riverside in Jacksonville, Fla.

E. J. Sparks, head of the Sparks Enterprises, operating a circuit of Florida theatres, opened recently his new Riverside Theatre on Park Street, in the heart of Jacksonville's residential-business section.

The Riverside has been constructed at the cost of approximately $150,000. The building in which the theatre is situated is also owned by Mr. Sparks, and carrying out the architecture of the theatre itself, has been skillfully arranged into modish street shops surrounding the entrance to the house proper.

Anna Aiken Patterson, editor and publisher of the Weekly Film Review, made the feature address at the formal opening of the Riverside Theatre. The initial screen attraction was "The Night of Love."

HOLLAND

Article Concluding In Series Based on Personal Survey

By William A. Johnston

BEFORE leaving Paris for Holland, I heard about Tuchinski and his string of theatres in Rotterdam and Amsterdam. Albert Kaufman, head of Paramount European theatre interests styled him the Sid Grauman of Holland.

Tuchinski—so he is referred to, and in the third person, even by himself—is a most interesting personality; and so is the story of his theatre career as given me by a former Consul in Rotterdam.

He came to the latter port from Poland, expecting to embark for the United States. Had he done so I am sure he would have made his mark and his million here.

But he was refused passports, for some reason, by the emigration authorities. So were a number of his friends and compatriots; so they turned their attention to the small movies then under way in Holland.

Tuchinski alone survived in the business and out of his efforts and shoestring capital have grown two of the finest theatres in all Western Europe.

He has two large ones, one each in Rotterdam and Amsterdam, and two smaller ones in the former city. He is the only chain in Holland, which has about two hundred theatres altogether. The independent houses organized themselves into a cooperative group just after the war, but the enterprise failed and they have reverted to their former independence.

Ufa has a theatre in The Hague and so has Loew-Metro. A local firm is joint owner of the latter.

Tuchinski has the call, he claims, on about 95% of the American product.

Holland, always a prosperous country, prospered still more during the war. From the great and booming harbor of Rotterdam into the well-kept and thriving interior it is strictly a business country. English has replaced French in the schools; English is considered, evidently, the language of business. The municipalities are well managed.

Amsterdam, outside of the quaint old district, has all the appearances of a smart American city. Population between 500,000 and 600,000. Rotterdam somewhat less.

The Hague resembles Washington; largely a residential city. There are several smaller cities, population from 15,000 to 50,000.

It would seem to an American theatre man that a single first run house in a city of over half a million inhabitants ought to get some competition in rather lively fashion. But, as in France, there's another side to the picture.

The Dutch people, despite their prosperity, have also a lot of old world habits and traditions. The business of eating takes up a good part of the day and theatre entertainment does not seem to be able to compete. There are no small apartments to unload their dwellers into the greater luxury of the modern movie palace. After the sacred and elaborate rite of eating, the paterfamilias sinks himself into the evening paper which he devours from headlines to classified ads. And these, mind you, are traditions. It is only the younger generation that will change them.

Then there's the same situation with respect to the American producer-owned house. He will certainly hesitate to build a big house to run his own program against Tuchinski's pick of the entire market.

These are not, as the reader might imagine, Tuchinski's well-planted arguments against possible competition. They are my own deductions.

Tuchinski spent most of his time criticizing me because some exuberant members of our party had told a local reporter that theatres in Holland were five years behind the progress of the United States.

That is not quite fact. However, we were received with much courtesy and shown throughout the Rotterdam and Amsterdam houses, from the scrupulously clean and white-tiled basements—with their modern ventilating systems—right up to the lofty balconies and into the beautifully decorated cabarets.

These theatres are expertly managed. Courtesy and snap meet you at the door.

They are decorated with originality, richness and taste. Credit for this goes to the builder and decorator, A. R. B. Maas, who has been associated with Tuchinski for some time and who may visit the United States in the near future. He is a man of unusual artistic ability and business acumen. He also would have been prominent in the show world. His decorative schemes are distinctive to a degree.

The unfortunate statement that Tuchinski's remarkable theatres are five years—or any years—behind our own, was silly. They are not, of course, to be compared with our new metropolitan theatres where the cost has recently exceeded ten million dollars. Nor can they even be compared with American theatres in cities the size of Amsterdam.

In fact, no comparison at all can be made. They are not like our American theatres.

They are of a local style, made to meet what the owner showman believes to be the up-to-date taste of Holland. Perhaps Tuchinski is wrong. Perhaps the theatres of John Eberson, Rapp and Rapp, Alschlager, Thomas Lamb and other American architects would go still better. Who knows?

It is division of opinion that makes horse racing—and the theatre business.

When Tuchinski planned his beautiful Amsterdam theatre he wanted a striking novelty. He also wanted eclat, like the showman he is. So he built it in the form of an opera house.

To an American the interior seems odd, and impractical. But on the other hand it is claimed that this is just what the European public wants—the better public.

Theatre-going there is somewhat a social ceremony. People in the audience want to see each other. Hence the high-flung balconies, receding, so that one in the orchestra can see everyone above.

It is said that the American style of low balcony, projected far over the orchestra seats, would be resented by the European. And the argument will continue until someone builds an American style theatre and the box-office makes or breaks him.

When I visited Tuchinski's Amsterdam theatre, "The Big Parade" was in its first week. The American score was excellently rendered by an orchestra of fourteen pieces under the direction of Doctor Max Tak. It was expected that the picture would run three weeks, maybe four. That seems to be the limit with even the biggest American pictures. "The Ten Commandments" ran for four weeks but with a definite falling off towards the end of the run. The strongest run was on "If Winter Comes." The book had been widely read in Holland. But this also, is seems to me, indicates the importance of the story with movie audiences in Europe.

The larger theatres of Holland have twenty-two performances a week; five on Sunday. The scale of prices is about the same as the Paramount Theatre in New York. The typical Tuchinski program is similar to the one in our larger theatres—news reel, novelty, comedy, presentation and feature.

Hays Addresses Harvard Business School

Refuses "Pictures Made for Children" Idea; Asks Percentage Solution; Faculty to Pick Best Film

WITH a general introduction by Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F.B.O. on Monday morning of this week, the series of lectures on the motion picture business by leading motion picture executives before the School of Business Administration at Harvard University, was inaugurated. On Tuesday morning, Will H. Hays delivered a fifty-minute talk on "The Motion Picture Industry," expounding every angle of the business, production, distribution and exhibition; the educational possibilities of the motion picture and its use as a medium for better understanding between nations.

Early in his address, Mr. Hays emphasized the patent absurdity of the statement that seventy-five per cent. of motion picture audiences are made up of children; pointing out that actual figures show that of the ninety million people attending motion picture theatres every week, children comprise but eight per cent. "The general run of motion pictures are not now, and never will be, intended especially for children," said the M.P.P.D.A. president.

Taking up the distribution of motion pictures, Mr. Hays stated that an intelligent study of selling methods must take into account the fact that nobody knows what a picture is worth before exhibition. A film costing a half-million dollars may be worth a five hundred dollar rental when shown in a theatre, whereas one with a financial outlay of one-fifth may be worth five times the rental of the half-million dollar film, explained Mr. Hays.

Will H. Hays

For this reason, a working system of rental payments in ratio to the actual box-office returns of a picture has absorbed the attention of many authorities on sales for some time past, said Mr. Hays. He then offered the problem for solution to the student body. He told the School that percentage booking has been used in some instances but is found faulty owing to obvious difficulties, of checking and accounting.

Mr. Hays sketched the development of the business from the early days, stressing the hardihood and courage of the pioneers in the industry, the competition of the fiercest sort and the gradual rising of the standard of ethics. The United States produces more than eighty-five per cent. of the world's supply of motion pictures, the students were told.

The producing phase of the industry was next enlarged upon. The cost of pictures averages about a hundred thousand dollars but there have been productions made for five thousand and others, in rare instances requiring an outlay of two to three million. Salaries of motion picture stars are, like any other industry, regulated according to supply and demand. The importance of the motion picture was next dwelt on by Mr. Hays, as he cited the effect the exhibition of a picture has upon people and trade. "Trade follows the film," he said, "because the exhibition of new styles in clothing and furniture stimulates the sales of these articles as they arouse desire in the spectator. The motion picture has also benefited living conditions."

The students were then told of the central casting bureau in Hollywood maintained by the producers, the arbitration system which annually saves the distributor and exhibitor millions of dollars and the reason for the organization of the M.P.P.D.A. How the story and play material offered for picturization is chosen was detailed, Mr. Hays laying stress on the fact that books or plays of doubtful nature have no chance of getting to the screen.

That the motion picture is the medium for better understanding between nations and the resultant minimum chance of wars in the future was the note on which Mr. Hays closed his lecture.

Jesse L. Lasky delivered a lecture Wednesday morning on "Production Management Problems." Announcement was made on Wednesday by Harvard University that the faculty of the department of fine arts will each year make a selection of the best films of the preceding twelve months, and, in association with the Fogg Museum, and the University library, a library and archives of films will be started.

The rest are all two-reel subjects.

G. E. PATTON, director of the Motion Picture Bureau, Ontario, and of the Trenton Studios, Ontario, attended the recent opening of the Roxy Theatre as representative of Hon. C. "The Rough Riders"

WHOOP-EE! The Rough Riders drilled a spell at the San Antonio fair grounds, charged up San Juan Hill, the "cocky" Military Academy boy soldier won the heart and hand of a sweet and winsome, 1898 vintage, fair lady and "Teddy" became President and held a reception for his old friends.

That's the story of "The Rough Riders" which opened Tuesday night, at the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York.

But the picture that has been evolved from this simple narrative is quite another matter. It is 100 percent pure unadulterated American entertainment with just enough mixture of real drama, to make it stand out as a production which can not fail with any class of audience in any class of theatre.

The sponsors have very evidently noted the successes of "The Covered Wagon" and "The Big Parade" and with fine intelligence deliberately set out to model this new epic along the same lines. We have the character comedy, quite as good incidentally, that really brought "The Covered Wagon" out of the western class. We have a soldier hero who marches away to war leaving a sweetheart behind, some effective battle scenes, and just about the right amount of flag waving, as in "The Big Parade." But "The Rough Riders" is not an imitation of either picture. It stands by itself as a perfect example of what really can be accomplished when brains and organization get together to set down on paper something they want to do.

"The Rough Riders" is no "accident." They used their book agent "Teddy" with effective discretion. He doesn't act and has only a reasonable amount to do with the narrative unfolded. There is just enough history about "The Rough Riders" to satisfy those who like history and not enough to drive away the picture fans.

There is as pretty a romance as has ever been woven into screen entertainment. It has real comedy and incident and it moves along briskly from one sequence to another to the ultimate end, the defeat of the Spanish forces, Roosevelt's election to the presidency and the proper culmination of the romance.

In acting honors, Charles Farrell easily is a winner. He had the role and he played it so well that other fine performances are shoved to the background.

But after all "The Rough Riders" is a "production." It gets out of the class where individual performances count for much. Its audience appeal is not in closeups and the players' very names are lost to memory as the picture's story unfolds. It is not a question of "Who's in it?"

We predict for "The Rough Riders" road-show and picture-theatre success and these two are not always the same thing. With the name of "Teddy" for exploitation possibilities and a picture that will build and build on its entertainment merits, this picture looks like the biggest one so far this year.—J.S.D.

Manitoba's Change in Tax Doesn't Benefit Small Town

Exhibitors of Manitoba are not exactly satisfied with the announcement of Premier John Bracken of the removal by the Manitoba Government of the amusement ticket tax on theatre tickets up to 25 cents. This will not affect the admissions at theatres in small towns where regular admissions are generally 35 and 50 cents, nor will it make any change in adult prices at theatres in the cities.

Representatives of the Manitoba Exhibitors' Association had asked for the removal of the Provincial tax on tickets up to 50 cents and the committee is still working for further relief.

Fox Picture Outlay $15,000,000

Huge Sum to be Spent on Program for Next Season; Sheehan Outlines East and West Coast Activities

HAVING completed its schedule for 1926-27, Fox Films will start production of the pictures for next season's program on April 1st. Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president, stated this week that the sum of $15,000,000 will be spent on next year's pictures. He also announced that $5,000,000 worth of completed motion pictures, scheduled for September, are now in the company's vaults. These include eight specials, among which are "Sunrise," "7th Heaven" and "Carmen."

The studios in New York will make twelve pictures which will be directed by Allan Dwan among others. Joseph Engel is studio manager. Victor Schertzinger has just been signed to a long-term contract and will leave shortly for New York to direct the first production for the Fox "Movietone."

At the West Coast plant it is planned to build additional stages on the property at Westwood in addition to a new administration building. The stages will measure three hundred and six hundred feet. A central power plant and storage and distribution system to cost $300,000 is also arranged. Mr. Sheehan will go to Europe in June and while there will spend four weeks in the Fox studios in Berlin discussing plans for the new season with Carl Freund, now in charge of Fox European production.

Winfield R. Sheehan

Jack Ford, Fox director, is now in Germany shooting scenes for a special, which will be made in Bavaria and in the Hollywood studios. He is being aided in Germany by Carl Freund and will spend two months there. The story is by I. A. R. Wylie and the script by Philip Klein.

Jack Blystone will direct a special picture featuring the two comedy heroes of "What Price Glory," Ted McNamara and Sammy Cohen.

Frank Borzage will direct "The Grand Army Man" with Alec Francis in the name role. Philip Klein will do the script of this Belasco-Warfield production.

"Prince Fazil," a romantic stage play in London and Paris, to be opened in New York in September, from the pen of Pierre Frondaie, is on the list. Heading the cast will be Charles Farrell and Dolores Del Rio. The script will be done by Loring and Leighton; directed by Howard Hawks.

"Frozen Justice," an Arctic story, will be directed by Jack Ford. It is from the book of the same name by the Danish explorer, Captain Ejnar Mikkelsen. Another production will be the Belasco stage play, "The Comedian," written by Sacha Guitry.

Fox also announces the purchase of "The Mud Turtle," a stage play written by Elliott Lester. "Balaoo," the mystery novel by Gaston Leroux, is a melodrama to be staged by Al Ray. The English stage play, "None But the Brave," a comedy drama by Bernard Merivale and Brandon Fleming, has also been purchased for immediate production.

Yet another stage play is "Macushla," which will be filmed immediately under the direction of Frank O'Connor, the latest director to join the Fox ranks. The adaptation is being prepared by Randall H. Faye. Howard Hawks is in production on "Cradle Snatchers," with Louise Fazenda and a cast of principals.

Alfred Green is also in production on the film version of "Is Zat So," with George O'Brien and Edmund Lowe playing the leading roles, and with Kathryn Perry, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and others in the east. It is further announced that Raoul Walsh, following the production of "Carmen," will begin work on a story of the underworld with Victor McLaglen playing the leading role.

Supreme Court Upholds S. C. Admission Tax

VALIDITY of the South Carolina admission tax was upheld March 14 by the United States Supreme Court, in Washington, D.C., which affirmed, without comment, the decision of the State Supreme Court in the case brought by Ed C. Curdts, Vardry McBee, Robert Wilson, et al., to recover from the South Carolina Tax Commission taxes paid under protest. The State law levies a tax of one cent for each ten cents or fraction thereof collected for admission to places of amusement, but exempts amusement places in incorporated towns of less than 2,000 inhabitants; charitable and certain other similar performances; collegiate and public school amusements, and swimming pools where picnic grounds are maintained free.

It was contended that the tax burden fell unduly upon the theatres, and chiefly the motion picture theatres, in the larger towns, although in many cases the small town operator has a better investment. At the same time, it was pointed out, the tax is applicable to unincorporated places of less than 2,000 population, of which there are many in the State, but not to theatres in such places if they are incorporated towns.

M. P. T. O. A. Meet for Neil House, Columbus

The Neil House in Columbus, O., will house the Eighth Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America when that organization meets on May 17 to 19. The banquet and ball will be celebrated in the grand ballroom of the Neil House the evening of the 18th.

J. J. Harwood, chairman of the general convention committee, has arranged with the convention bureau of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce for a general reservation of rooms at the leading Columbus hotels beginning Monday, May 16. He urges all exhibitors who expect to attend to mail their reservations in at an early date.

Duluth Exhibitors Interested in Vote on Daylight Saving

Duluth will vote on daylight saving at the general municipal election on April 5, and the exhibitors of that city are vitally interested in the outcome, as setting the clocks ahead sometimes has an unfavorable effect on theatre business. The Junior Chamber of Commerce of Duluth is sponsoring the bill, which provides for moving the clock ahead one hour between April 24 and October 2. Only a majority of votes is necessary to the adoption of the measure.

Ohio Governor to Speak at M.P.T.O.A. Banquet

A. VIC DONAHEY, Governor of Ohio, will deliver the principal address at the convention banquet of the Motion Picture Theatre Owenrs of America, the evening of Wednesday, May 18, in Columbus, Ohio. The Governor, it is reported, has an important message to deliver to the eighth annual meet of the national organization. His presence at the banquet will be one of the feature events of the convention, arrangements for which are going on apace. Several important announcements are to be made public regarding the same.

J. J. Harwood, of Cleveland, a National director and director of the General Convention Committee, will announce the names of the committee within a few days. Other committees will be announced simultaneously. P. J. Wood, business manager of the M.P.T.O. of Ohio, is secretary of the General Convention Committee, and is actively supervising arrangements at the Columbus end. Fresh Delay in Settlement of F. P.-L. Case

A DELAY of several weeks will probably be experienced before the Federal Trade Commission in Washington, D.C., decides the Famous Players-Lasky case, it became known last week.

With the addition of Edgar A. McCullough to the commission and his desire to participate in consideration of the case, it was necessary to postpone action until he had an opportunity to familiarize himself with the details of the proceeding.

AT the Cameo "Stark Love" is playing its third week with every indication that it will be held over for at least a fourth.

Here is a picture that, denied a premiere in a theatre owned by its sponsors, Paramount, just naturally does its own exploitation, the word-of-mouth kind, so well that it has built solidly from an average opening through the first week of Lent and bids fair to keep on holding up indefinitely.

Which brings the question of why the Publix theatre department or sales organization saw fit to let this picture "ride." Others no more gifted with box office second sight saw its merit. Did they fail to measure it correctly because it didn't cost enough to demand their respect or was its lack of box-office names considered too serious a drawback?

Do dollars and cents invested form the basis of measurement of New York filmdom? Here is a picture that Mary Pickford might well have done, to her credit and to the enthusiastic shouts of the trade as a whole. Does Miss Pickford's name (or that of any other popular star) mean so much that even a really great picture must be denied a run in a house where it can reach the greatest audience and have the best individual opportunity to obtain a large box-office gross?

If this is true then this business must ever be in the power and subject to the whims if not the impossible demands of the players whose names have already become a box-office asset. If making a fine picture, without stars, excellent entertainment, as "Stark Love" unmistakably is, is to be a liability instead of an asset, then it is time that people who own theatres forget the immediate dollar and begin selling pictures to patrons on a new basis.—J.S.D.

Australian Theatre Merger

Hoyts-Williamson Group With 80 Houses, Extending Their Operations on Big Scale

QUITE a flurry occurred recently in Australia when a merger was completed uniting eighty theatres operating in Victoria, New South Wales and West Australia under the banner of Hoyt's Theatres, Ltd.

Since then operations have been extended to the other states and New Zealand.

The amalgamation, according to W. A. Robbins, New York representative of Hoyt, is of a number of companies previously operating in two groups—the Hoyt group and the J. C. Williamson group. The directors of the new organization, all well known in the Australian industry, are Sir George Tallis, F. W. Thring and J. H. Tait (representing Williamson) and G. F. Griffith and F. Challingsworth (representing the Hoyts). Messrs. Griffith and Thring are the managing directors.

Modern, up-to-date theatres, located in the capital cities, and costing in the aggregate well over $5,000,000 are being built for the new organization, Mr. Robbins announced. The capital value of the theatres in which the new organization will carry on business or be otherwise interested amounts, it is stated, to $17,000,000.

The amalgamation has brought about an interesting situation to American distributors with offices in Australia, to independent producers who sell their product in New York and to manufacturers of theatre equipment which will be needed in quantity by the Hoyts in equipping new theatres.

New Fireproof Regulation For Toronto Theatres

The Toronto City Council has made a ruling that any alteration to increase the seating capacity of any theatre in the Ontario Capital can only be permitted if the whole structure is made fireproof at the same time in accordance with regulations covering the point. No new theatres of any size can be erected in Toronto unless they are fireproof throughout.

Famous Statement Shows Five And a Half Million Profit for 1926

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in its consolidated statement (which includes the earnings of subsidiary companies) reports net profits of $1,960,477.37 for the three months and $5,600,815.71 for the twelve months to January 1, 1927, after deducting all charges and reserves for Federal income and other taxes.

After allowing for payment of dividends on the preferred stock, the above earnings amount to $10.82 per share on the common stock for the year 1926, based on the average number of shares of common stock outstanding during that period.

Franklin Feted at Dinner

Industry's Leaders Pay Glowing Tribute to New West Coast Theatre's President and General M'g'r

PUBLIX paid a glowing tribute to Harold B. Franklin, retiring vice-president and head of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation theatre department for the past five years, at a testimonial dinner given at the Friars Club, New York, Saturday evening, March 12th.

Mr. Franklin, who has resigned to accept the presidency of the West Coast Theatres under the new Stanley-First National amalgamation, was praised by nearly every high executive of the Paramount organization in words so unmistakably sincere and appreciative that the most modest of men would have every reason to feel elated.

The speeches which followed the dinner began with a tribute from Mike Shea of Buffalo, Mr. Franklin's former employer. He summed up his address by saying that Franklin was a loyal, hard worker, of whom he was very proud.

Mr. Shea was followed by Jesse L. Lasky, who spoke of the personal side of Mr. Franklin. He said, "God love Harold. He makes friends and keeps them."

Sam Katz was another Publix official to express his appreciation. He began by relating that he had found the theatre circuit work all done for him when he joined the Paramount organization and that his part consisted only in providing the shows. "Building up a chain of theatres," Mr. Katz said, "is a tough job. The man who does that must stick close to the job. Long before Publix was formed Mr. Franklin built up a chain of theatres for Famous Players and, what is more, he developed that chain, not only in number of houses acquired, but placed them on a healthy operating footing."

Mr. Katz gave Franklin full credit for the Paramount Theatre, New York. "The Paramount was Harold's job," Mr. Katz said. "It was his dream. It required a great amount of vision. It was a hard job and one filled with heartaches, and when it was finally completed and the lights came up, Harold was in the position of finding others in that light which rightfully belonged to himself. The Paramount was planned and nearly finished before I came into the organization. I take no credit for the job. But when the lights came up, as I said, others were in that light and receiving the applause, while he was merely listening. Harold was in that position."

Sidney R. Kent spoke feelingly of his pleasant association with Mr. Franklin. "No one will miss him more than I will," Mr. Kent stated. "No one knows better than I of his unceasing work and loyal effort."

He also predicted greater success for the retiring executive and wished him the best of luck in his new venture.

Adolph Zukor spoke at considerable length concerning Franklin's association with Paramount. He gave him full credit for organizing the theatre department and placing it on its present high efficiency basis. He said he had engaged Franklin at a time when he admitted that he hadn't the semblance of a theatre department and that Franklin had accomplished an almost impossible job.

That Franklin is leaving Publix with the most friendly feeling on both sides was evidenced when Mr. Zukor said that under no circumstances would he allow Franklin to leave the organization except that the new job presents greater opportunities.

Mr. Franklin spoke feelingly of his association with the Paramount company.

A number of telegrams were read by Mr. Kent from prominent people who could not be present.

Mayor Walker, who was also unable to be present, sent the following wire:

"My heartiest appreciation for Harold Franklin. Developed in Buffalo, has grown in his great success. You know I regret that I cannot be present, and you know I wish everybody at the dinner a wonderful time and continued success to Harold Franklin."

Penn. Theatre Building

Houses Planned by Chamberlain, Appell, Straub and Comerford Circuits; Average 2,000 Seats

ANNOUNCEMENTS of building plans for several large new picture theatres in Pennsylvania cities were made in the first week of March. L. J. Chamberlain, president and general manager of the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, Inc., with main offices in Shamokin, which controls a chain of picture houses in the hard-coal mining regions, announced plans for the erection of a theatre in Kulpmont, that, it is unofficially stated, will cost $100,000. The company has purchased the James J. Hanlon property, at Chestnut and Eighth streets, from Paul Azary, as the site for the theatre, and building operations will begin in a few weeks. The house will have seats for 2,000, which will all be located on one floor, and the building will be equipped with stage and dressing-rooms so that it will be possible to present legitimate attractions. The building will be of steel and concrete fireproof construction. The site is 120 by 150 feet.

Nathan Appell, head of the Nathan Appell Enterprises, which control practically all the theatres in York, announced plans to erect a new theatre with seating capacity of 2,000, on the site of the present Wizard Theatre in the business center of York, directly opposite the Yorketown Hotel. It will be known as the State and will be devoted to feature motion pictures and vaudeville.

In addition to the ground floor auditorium there will be a balcony and mezzanine floor. The building will be equipped with a modern refrigerating system capable of maintaining a steady temperature of 70 degrees. It is proposed to have the house ready to open early in 1928.

When the new State is opened it is proposed to transfer Keith-Albee vaudeville from the York Opera House which will then return to its old policy of presenting drama and other shows, and the Orpheum Theatre will be used for showing the same type of motion pictures now presented at the Wizard.

J. W. Straub and a number of business associates have obtained a permit for the erection of a new theatre on the Straub property at Seneca and Elm streets, Oil City. The theatre will have a capacity of 1,150 with room to increase the seats to 2,000. There will be a stage 26 by 60 feet, and the interior of the theatre will be finished in ornamental plaster. The contract for the building has been let to J. H. Gross, who began operations at once. It is proposed to open the theatre early in July.

The Luzerne Amusement Company, controlled by the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, has announced plans for the erection of a modern picture house on the site of the Bohan property which has just been purchased in Pittston. The frontage on Main Street is fifty feet and the plot extends back 120 feet to Wharf Street. Luzerne controls three theatres in Pittston and one in West Pittston.

Bills Favor Conn. Houses

Exhibitors Laud Legislature's Action in Voting Favorably on Bill for Repeal of Censor and Tax

ACTION of the joint committee in unanimously voting to report favorably the bill calling for the repeal of the motion picture censorship and tax is winning the commendation of all Connecticut exhibitors who are also jubilant because of the action of the Connecticut legislature in passing a bill liberalizing the Sabbath. The passage of the bill presages speedy betterment of business conditions throughout the state.

Action on the tax and censorship, which is said to reflect the opinion of a majority of members of the legislature, is hailed as a "lifesaver" for theatre owners. Speedy action on the measure when it reaches the floor of both house and senate was presaged yesterday, with leaders in both houses determined to end the life of the obnoxious measure as speedily as possible.

British Quota Law Looms

Measure Introduced in Parliament Starts at 7½ Per Cent., Rising to 25 in 1935

AN unexpected angle to the British film quota situation developed this week when the Labor Party decided to oppose the bill on the ground that it "compels British traders to supply goods irrespective of their comparative merit and the demands of their customers."

The President of the Board of Trade announced in a speech, however, that nothing would induce him to withdraw the measure.

The bill has been introduced in the House of Commons, and provides for a quota of seven and one-half per cent. of British films for the first year, advancing to 25 per cent. in 1935, with a yearly increase of two and one-half per cent. This applies to distributors, and exhibitors will have the same percentages, starting one year later.

Blind booking and block booking are both prohibited under the measure, as was anticipated by the trade.

A British film is to be one with British actors, author and atmosphere predominating. Scenes may not be taken outside the British Empire without special permission.

Trade paper reports indicate lively opposition to the terms of the measure among exhibitors and the more conservative members of Parliament, with the probability of amendments being introduced. Exhibitors point out that no other British industry is compelled to operate under such conditions, and that many of the terms of the measure are unworkable.

One indirect result of the present situation was the formation this week of British Incorporated Pictures, Ltd., a million-pound company headed by Ralph J. Pugh, formerly with British First National, and Rupert Mason, a Lancashire cotton manufacturer. Prominent British authors and leading figures in the theatre and the world of art are enrolled in the venture, it is stated.

Supporters in Canada of a film quota law in Great Britain are enthusiastic over the prospect of the adoption of the legislation by the Imperial Parliament, particularly because of the requirement that 75 per cent. of salaries to be paid by British producing companies must go to persons domiciled within the British Empire or to British subjects, exclusive of the salaries to the director and one star of an individual picture.

Officials of the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce, under whose auspices the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studio is operated at Ottawa, are of the opinion that the new British law would lead to the establishment of important film producing companies in the Dominion of Canada because of the proximity of Canada to the United States, these being companies more or less affiliated with big United States producers.

Ray Peck, director of the Canadian Government studio, is at present in Los Angeles, where he has been discussing Canadian producing possibilities with executives of several companies.

Legislation Aids Exhibitor

Canadian Showmen and Theatre-Goers Profiting from Measures in Various Provinces

ONE after another various Provinces of Canada have announced legislative relief for exhibitors and theatre-goers.

At Victoria, B.C., on March 4, the British Columbia Government announced that the amusement tax for theatres in British Columbia cities would be cut from seven to five per cent. This will reduce the income for the Province from this revenue by $75,000 a year, it was stated.

This followed an announcement at Toronto that the Ontario Government had abolished all amusement tax on tickets up to 25 cents, this meaning a reduction in revenue of $600,000 a year for the Province of Ontario.

The Manitoba Government has also promised at Winnipeg that a substantial cut will be made at once in the Manitoba Amusement Tax while the Saskatchewan Provincial Government recently raised the ban against fight pictures.

The important step has been taken by the Quebec Provincial Government of cancelling the exemption of church and charity entertainments from the amusement tax in that Province, thus placing church concerts on the same basis as theatre performances. This was announced on March 5.

The Quebec Legislature has adopted a measure providing for the collection of the amusement tax at theatres in so-called "unorganized territory." The levy in Quebec is collected under a Provincial law and the proceeds are turned over to the municipality in which the respective theatres are located. There are quite a few theatres which are not located in cities or towns, and they have not been troubled with the amusement ticket tax. The Province will now collect this tax and provision is made for the turning over of this revenue to the nearest municipality for approved purposes.

Group Insurance for All Universal Employees

A FAR-REACHING group insurance plan for Universal employees—a flat $1,000 policy at an exceptionally low rate—has been made available to all individuals in the United States and Canada, who work for the Universal Pictures Corporation, the Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., and certain employees of the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., by Carl Laemmle, Universal president, who has just completed arrangements with the Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, for the installation of the insurance plan. More than 1,500 Universalites participating in the arrangements pay the low rate of only sixty cents for each month. The insurance is in the form of a straight life policy.

Universal shares the premium costs with the employees paying an additional sum in each case to account for the regular premium cost for this type of insurance. The plan went into effect March 10. A similar plan is now in effect through the same insurance company with members of the Universal City Club, an association of workers at Universal studio and plant.

"The Crowd," New Title of King Vidor Film

"The Crowd" has been chosen as the most appropriate title for King Vidor's new production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, an original story of the ups and downs of a young married couple in New York City, previously known by its temporary title, "The Mob." The director has had this picture in work for two months, with Eleanor Boardman and James Murray as the principals. The cast also includes Dorothy Sebastian, Lucy Beaumont, Bert Roach and Daniel Tomlinson.

Vidor plans to come East shortly in order to obtain authentic scenes of Manhattan for some of the main sequences in his story.

Kenton Will Direct May Robson's Starring Film

Erle C. Kenton has been chosen to wield the megaphone over players making "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" at the DeMille-Metropolitan studios. Harris Ford and Phyllis Haver will play prominent roles in the production which is scheduled to get under way within a fortnight. May Robson has the leading role.

The above sets at rest the many rumors with regard to the story having been sold to another producing organization by Metropolitan.

Ralph Ince Has Stellar Role in "Not For Publication"

The leading masculine role in "Not for Publication," F.B.O.'s production based on the Robert Wells Ritchie story, "The Temple of the Giants," will be portrayed by Ralph Ince. In this he is acting in a dual capacity as he will also direct the picture; Rex Lease is cast as the juvenile player while Jola Mendez is the only girl in the cast.

F. B. O. Preparing Eleven

Features in Early Stages of Work Include New "Red" Grange Vehicle and Rinehart Story

AT the F.B.O. studios, now humming with production activity, eleven productions are being prepared for work. As soon as the grooming processes have been finished on the pictures, cameras will begin to grind on them.

"Red" Grange has a new vehicle, "The Motor Maniac," which goes into production shortly. The story by Byron Morgan concerns racing and Sam Wood will direct it. Several of the racing sequences are to be photographed in Arizona with Barney Oldfield, veteran racer, furnishing technical advice in the major scenes. Jobyna Ralston will have the role of leading lady while Walter Heirs and Ben Hendricks will work in support of Grange.

Mary Robert Rinehart's story, "The Lark," or as it is known under its movie title, "The City of Shadows," is rapidly nearing completion under J. P. McGowan's direction. The production unit has just returned from a two weeks' location trip to the Mojave Desert. Jack Luden and Sharon Lynn head the cast which also includes Robert McKim, Charles A. Stevenson, William Humphreys, Bill Scott, Bill Freney and Mark Hamilton.

"Naughty Marietta," Viola Dana's story of movie folk, is also nearing the completed stage. Ed Brownell is appearing opposite Miss Dana and J. Leo Meehan is doing the filming. Tom Tyler and several of his "pals" have returned from location and are now shooting interiors for "The Cyclone of the Range." Bob de Lacy is directing. "Ladies, Beware," a George O'Hara vehicle, is in its second week under the direction of Charles Giblyn. Kathleen Myers is supporting O'Hara.

Concluding scenes of "Silver Comes Through," Fred Thomson's new Western which practically features Silver King, were taken this week. Edna Murphy is a member of Thomson's supporting cast. The script of "Not For Publication," in which Ralph Ince will play a leading role as well as direct the film, was also finished this week and it is said that actual filming will begin within a day or two.

Manuscripts on "Snappy Jane," Viola Dana's new story; "Splitting the Breeze," a Tom Tyler vehicle; an untitled story for Ranger, canine star, and the next Bob Custer Western are now being prepared. Actual shooting on them will commence within a month or so.

Warner Films Vitaphone-d

All Next Season's Pictures Equipped with Device; Harry Warner on Coast for Conferences

EVERY picture coming from the Warner Bros. company next year will be accompanied by a Vitaphone musical score, announced Harry Warner, president of the company, on the eve of his departure for the Coast, where he will spend a month resting and conferring with Jack Warner on production matters. Warner pictures will, however, continue to be available to theatres with or without the Vitaphone accompaniment, according to the individual needs of the exhibitor signing the contract.

"Further utilization of the Vitaphone invention will be made," says Mr. Warner, "by incorporating sound into many of the features when the stories' dramatic effects can be heightened by music or the human voice." He cites "The Jazz Singer" as an example. This picture, which will star George Jessel, is based on the stage play that brought him fame on Broadway. The songs which are the play's dramatic highlight will be introduced through the Vitaphone when the film version is made.

It is further expected to employ the invention in connection with the coming Warner specials, "Noah's Ark" and "Black Ivory." In both of these stories sound will be woven into sequences and situations lending themselves to such treatment.

At present the current program of Twenty-six Warner Winners is approaching completion, permitting the studio force to concentrate on the new product at an early date.

Charles O. Seessel Art Director Movietone

FOX CASE CORPORATION has signed Charles O. Seessel as art director of the Fox Movietone studios. Mr. Steessel will make his headquarters at the two new Movietone studios on West 54th Street, New York City.

Mr. Seessel has been in the film industry for eight years, having started with Famous Players. He was educated in New York and studied architecture abroad under Clarence Luce and Stanford White and painting under William M. Chase and Robert Blum. After leaving Famous he free lanced for awhile designing the settings for a number of productions. He was art director and general manager of the Mayer-Schulberg studio at the old Selig plant on the West Coast. He also designed several productions at the Cosmopolitan studio.

Leah Baird Feminine Lead in Gaiety Pictures Series

Leah Baird will reappear on the screen as the featured feminine player in the series of two-reel domestic comedies in which Gaiety Pictures will star Taylor Holmes. Miss Baird will enact parts similar to those played by Mrs. Sidney Drew in the Drew comedies. Contracts were signed on the West Coast as to the remainder of the all-star cast and the staff of technical men.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

New York City

THE opening of the Roxy was of course the outstanding influence this week, and there has been much speculation as to its effect on the other Broadway houses. So far, it may be said, there is little evidence of any.

It is too early to attempt an accurate forecast of the week's business at the Roxy, but it is certain to be a world's record. Perhaps the gross will go as high as $115,000 or $120,000—and certainly well in excess of $100,000.

Meanwhile the Strand Theatre is doing hold-over business on "The Beloved Rogue," which will go into a second week, and possibly a third.

The Capitol Theatre seems unaffected by the new rival, and John Gilbert in "The Show" is pulling strongly this week and should be good for $550,000 at least. Next week brings Norma Shearer back to this house in "The Demi-Bride," and she is always good for a strong gross at the Capitol.

The Rialto is holding up strongly with "Metropolis," but most of the roadshow attractions have gone into a decline, several of them being off $3,000 and $4,000 a week lately.

Boston

WHILE the Auto Show, formal open- of the new Statler Hotel, and public inspection of the new Ford Assembling plant drew a total of more than 200,000, Boston theatres maintained a remarkably good attendance, although below that of the preceding week and considerably below the last week of February. B. F. Keith's adopted a plan of getting out the radio stay-at-homes by showing in person the Masked Tenor and a radio-famed orchestra on its bill.

The excellence of some of the bills brought out better than average houses. John Barrymore in "The Beloved Rogue" at Loew's State proved a big drawing card while the Metropolitan was equally as strong with "A Kiss in a Taxi." Lon Chaney in "Tell It to the Marines," at the Orpheum; the double bill, "Cheaters," and "Love Makes 'Em Wild," at the twin houses, Modern and Beacon, and a special historic film feature at the Fenway were examples of the attractions offered. "What Price Glory" continues to hold over at the Majestic at a $1.50 top.

Baltimore

PATRONAGE at Baltimore moving picture theatres is keeping up very well despite the fact that Lent has set in. "Beau Geste" did very well at Ford's Theatre, a legitimate house, at a $1.50 top price during the week beginning Monday, March 7, while "Flesh and the Devil" very nearly broke its record for the first week at Loew's Valencia during its second week.

"Don Juan," with the Vitaphone accompaniment and added attractions came along with very good business during its sixth week at Warners' Metropolitan. "The Red Mill," at Loew's Century; "Ankles Preferred," at the New Theatre, and "McFadden's Flats," at the Rivoli, did very good business, but "The Red Mill" was given exceedingly large advertising and publicity space in the newspapers.

"Redheads Preferred" did good business at Keith's Hippodrome while "Don Mike," with Fred Thomson came along with fair business at the Garden.

Business was poor at the Embassy throughout the week but the "Thrill Hunter" did better during the last three days than "Salvation Jane," did during the first three days.

Atlanta

ATLANTA theatres housed some exceptional attractions this week, conspicuous among them being "Flesh and the Devil," and "The Night of Love," both of which, at Loew's Grand and the Metropolitan respectively, recorded big engagements. The Zane Grey picture, "The Mysterious Rider," also recorded excellent business at the Rialto. "The Third Degree," at the Howard, did very well. The star is too newly established to exert a strong draw with local theatre-goers, however with the undeniable favorable reaction to "The Third Degree," and excellent newspaper notices, the next Costello picture should go over big.

"Corporal Kate" proved a pleasing screen feature at Keith's Georgia, though the house did not have one of its outstandingly big weeks. The Tudor, downtown, playing Westerns and action films on a split-week; the Cameo, second run, and the New Alamo, second and first runs, all suffered, apparently, more than the larger houses on account of Lent.

Though this community is not exceptionally Roman Catholic, Lent has hurt local box offices to a noticeable extent. The suburban theatres feel the times as well, although the Ponce de Leon, opening Monday night, did big business throughout its initial week.

Seattle

DESPITE normal weather and substantial advertising and exploitation on the part of all the downtown houses, motion picture theatre business was still below normal last week. The big box office attraction of the week was Barrymore's "Beloved Rogue," which opened its first week's engagement at the United Artists' Theatre. At the Coliseum, Marion Davies in "The Red Mill" did only a fair business, despite large advertising space contributed by the Hearst newspaper.

The Fifth Avenue Theatre, with Marie Prevost in "Getting Gertie's Garter" fell below the standard of past weeks, and Fanchon and Marco's "Specialty Idea" on the stage was the poorest in several weeks. It had a cast of only six persons, including a male trio. "The Magic Garden," at the Columbia failed to get much attention.

At the Olympic Theatre, 25c house, "The Slums of Berlin" and "Aimee's Story" played first-run engagements at advanced prices, for ten days. Business just fair. John Hamrick's houses were the leading money-getters, "Hills of Kentucky" doing a very good business at the Blue Mouse, and a second run of "Tell It to the Marines" packing them in at Hamrick's Egyptian Theatre in the University district. The latter picture played at the Coliseum only a few weeks ago, and was the first picture to play at that house for a full two-week engagement in several years.

Kansas City

AN unusually strong line-up of pictures brought out above-the-average attendances at most first-run houses last week. The Newman with "A Kiss in a Taxi," played to good houses, Bebe Daniels being more or less of a favorite in Kansas City. At the Royal, Clara Bow in "It" played to a second week of splendid attendance, virtually assuring a third week's run.

At the Liberty, "The Night of Love" did better business than any previous picture in several weeks, while "The Music Master" scored at the Pantages theatre. "Orchids or Ermine" with Colleen Moore at the Mainstreet played to an average week's attendance, although the attendance at that theatre has greatly increased since the recent adoption of the new stage presentation policy.

At the Globe Theatre, Marie Prevost in "For Wives Only" had a strong feminine appeal, as could be expected, and the picture played to large audiences all week.

Threatening weather the first part of the week failed to injure the matinee attendances, the temperature being balmy enough, but rain threatening almost each day. The night attendances at most all theatres showed an increase over the previous week.

Cleveland

BUSINESS in Cleveland last week was spotty. The pictures that had extraordinary pull did well. Average picture programs fell by the wayside. "McFadden's Flats," now in its fifth week at the Cameo, continues to be the outstanding box office attraction of this and preceding weeks. It has played more consecutive performances than any other motion picture has ever played in this city. Other pictures have played over a longer period of time, but these were two-a-day road show attractions, while "McFadden's Flats" fills the Cameo for seven performances daily.

"Flesh and the Devil" follows in popularity. The Sunday this picture opened, the Stillman lobby held as many waiting patrons as were accommodated in the auditorium. It held up well all week and is being continued. "Hotel Imperial," at the Allen did average. "Let It Rain," was fair at the State, and Keith's Palace reports a falling off for the week. The feature attraction was "Jim the Conqueror."

The Park played "The Show" as a repeater with average results. The Circle, the first-run home of Vitaphone on the East Side, played "The Auctioneer," second run. Vitaphone continues to be the seventh wonder of the world and attracts large crowds daily. Buck Jones in "The War Horse," at Read's Hippodrome, and Monty Banks in "Atta Boy," suffered somewhat from the combined opposition of Lent and beautiful weather.

Minneapolis

MARCH weather as mild as any Minneapolis has experienced in years continued last week, and as a result business at the picture theatres was thriving. The going was rather heavy underfoot, with rain and melting snows producing a sea of mud, but even that couldn't keep the picture fans at home. "Ben Hur" returned to the Metropolitan Theatre for its third week and did a whale of a business, probably the best third week business that any roadshow picture has ever recorded at that house.

"McFadden's Flats" did very nearly capacity business at the Strand, and was held over for another week. Colleen Moore in "Orchids and Ermine" made a very strong showing at the State and "Ladies at Play," with Doris Kenyon, did a brisk business at the Garrick. The ticket-sellers were all kept fairly busy at the Loring, Lagoon and Rialto, outlying houses, which featured, among other pictures, "Hotel Imperial," "Valencia," and "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em." The fact that there were no competing attractions of any unusual merit undoubtedly accounted in some measure for an unusually good week.

St. Louis

SKOURAS BROTHERS' Ambassador Theatre with a special stage revue featuring the first anniversary of public presentation in St. Louis and "An Affair of the Follies" as the chief screen attraction, played to very excellent business during the week of March 11; indicating that when you have the attraction you will get the business at any season of the year. In every way it was a satisfactory week—for management and patrons.

Over at Loew's State at Eighth Street and Washington Avenue, they called out the Fire Department to bring in the crowds, which was very keeping, as the chief screen offering was "The Fire Brigade." The audiences included many members of the department, their families and friends. During the week the Fire Department Trio and the Fire Department's fifty-piece orchestra were featured, and naturally went over big. During the run, "The Fire Brigade" did very good business.

Out on Grand Boulevard the Missouri and Grand Central had average weeks. The Grand Central in conjunction with Skouras Brothers' West End Lyric offered "Finger Prints." The Missouri's screen feature was "Blind Alleys." The St. Louis Theatre playing "The Auctioneer" and a vaudeville bill of some five acts did splendidly throughout the entire week. Undoubtedly this is one of the Orpheum Circuit's biggest drawing houses.

Reports from the neighborhood theatres indicate that they are not doing so well. Despite the prosperity claims of some political quarters there are many thousands of men and women out of work, and this fact is being brought home very forcibly to the owners of outlying and neighborhood theatres. That and the Lenten season accounts for much lower receipts than were enjoyed at this season in some years gone by.

Detroit

DOWNTOWN business in the picture theatres was somewhat varied. The Michigan Theatre reported business to be very good with "The Demi Bride," but this of course was helped along by the presence of the nationally-known stars Sissle and Blake. The Adams closes its fourth week of "McFadden's Flats" and reports that business was most satisfactory. "The Red Mill" and Vitaphone packed the Madison.

Business was slow at the Fox Washington which displayed "Love Makes 'Em Wild." The State, which showed Thomas Meighan in "Blind Alleys," reported only fair. Sophie Tucker was credited for packing the Capitol instead of the film "Lunatic at Large." The Schubert-Lafayette, after eight weeks of "What Price Glory" reports a wonderful business. As for the neighborhood houses, they reported business to be just fair.

Milwaukee

DOWNTOWN theatres reported business more brisk last week. Weather, the exhibitor's alibi, was of the delightful, warm, mid-spring variety, and brought people flocking to the downtown houses, but played havoc with Sunday matinee business on the outskirts.

"The Beloved Rogue," introduced by extensive exploitation, packed the Alhambra at every showing. "Orchids and Ermine" at the Wisconsin divided honors with "Beloved Rogue." "Getting Gertie's Garter" at the Orpheum proved a high light on the bill.

"Women Love Diamonds" at the Merrill, "Forever After," at the Garden, and "New York," showing at the Strand, drew a fair share of the down town business. Exhibitors in the neighborhood houses found business below par and attributed inactivity to the Lenten season. "Tell It to the Marines," admirably exploited by the Tower, with a tie-up with local Marine station, was very well accepted. "The White Black Sheep" at the Milwaukee proved popular.

Albany

WITH the exception of the Leland, all of the motion picture theatres in Albany, N. Y., in the business center, reported most satisfactory crowds during the week. At the Leland, "Faust" was taken off at the end of the third day and was replaced by "Ankles Preferred," which appeared to carry more of an appeal, judging from the crowds. This is the first time that a picture has been pulled at the Leland in several months. The house management claimed that while the picture was good that it was not suited to a Leland audience.

At the Mark Ritz, "New York" played to capacity during the week and with matinees good. By Saturday night, the house management reported that business had run far ahead of an ordinary week. "Sorrows of Satan" did a very satisfactory business at the Mark Strand, although the return engagement of "The California Nighthawks," a superb musical offering, was responsible for a good part of the patronage. During the last three days of the week, however, every downtown theatre felt the effects of a person appearance at Proctor's Grand of Bert Lytell. Joe Wallace, manager of the Grand, went the limit in advertising Mr. Lytell, which together with the star's popularity, through the fact that he was at one time a member of an Albany stock company, packed the house to the doors each afternoon and evening.

The Clinton Square did well with "The Last Frontier" and "One Hour of Love." Business at the neighborhood houses was reported as being about normal. The weather was spring-like and also served to bring out the crowds.

Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS movie houses had a good run last week, with the Vitaphone at the Circle and "Tell it to the Marines" at the Apollo as the downtown headliners.

With the picture "McFadden's Flats," the Circle drew unusually heavy the opening week of the Vitaphone. The Apollo showed to capacity crowds all of the second week of the run.

"Heaven on Earth" at the Ohio was saved from a flop by Charlie Davis' orchestra specialities. Neighborhood houses reported a fair run.

Central Pennsylvania

ONE night of extraordinary business in each of four of the leading theatres of Harrisburg, due to the presence of Miss Beatrice Gordon, a local girl, selected by the merchants of the city as "Miss Spring" in their annual Spring fashion pageant, served as the stimulant that prevented the week of March 7 from being merely mediocre so far as box office receipts were concerned.

"Miss Spring," chosen through competition, and her four maiden attendants similarly selected, were guests of honor in a box at the State on Thursday night. The film attraction was "Remember," featuring Dorothy Phillips.

On the following evening manager Charles Jones provided similar entertainment for the girls, in the Victoria, where "New York," starring Ricardo Cortez and Lois Wilson, was on the screen. On Saturday night "Miss Spring" and her retinue were guests, early in the evening, at the Colonial, to see "The Music Master," with Alec Francis and Lois Moran, and later went to Loew's Regent, as guests of manager Melniker, and saw John Barrymore in "The Beloved Rogue." In all cases the presence of the beauties filled the houses to capacity, but aside from that the audiences were scarcely up to average despite good weather conditions. At the Majestic a two-day return booking of "The Big Parade" attracted paying crowds, notwithstanding top prices of $1 for matinees and $1.50 at night. "Only Way," based on Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities," drew fairly well at the Broad. The smaller neighborhood theatres did average business.

Des Moines

“McFADDEN'S FLATS” playing at the Des Moines Theatre last week, met with popular approval and has put itself over with little difficulty. Business was very satisfactory. No records broken.

With a magnificent stage show, one of the Publix Shows in which Victor Herbert melodies are used, at the Capital, Colleen Moore played in “Orchids and Ermine.” The star has considerable drawing power on her own and with this strong show the week was a big one.

“Let it Rain” at the Strand did exceptionally well and “Altars of Desire” went very nicely for a half-week's run.

The Dempsey-Tunney fight films showing at the Berchel under the auspices of the American Legion, has met with difficulties as the W.C.T.U. brought about the closing of the show. The film has already been shown in a number of places in Iowa.

Oklahoma City

BUSINESS was just fair with the Oklahoma City theatres. The weather conditions were satisfactory, but for some reason or other the roadshow, “Beau Geste” did not attract the crowds that the last two big attractions, “Ben Hur” and “The Big Parade” did. Perhaps this was due to the fact that the publicity was not as extended on this as on the other two. And, too, it may be that the first part of Lent may have had some influence in reducing the audiences. “Beau Geste” played the Capitol Theatre all week and received splendid comments from those who attended. This does not mean that the picture was poorly attended, but only that, judging from past experience, it did not receive quite the business it should have.

Richard Dix and Betty Bronson brought in satisfactory business at the Criterion in their picture, “Paradise for Two.” And Milton Sills at the Empress was well attended in “The Sea Tiger” all week. The Orpheum, that shows vaudeville and pictures, did capacity business toward the end of the week when it became known that the first performance of the Vitaphone in Oklahoma City was being given the last three days of the week. Laura La Plante in “Butterflies in the Rain” started the week well at the Liberty Theatre, and “The Old Soak” seemed to be going over nicely the last part of the week.

Ottawa

DESPITE hockey counter-attractions during the week which drew crowds of 7,000 persons, the leading theatres of Ottawa, Ontario, had stand-up business during the week of March 7 and the managers were satisfied. Bright, spring-like weather, which followed a lengthy period of cold and blizzards, had a tendency to bring out the crowds instead of keeping them from attending the theatres.

B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, playing “The Auctioneer”; Regent Theatre with “The Winning of Barbara Worth”; and the Centre with “An Affair of the Follies,” all had standees at every performances during the week, and the matinee business was well up to expectations. “Butterflies in the Rain” at the Imperial Theatre was well liked by patrons but the title was not a popular box-office draw. A repeat run of “The Son of a Sheik” at the Fern Theatre, a neighborhood house, drew a terrific crowd. “Michael Strogoff,” which played the Laurier and Eden theatres in Hull early in the week, enjoyed big business with French-Canadian patronage predominating for the Jules Verne angle.

New Orleans

DESPITE the presence of Lent, downtown business in New Orleans picture houses was most satisfactory last week. Theatre-goers took advantage of the summer-like weather and flocked to the first-run houses in large numbers. Colleen Moore in “Orchids and Ermine” packed the new Saenger Theatre at all afternoon and evening performances. “The Music Master” shared honors with “Orchids and Ermine” for local favor, being shown at Loew's State. “The Canadian” at the Liberty, “Love's Greatest Mistake” at Saenger's Strand, Monte Blue in “Across the Pacific” at the Tudor, “The Fire Brigade” at the Crescent and “The Kid Brother” at the Trianon drew their share of the public's patronage.

New Orleans neighborhood houses also report business very satisfactory the last week. The Trivoli did a large business, as did the Valentino and Gaiety.

Butte

BUTTE theatres, one and all, claimed splendid business the past week. An unusual number of first class attractions were on the programs at the leading theatres and perhaps, with extensive advertising on all the big pictures, this was an asset in stimulating business. With the first week of Lent as a background, which usually means a lure to churches instead of the bright lights of the theatres, it was surprising. The Broadway Theatre programmed “Beau Geste,” March 8 and 9, to a capacity house.

“The Marriage Clause” at the Rialto was a strong attraction and was voted by the many patrons as one of the most wholesome of love stories. At the American Theatre, “Kid Brother” played to a fair house. The management was disappointed that it did not go over big as Harold Lloyd is a general favorite in his clean, wholesome humor.

“Faust” followed for one day and scored a big hit with the Butte public. Due to a mistake in booking, according to report, it could be secured but for the one showing.

Coast to Coast vaudeville with five acts packed the Temple on Saturday and on the three days following Pantages vaudeville, with an exclusive photoplay, “The Golden Web,” did a big business.

Salt Lake City

BUSINESS in the picture theatres of the downtown district was very satisfactory last week, and due to the fact that an unusual amount of exploitation was used, competition among the first-run houses here was keen. A number of especially big pictures were shown at the various houses which did much toward the enlivening of the picture theatre trade. Weather conditions, with the exception of one very stormy night, were unusually spring-like and favorable for so early in the year.

“Tell It to the Marines,” which is having a nine-day run at the Paramount Empress, is doing a tremendous business, they having been compelled to close the box office the first four nights out of the first five, which record so far exceeds all records of the house. An unusual amount of exploitation was used in connection with this showing. “Millionaires,” which was run at the American in conjunction with the Vitaphone attractions, went big as did also “Jim the Conqueror” at the Gem.

“The Gorilla Hunt” seemed to be the leading attraction at the Victory, which picture was shown in connection with “A Little Journey.” “One Increasing Purpose” received many favorable comments according to the Pantages management here, and the second run of “Summer Bachelors” at the Kinema had its goodly share of business. The neighborhood houses have had rather hard pulling of late, but as a whole, the theatre business is greatly on the rise.

Tampa

WITH perfect weather the past week, all theatres enjoyed satisfactory business. The new Tampa had “McFadden's Flats” the first four days and business was satisfactory. Colleen Moore, a former Tampa girl, and quite a favorite here, in her latest picture, “Orchids and Ermine,” was the attraction for the last three days, and she pulled excellent business For their stage presentation this week, the Tampa had the “Piccadilly Four.” This was an excellent quartette and was well liked.

The Strand gives three changes of program during the week. “Easy Pickin's” opened to good returns for its two days' showing. “Butterflies in the Rain” did well for three days, and “Love's Greatest Mistake” proved a good draw for the last two.

The Victory closed their vaudeville season this week. To fill a one-day date they brought back the Lon Chaney feature, “Tell It to the Marines,” which had played a four days' run at the Tampa, with 75c top, a short time ago. In its first run here this picture did immense business and it pulled well for the Victory at their 50c price.

The Franklin had “Don Mike” the first half. Westerns are the big draw at this popular house and Thomson a great favorite, so he pulled the usual fine business. “Fighting Love” played to average business the latter part of the week.

Fire Destroys Victoria, at Bloomsburg, Pa.

Flames discovered on the morning of March 12 on the stage of the Victoria Theatre, in Bloomsburg, Pa., recently constructed at a cost of $150,000, completely destroyed that structure and badly damaged a store and building, causing a total loss of $250,000.

Byron Lynn, manager of the theatre, and three firemen were overcome by smoke and had to be carried to safety. The flames for a time menaced the entire business district and fire companies were called from Berwick, Danville and Catawissa to assist the Bloomsburg firemen. A strong wind made the firemen's battle a difficult one.

"Yankee Clipper" Drive Prepared

Radio Program Conducted by Roxy to Launch Sales Exploitation for P. D. C. Production

THE P.D.C. organization is ready to launch the most extensive sales and exploitation campaign attempted in the history of the company with a drive in behalf of "The Yankee Clipper," the De Mille production which is to have its premiere at the Roxy Theatre in the near future.

Backing their opinion that the picture possesses the coveted "everything" which goes to make a popular screen success with the weight of a campaign drawn on a huge scale, the organization has completed plans for the special sales drive and the exploitation features designed to popularize the production with theatregoers.

The bulk of the material is now in readiness, and ranges from a special sales-kit, which includes several features new in the line of sales matter, to national tie-ups in which "The Yankee Clipper" will be exploited by local distributors. W. J. Morgan, sales manager, and his organization in the field, are ready to begin the operations mapped out for that department in the special handling which "The Yankee Clipper" is to receive.

Definite release date on the picture has not yet been set, but it is probable the picture will be issued generally some time next month.

Among the first exploitation stunts which are to be used in connection with "The Yankee Clipper" will be a radio hour, broadcast through twenty stations, and presided over by S. L. Rothafel, who is to have complete charge of the entertainment to be sent over the air as "The Yankee Clipper Hour." This event will take place on a Sunday evening. In addition to the usual eight stations over which Roxy's Monday night programs are broadcast, there will be a hook-up of many more outlets for the P.D.C. special program. All these are "power" stations.

It is planned to have an extensive newspaper campaign run in conjunction with the radio feature. These ads will tie-in with the radio stunt, and will appear on radio pages of the newspapers on the day on which the program will be broadcast.

What is probably one of the most novel and promising of the selling aids which have been prepared for theatre campaigns on the picture, is a short story printed in book form, with especial appeal to boys. These books, with paper covers bearing action illustrations in colors, will be available to theatres in quantities at the rate of $15 a thousand.

The title of the book is, "A Boy Stowaway on the Yankee Clipper." It is a fictionization of the story revealed in the picture, with special emphasis on the boy character, played by Junior Coghlan. It is written in the typical adventure style, popular with boys, and intelligent care has been exercised to keep it in the wholesome vein which will make it "approved reading matter" while holding all the interest and fascination of exciting entertainment for the youth of the land.

Several excellent exploitation ideas will be centered around this accessory. Wide distribution of free copies to Scout Leaders of Boy Scout organizations and other plans which will be put into execution in advance of the picture's local release are being worked out by the exploitation department of P.D.C.

An elaborate campaign book, covering eight pages, newspaper size, is ready for shipment to the various exchanges of the company. In addition to the exploitation ideas, newspaper displays, publicity matter, etc., contained in the press book, a number of tie-ups have been concluded with national distributors.

Among the most notable of the latter is an arrangement with the Reo motor car company, featuring the "Flying Cloud" model. The "Flying Cloud" was one of the most famous of the New England clipper ships. Window display material prepared to tie-up with local presentations of "The Yankee Clipper" have been prepared by the automobile company for their dealers, and special tie-up newspaper campaigns will be conducted. The manufacturers of "Ipswich" hosiery have also arranged to conduct drives through their various distributing agents featuring the picture. Negotiations with other companies distributing products nationally are being carried on, and it is expected other tie-ups will be arranged before the picture is released.

The P.D.C. sales organization has perfected plans to conduct an unusual and concentrated drive for "The Yankee Clipper." The entire organization has been divided into three units, the Red, White and Blue, which will be pitted one against the other in a sales contest.

Three of the eight district managers will be relieved of their other duties and concentrate on this "Yankee Clipper" sales campaign. The three "Admirals" who are to tour the entire country, are L. J. Hacking, of the Boston district; C. E. Maberry, Chicago, and C. D. Hill, St. Louis. The exchange managers will have the ranks of "Captains" and salesmen will be "Lieutenants."

Hacking will travel as far west as Denver, north to Milwaukee and south to Charlotte; Maberry's western jaunt will take him to San Francisco, north as far as Butte, and south to Atlanta; while Hill will go as far north as Minneapolis and south to New Orleans, in the course of their visits to exchanges in the interests of the drive.

The program for these district managers calls for one-day visits in each exchange in the territory which they cover, to conduct "pep" sessions on "The Yankee Clipper." They will also line up matters in connection with the exploitation drives to be conducted locally.

3-Cornered Radio Tie-up

Lounsbury's Idea Basis of Giant Campaign for "Whole Town's Talking" in Denver

WHO said radio was opposition?

One of the biggest—possibly the biggest—and most interesting contests ever put over to advertise a motion picture and a theatre was staged in Denver the latter part of December. It was to determine the champion radio entertainers of the Rocky Mountain region and was a three-cornered tie-up between the America Theatre, Denver, the Denver "Post" and

The idea originated in the fertile brain of Charles E. Lounsbury, the Universal exploiter in the Denver exchange. He was working on "The Whole Town's Talking" and decided to have not only the whole town but the whole region talking about his picture. Incidentally he had the whole nation, for he received letters on the contest from every State in the Union.

More than 400 entertainers entered the lists to compete for the three silver loving cups offered for the best solo, unit and band or orchestra acts. There was also a grand prize of a Star automobile, which went to the most popular entertainer among the three champions.

Every night at ten o'clock, during the contest, the stage of the America Theatre was turned into a broadcasting studio. The patrons who had laughed through the last showing of "The Whole Town's Talking" could stay in their seats and see what goes on behind the microphone. Lounsbury, acting as announcer, seized the opportunity of publicizing other Universal product besides "The Whole Town's Talking" by urging his radio audience to enquire of their local theatre manager when such pictures as "Michael Strogoff" were to be shown.

The radio acts were known by number only to make the contest more fair and each listener-in was permitted to vote for his favorite in each class—single, unit and band—each night. At the close of the contest there was a championship night when the leaders performed again for the final judgment. The cups were later awarded on the America's stage in connection with a radio frolic.

To stimulate voting, prizes were offered for the best slogans for either the America Theatre or the Star car. There were three of these, a 5-tube radio outfit, a $30 loud speaker and a receiving outfit, all donated. But no slogan would be considered unless accompanied by votes on the entertainers. Then, too, there was a prize for the slogan coming the longest distance.

The judges were swamped with votes. They poured in from all points of the country and from Mexico and Canada. The number of artists who entered the lists was so large that the original week planned for the stunt was not enough and another was necessary to give all an opportunity to do their stuff notwithstanding the fact that the broadcasting continued from 10 o'clock until around 2 every night.

Every day the "Post" carried big stories, often illustrated, on the contest, for they were the official sponsors and it was to them the votes were sent. And in each story mention of the picture and the America Theatre was carefully inserted.

Venerable Ambulance Gag Scores in Lincoln, Neb.

Manager W. S. Perutz pulled the old ambulance gag to desired results when "The Kid Brother" played the Lincoln Theatre, Lincoln, Neb.

A man, planted well down in the orchestra, began laughing out loud and finally two ushers came to help him out of the theatre. The man put up such a fight that a third usher was necessary.

An ambulance was called and the man was taken away in it—still laughing as heartily as ever.

Everybody thought it was real and that made the stunt all the more forceful.

The stunt cost six passes to the ambulance men, four passes to the doctors, and $1.00 to the man that caused all the laughter.

Huge Star Cut-outs Feature Float for "Marines"

Manager Charles H. Amos got a lot of publicity on "Tell It to the Marines" by entering a float in the St. Petersburg civic parade two days in advance of showing, when that film played at the Florida Theatre, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Gives Male Patrons Chance With Bald Head Contest

Manager Jack Ward of the Queen's Theatre, Niagara Falls, Ont., staged an unbobbed hair contest for ladies, but he heard a male patron remark that he was favoring the ladies. Mr. Ward immediately announced that he would stage a gentlemen's bald-head contest.

Guy O. Kenimer, manager of the Arcade Theatre, had a bang-up campaign for his showing of "Tell It to the Marines" (M-G-M), through the tie-up with the Marine Corps for recruiting drives.

Costume Contest Exploits "War Paint"

TO Manager Ernest Emmerling, of the Temple Theatre, Birmingham, and the M-G-M exploiteer who assisted him, goes the credit for one of the most successful newspaper tie-up campaigns recorded for "War Paint." The exploitation centered about a familiar device—a costume contest in which prizes were awarded for boys appearing at the Birmingham News theatre party in the best make-up resembling an Indian brave.

The News announced the contest two days in advance, inserting an entry blank and featuring the stunt with prominent publicity stories. The review was held at the News office, where a committee selected the winners and then formed all those appearing in costume into a line of march to the theatre, where they witnessed a performance of "War Paint."

In addition to the News tie-up, the Temple management used ballyhoo exploitation, consisting of boys in costume carrying signs advertising the show, and a girl garbed as a squaw, who distributed samples of face powder labeled "War Paint."

Lights in Skies Tell Title of Film Opening U. A. Theatre

WITH a slogan, "Watch the Skies," as the teaser-line in a widely exploited advance campaign, the opening of the United Artists Theatre—formerly the Liberty—in Seattle, was the object of some highly effective showmanship based on a novel idea. The opening date of the United Artists house was advertised long in advance. All of these advance ads carried the line, "Watch the Skies." Later it was explained that the color of the light which flashed in the clouds over the theatre would be the clue to the title of the photoplay attraction which would feature the opening bill at the United Artists.

The advertisements revealing the secret of "Watch the Skies" included a color code, thus explaining that: "If the skies are BLUE, the opening picture will be Gloria Swanson in 'Sunya.' If the skies flame RED, 'twill be John Barrymore in 'The Beloved Rogue.' If the skies blaze GREEN, 'twill be Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky in 'The Night of Love.' "

UNITED ARTISTS THEATRE

Teaser ad for United Artists Picture which opened the remodelled Liberty Theatre in Seattle

So far as the public of Seattle was concerned, this was some light on the subject, but there remained the mystery as to how the skies were to be induced or employed—as the case was to be—to show the desired colors necessary to make the message accurate. "That's all right, having a blue light or a green beam tell what picture is going to open the house, but where will the light come from, and how?" was the reaction of the public to this idea of printing the program in the clouds.

Under such circumstances the playing of the final card in the hand of the management of the United Artists Theatre scored as a big publicity story, given liberal space in the newspapers and commanding widespread attention. This final story, of course, told how Lyman Morgan, illuminating engineer, would operate a battery of thirty searchlights that would throw a billion candle-power beam above the new theatre, a beam properly colored to tell the name of the picture to be shown on the opening night.

Animal Crackers Samplers Advertise "Spangles"

Animal crackers and "Spangles" proved happy exploitation companions in Utica, N. Y. They became acquainted through Fred V. Greene, managing director of the Majestic Theatre, and A. J. Sharick, Universal exploiteer, who arranged the tie-up.

Envelopes containing samples of the crackers were distributed by Loose Wiles at the schools, at no cost to the theatre. The copy on these read: "Some of the Animals to be seen in the Mighty Circus Story, 'Spangles,' Majestic Theatre, Sunday—These are Sunshine Animal Crackers made by the Loose Wiles Sunshine Biscuit Co.—See the picture—Eat the animals."

Patrons Compete in This "Funny Face" Contest

Chris. Georgas, proprietor of the Classic Theatre at Owen Sound, Ontario, staged an unusual contest in the form of a competition for the funniest face in Owen Sound. A large sheet was stretched across the stage of the theatre with ten holes in it. Contestants were required to stick their heads through a hole and make grimaces for the entertainment of the audience. Cash prizes up to $12 were offered and there were many entries. The following week Mr. Georgas conducted a ladies' nail-driving contest.

Limerick Contest Exploits "Just Another Blonde"

Manager Ned Hastings, of Keith's Theatre, Cincinnati, in connection with the "Times-Star," a local daily, is offering a prize of $50 for the best last line of a limerick on "Why Men Prefer Blondes"—if they do. Incidentally, the management of the Majestic Theatre, at Mansfield, O., admitted all blonde girls of the high school without charge at a recent showing of "Just Another Blonde." It looks as if the blondes are coming into their own in amusement circles in Ohio.

"Ten Years Old"
(Pathe-Hal Roach—"Our Gang"—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

TWO boys have a birthday on the same day. One is a poor boy, the other a rich boy. The latter is bored by the effeminate, well-bred youngsters of his set, so persuades his father to let him invite the gang playing at bull-fighting on the lot next to his home. Being a bunch of rough-necks, you can figure out for yourself just what a disturbance results. Add the possibilities of a cake cooked by the poor boy of which wind is the particular ingredient. Every time the cake is cut there is a miniature cyclone breaking loose. Into the cake has gone, through the assistance of baby brother, shoes, mouse-traps, tacks and a lot of other inedible objects. Each boy served with a piece gets one of these. That is the pièce de resistance of the dinner and the film.

It is not nearly as legitimately funny as most of the "Our Gang" comedies are. Yet it will unquestionably serve. Anthony Mack directed the two-reels under the supervision of F. Richard Jones. Robert MacGowan, as usual, wrote the story. It was scheduled for release March 13th.

Shoes—Parrots and Others
(Pathe Review No. 11—One Reel)

"SPEEDING UP SHOE-MAKING" is one of those pseudo-scientific, educational, human-interest, short-length pictures that always interest many. This one because, being an article that most of us use constantly, we have a certain interest in how it is all done. Like most Pathe pictures of this kind, it is good.

Comedy moments from "Roped In," an Educational short feature

Second in the list is "Pursuing Polly." This is decidedly worth while because of the color shots in picturesque Mexico. It shows how the parrot venders go out and capture the birds and then bring them back in cages to hawk them in the Mexican cities. It really is an admirable picture from every viewpoint.

"A Gem of the East" is Lao Kay, a Chinese city. These, while fragmentary shots, have all the charm that the Orient has for most of us. They also are in Pathecolor.

Fourth and last "Clay Revelations" is what might be called the "comedy relief." It shows through trick photography amusing faces created out of clay. To the layman it is all very mystifying just as Hy Mayer, Charley Bowers and other camera tricksters are.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Bill and I Went Fishing"
(American Cinema Association—One Reel)

IF you desire to give your patrons ten very pleasurable minutes, then by all means book this number, which is a pictorial version of a poem by Edgar A. Guest, who writes those simple bucolic bits of verse appearing in many of the newspapers. This, the first of a series, shown at the Paramount Theatre, New York City, last week, gave the audience quite a thrill, not the high tension variety, however. The poem, the stanzas of which form the subtitles, tells of two men fishing from dawn to sunset, who, at the end of the day, express mutual satisfaction because neither broke the quiet and peace with unnecessary talk.

Beautiful views of water, country, blue skies and the sun, rising and setting, enhance the entertainment value of the reel. The Paramount orchestra, too, helped with very soft renditions of "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," "Blue Skies" of Irving Berlin, and similar appropriate selections, which are universally popular.

I hope to see the rest of the series.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

(Pathe Review No. 13—One Reel)

THE first of the trinity making up the March 27th release is called "Song of Triumph in Stone." It shows in Pathecolor Battle Abbey built by William the Conqueror to celebrate the battle which made him master of England. This was in 1066 A.D. and near London. The greatest Norman architects and builders collaborated on the structure. Today it still remains one of the most beautiful buildings in Great Britain.

"How Pipe Organs are Made" takes up the second section. Like most purely educational subjects, if good photography is used, it is bound to interest the fan. It takes so few moments that you can hardly be bored and while it leaves no lasting impression it is of value.

Part three of the Putnam expedition to Greenland deals with skirting the Northumberland coast. Again I must pay tribute to the photographer for Pathe on this trip. As was true of the first two releases, so also of this, he has taken some of the most effective photographic shots in a travelogue I have seen for months. If he is not famous yet he should and will be.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Keep Off the Grass"
(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

IT would seem that in the competition among animated cartoonists it is becoming so strenuous that the artists are putting more and more into their offerings. This is certainly true of "Keep Off the Grass." "Al" is kept busy for many feet in the role of a park-policeman. He encounters practically the entire zoo. The end is a crap game in which "Al" loses actually and theoretically his very shirt.

It is filled with so many happenings that you are at times lost following the plot and the appearance of almost as many characters as the average serial boasts. It is decidedly amusing.—PAUL THOMPSON.

Educational's New Orleans Branch Has Hammons Cup

The New Orleans branch office of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., has won the E. W. Hammons cup for March and will retain possession of it this month as a result of the best showing that it made among the 36 Educational exchanges during February. N. P. Eberly has been manager of this exchange but a short time coming from Oklahoma City, but within a few months led the other educational exchanges in the race for the Hammons cup the past month. Joe Kaliski, the Pittsburgh branch manager, won the cup for the previous month.

Three Hours

Unpleasant Plot Doesn't Add to Star's Laurels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A HEAVY-HANDED, tear-laden story has been given Corinne Griffith to make into something appealing, and though the star does her best to emotionalize her role it nevertheless quite escapes her. Miss Griffith has had ambition for some time to show the world that she is a dramatic actress, but her assignments haven't been so good. This "Three Hours" is a laborious yarn which cannot be called very pleasant fare for patrons who seek entertainment. There is scarcely a moment when the central figure is happy—married as she is to a brute who forces her to leave the home—and to return to it for the ghastly sight of seeing her infant daughter—dead.

That is the morbid touch in a picture which is saturated with tears and gloom. Yes, there is a note of happiness when the unfortunate woman finds a friend in the person of a young globetrotter. The star, relieved of her assortment of head-dresses, certainly makes herself appealing in her role, but she can't convince us—simply because the story is so unconvincing. The captions don't help the picture any. In fact they add salt to the wounds. It could also do without much of its padding—noticeable in a big Hollywood party scene.

THEME: Drama of distressed wife who, ejected from home by her husband, suffers untold cruelty at his hands before she finds a measure of happiness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The conflict between husband and wife. The terrific climax. The anguish of wife demonstrated by star in emotional moments. The atmosphere. The acting by supporting cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up the domestic angle—stressing the juvenile appeal. Play up star and her beauty and charm.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for neighborhood houses.

Produced and distributed by First National.

Rubber Tires

Farce Comedy Lacks Punch Because of Length

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS is a mildly amusing production with a chuckle here and there but it is spun out to such length that it lacks punch. It is not the fault of the cast as the individual performances are excellent but the trouble lies in the story which doesn't provide enough material to warrant more than five thousand feet of film for the telling. Likewise it is a rather implausible tale—imagine a trip from New York to California in a second-hand car, which must have taken a month to negotiate the mileage, during which no bad weather is experienced; or—think of being in the American desert and swapping your car for one without an engine—the trader not even making a cursory examination of the engine, or for it.

The Stack family, in New York and broke, decide to return to their home in California. To accomplish this they sell their furniture and purchase a wreck of a touring car and set out. After the departure the dealer discovers that the wreck is worth ten thousand dollars to the manufacturer so he too sets out to recover the car. On the road the Stacks meet their daughter's former fiance and he joins the cavalcade, but in his own car. Then follows the trading of cars, the fiance's extrication of the family from minor road difficulties and the precipitate entrance into the Stack Coast home.

The Cast: Bessie Love, Erwin Connelly, Junior Coghlan, May Robson, Harrison Ford, John Patrick, Clarence Burton. Directed by Alan Hale from the story by Frank Condon.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The acting of Bessie Love and Harrison Ford.—not much else.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Ready-made with auto and tire dealers to cooperate with.

DRAWING POWER: Just fair but safe for the whole family.

Produced by De Mille. Released through Prod. Dist. Corp.

The Love of Sunya

Swanson Comes Back in Well-Directed Picture

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S been a long time since Gloria Swanson has had as good a picture as "The Love of Sunya." Some of her previous essays were so mediocre that one almost despaired that she would ever see celluloid daylight again. This isn't to say that the film is a glittering masterpiece. Its story can't be called anything extraordinary. It has been done before—back in the days of Clara Kimball Young. But Albert Parker, who directed the early opus, has progressed along with pictures themselves. Consequently he has put Gloria through her paces and fashioned something which will arouse most favorable comment.

It is a triumph of camerawork—there being a deal of suggestion in several of its scenes. None of its story seems conventional because Parker has manipulated the camera in such a way that all the highlights of plot and characterization are fully manifested. Gloria goes through the scale of emotions in her effort to find happiness in the future—emotions which demonstrate that she has a sure grasp on her art.

There are excellent moments when she registers pathos—and again when she contrasts the life she would live if married to each of her suitors. She screens as well as she ever did—and Parker has brought out some undiscovered charms which enhance her performance.

The Cast: Gloria Swanson, John Boles, Arthur Donaldson, Hugh Miller, Flobelle Fairbanks, Andres de Segurola, John Miltern, Robert Schable, Pauline Garon. Director, Albert Parker.

THEME: Romantic drama of girl who is able to make happy choice of husband by peering into future.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The camerawork in crystal-gazing scenes. The direction during divorce proceedings. The supper party. The development of romances and climaxes. The acting, The direction.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up star and director, telling of their accomplishments. Put on atmospheric prologue.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for all types of houses.

Produced and distributed by United Artists.

Tarzan and the Golden Lion

Children Will Love This Fantastic Tale

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS will undoubtedly furnish great amusement for the children but you will have to sell it to their elders on the utterly weird angle. Unfortunately the cast, with the possible exception of Edna Murphy, who appears in the very popular "McFadden's Flats," is little known—to offset this you have the popularity of the author to play up. It is a wildly impossible story, Tarzan conversing with apes, the lion "looking through the secret eye, thereby discovering his enemies," the mystical blaablaa in the hidden Temple—all that sort of thing. If you can't think of any other way to sell it, tell them it's a comedy.

At his estate in Africa, Tarzan awaits the arrival of his wife, her niece and Tarzan's overseer, who is the niece's fiance. Weesimbo tells Tarzan of a city of diamonds from which he has escaped. The arrival of the party halts the tale. Tarzan goes on a trip and an unscrupulous trader, hearing of the city of diamonds, abducts Weesimbo (he's a man) and the fiancee and forces them to lead him to the city. Tarzan returns, learns of the kidnapping and sets out in pursuit. The fiancee is captured by the high priest of the diamond city and offered as sacrifice to the lion-king but Tarzan arrives with his golden lion in time to prevent the sacrifice, so all ends well.

The Cast: James Pierce, Fred Peters, Edna Murphy, Harold Goodwin, Liu Yu-Ching, Dorothy Dunbar, D'Arcy Corrigan, Boris Karloff, Robert Bolder, Jad-Bal-Ja (the lion). Directed by J. P. MacGowan from story of Edgar Rice Burroughs.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The battle on the cliffs. The settings in the hidden temple. The sacrifice.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Dress your lobby to represent jungle. Make special appeal to children.

DRAWING POWER: Good bet for children. The elders will get a laugh out of it.

Length, 5,807 feet. Released January 30, 1927.

The Taxi Dancer

Slight and Slow-Moving Comedy-Drama

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S not much doing in this story—its plot being slight and devoid of movement. The result is it doesn't provoke much interest aside from the work of the players, chief among whom are Joan Crawford, who is featured in the title role, Owen Moore, and a couple of others. It deals somewhat with stage life in that its central figure is a Southern girl who tries to get on the stage and after failing becomes a "hoofer" in one of those cheap and gawdy dancing parlors.

The piece looks like a forerunner of what will probably follow—seeing as how stage plays of cabaret life have proved so popular in New York this season. To pep it, however, it deals with melodramatic scenes in which a card sharp goes straight and wins her away from various mean men.

The heroine becomes chummy with a girl from the chorus—who eventually introduces her to a wolf or two in sheep's clothing. After various more or less exciting adventures the love interest manifests itself and all ends well. The contrasts are divided too sharply for the characters to ring true. The players do well enough.

The Cast: Joan Crawford, Owen Moore, William Orlamond, Marc MacDermott, Gertrude Astor, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Douglas Gilmore, Claire McDowell, Bert Roach. Director, Harry Millarde.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The development of the romance. The dance hall sequences. The atmosphere. The episode in the apartment. The acting of the principals.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease the title—and bill as film of romance and adventure which pivots around a dance hall. Play up the cast, all of the players being well known.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for average houses.

The Gay Old Bird

Mediocre Farce-Comedy Has Its Moments

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

DURING the first few hundred feet of this picturization of Virginia Dale's story there was every indication of a rollicking good show in the offing. Certainly there's nothing wrong with the story, nor with the cast for that matter. But what seems to be wrong, in the opinion of this reviewer, is that a tremendous lot of celluloid has been wasted stringing out the funny situations to the point where they become decidedly boresome. And, with certain exceptions, that holds for the whole show.

Louise Fazenda is the featured player, and she and Ed Kennedy seem to be entitled to most of the credit. Practically all of the action takes place in the not too happy household of the Clunys, where Miss Fazenda holds the position of cook, maid, etc. Ed Kennedy is the jealous chauffeur and in love with the maid. A rich uncle writes the Clunys that he is en route from Honolulu and that if he finds the happiness described in Cluny's letters, he will present them with an annuity of $25,000. This occurs right after Mrs. Cluny leaves with the twins for parts unknown after a breakfast tilt with her husband. The guests arrive, the maid agrees, under much protest, to impersonate the missing wife.

The Cast: Louise Fazenda, John T. Murray, Jane Winton, William Demarest, Ed Kennedy, John Steppling and Frances Raymond. Directed by Herman Raymaker.

THEME: Domestic farce-comedy in which the maid attempts to impersonate a missing wife in order to save an annuity offered by a rich uncle. Has happy ending.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The work of Fazenda and Kennedy stand out, although the rest of the cast is entirely competent.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up story as a well-known domestic tangle and names of players, particularly Louise Fazenda.

DRAWING POWER: Will score sufficient laughs with a not too critical audience. Story, title and cast will help draw them for average house patronage.

Length, 6,284 feet. Released February 26, 1927. Produced and distributed by Warner Bros.

The Mysterious Rider

Zane Grey and Jack Holt; Bound to Click

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

ONE of the better class of Westerns with a selling combination consisting of a widely read author, a well-known star working for a long time with a company which spends real money on its product, a story that gets away from the usual run and a pretty girl as the heroine to help along the romantic angle—you couldn't ask for more. Jack Holt can play the he-man roles and yet, unlike many rodeo champions and athletes who become Western "stars," he knows his "Valentino Manual" pretty well, neither over-doing the Charles Ray type of lover nor trying to pull a Barrymore. For these reasons the picture should please equally well the children, and both the male and female of the older portion of audiences. The production is well directed and some of the camera shots are excellent bits of outdoor photography.

Out in the California desert the homesteaders are deprived of title to their lands when the villain obtains a land grant superseding that held by the settlers. They buy him out, but he double-crosses them, also selling to a power syndicate. They blame the hero for their misfortune and he is in grave danger of having his neck stretched until he forces the villain to confess.

The Cast: Jack Holt, Betty Jewel, Charles Sellon, David Torrence, Tom Kennedy, Guy Oliver, Albert Hart, Ivan Christie, Arthur Hoyt. Directed by John Waters from the screen play by Fred Myton and Paul Ganglon.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The rescue of the heroine from the quicksands. The third degree. Holt's riding. The general tone of the production.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: You have the author's name to start with; then a popular star name.

DRAWING POWER: For the better class second run and neighborhood houses. Safe for the entire family.

Cheaters

Slow Moving; Only Moderately Entertaining

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

INTO crook melodramas must go either plenty of action or a strong element of suspense, otherwise they will prove boresome. This production, with the exception of the latter portion of the footage, lacks both to a great extent and for that reason it becomes just another picture. The director has taken a thousand feet of film to plant his characters, but it seemed that a few sub-titles would have served the purpose and saved the spectator the restlessness caused by a desire to see the story get under way. And when it does, it generates a certain amount of interest but no "nail-biting" or anything of that sort because the plot is quite familiar. The story isn't different enough to score with the intelligentsia nor has it sufficient action to hold the attention of the proletariat. So there we are.

The female lead "realizes the error of her ways" and decides to abandon the evil life, taking with her her sweetheart and a minor crook. They secure work in a hotel, but the master villain arrives and forces them to help him steal the jewels, during which process he kills one of the reform element. The story then gathers speed, but you know what's going to happen next and it does. The arch criminal gets his and the lovers get theirs.

The Cast: Pat O'Malley, Helen Ferguson, George Hackathorne, Lawford Davidson, Claire McDowell, Helen Lynch, Heinie Conklin, Alphonz Ethier, Max Davidson, Edward Cecil, William O'Brien. Directed by Oscar Apfel. Cameraman, Jos. A. Dubray and Allan Davey.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Use suggestions outlined in press book. The line-cuts and half-tones are excellent for advertising in the newspapers.

DRAWING POWER: Bi-weekly and daily change houses.

Length, 6,000 feet. Released February, 1927.

White Gold

Gripping Drama in Jetta Goudal Vehicle

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THERE is much to commend in "White Gold," the picture version of J. Palmer Parsons' stage play. In the first place, it is the first time I remember encountering the theme of the conflict of paternal love with that of the love of a wife for a son-husband. While possibly ere this the ending has been changed for box-office purposes and a "happy denouement" substituted, yet that is one of the gripping and convincing features of the picture. She disdains to explain it was not his father but herself who had shot the intruder, and goes out of the house and the picture to a new freedom. Her husband's lack of faith does not entitle him to the explanation which would have changed everything. And—thanks be to the director—the husband does not follow her out of his father's house seeking for her return. An unhappy ending, yes, but consistent, dramatic and infinitely more effective than the usual concession to a supposed demand on the part of the movie-public for a saccharine, "lived-happily-ever-afterward" fade-out.

Splendid characterizations are given by each of the four leading players and a humorous monotype of a ranchman by Robert Perry. William K. Howard's direction is bully and he never permits your interest to flag. Credit also excellent photography, many of the scenes with a soft focus lens or just out of focus (a trick he often employs) to cameraman Lucien Andriot.

The Cast: Jetta Goudal, Kenneth Thomson, George Nichols, George Bancroft, Robert Perry, Clyde Cook. Director, William K. Howard. Author, J. Palmer Parsons. Adaptors, Garrett Fort and Marion Orth. Supervisor, C. Gardner Sullivan.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Unusual theme and ending. Good direction and acting and photography.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Above and popularity of four leading players.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 6,198 feet. Released March 14. Produced by De Mille Productions Corp. Distributed by P. D. C.

Held by the Law

Universal Has a Mighty Good Melodrama

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is a mighty good melodrama. It should be, having been written by Bayard Veiller, author of "Within the Law," the first of the mystery melodramas which years ago made a fortune for everyone associated with the piece except its creator. That he followed, to show he was not a one-play writer, with "The Thirteenth Chair." The same qualities which he put into those stage plays and made them so successful he has put into this most excellent picture-melodrama. That means suspense, dramatic sense, characterizations and any number of thrills. I cannot see how "Held by the Law" can fail to hold the most captious fan if he loves good melodrama, well done from every viewpoint. When credit is handed out, praise should also be given to others concerned with the production. These include good work by scenarist Charles Logue, a former New York newspaper man; director Edward Laemmle, and cameraman Jackson Rose.

It seems to me that part of the cleverness of the piece is proved by the fact that while all through the piece the spectator knows the identity of the murderer, yet so ingeniously is the plot worked out the interest never flags up to the very end. There is always the fear that justice will not be done but that injustice will in the execution of the convicted though innocent man. That is enough of the plot to divulge.

The Cast: Ralph Lewis, Johnnie Walker, Marguerite de la Motte, Robert Ober, Fred Kelsey, Maude Wayne, E. J. Ratcliffe. Director, Edward Laemmle. Author, Bayard Veiller. Scenarist, Charles Logue. Cameraman, Jackson Rose.

THEME: Mystery melodrama filled with thrills, suspense and all the other necessary ingredients.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Many, good scenic investiture, camera shots, characterizations by players, direction, interesting, compelling story, etc.

The Show

Novel and Weird But Not So Good

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

YOU can depend upon Tod Browning making something novel when it comes to melodrama. He has such a gift for fashioning mystery plays off the beaten path that he has built up a distinct following for them. "The Show," however, is not in the same class as "The Unholy Three." In that number he had us staring pop-eyed at the queer doings of the characters and enveloped them in oodles of suspense. The new film shoots wide of the mark.

It all goes to show that one can't duplicate something outstanding without trespassing and stealing some of the previous thunder. "The Show" has a plot, but it lacks motivation and characterization. Not even the presence of John Gilbert and Renee Adoree saves it from being a forced melodrama—which caters to the shivers of your sensitive spine. Gilbert is a barker in a European carnival show and while he doubles in one of the acts he tries his best to play the sheik for the benefit of an interested girl or three.

The piece has suspense. Why not with the villain doing some heavy work and a Gila monster present to add the dynamite? It gets positively creepy—especially in the scenes of the leaping lizard.

The Cast: John Gilbert, Renee Adoree, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Connelly, Gertrude Short, Andy McLennon. Director, Tod Browning.

THEME: Melodrama of European carnival show—with barker determined to find plenty of romance and adventure.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The carnival atmosphere. The scene when barker doubles in act. The adventurous incident. The suspense. The climax. The acting by Gilbert and Adoree.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up this weird melodrama emphasizing its carnival background. Exploit star and Miss Adoree. Use stills from production. Put on atmospheric prologue.

DRAWING POWER: Star and leading woman and title of show will draw them. O.K. for all houses everywhere.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.
Length, six reels. Released March, 1927.

The Beloved Rogue

Fine Production But Story Is Not Up to Snuff

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WITH three screen appearances on Broadway, John Barrymore is on the way of establishing a record which other stars will find difficulty in duplicating. He has been setting a rather dizzy pace—what with two successes already scored. The new film is a costume drama which goes back to the days of the swaggering, roystering Villon—those days of the fifteenth century—for its story. And in all fairness this plot is not so much. It is neatly staged, but it is a slow-moving affair carrying more incident than it does a compact yarn.

It affords Barrymore with opportunities to run the scale of emotions—from pathos to comedy—and what not. The highbrows may take exception to such a screen metamorphosis as colors the vagabond who would be king for a day. The star certainly cuts up capers, but he doesn't extract much fun from his frolicsome moments. He shows that he is a master of make-up—and that he needn't take lessons from Mix and Fairbanks in rescuing a damsel in distress.

The picture has some novel settings—some of the scenery being truly fantastic. And because of its variety of scene it will please most every type of audience.

The Cast: John Barrymore, Conrad Veidt, Marceline Day, Lawson Butt, Henry Victor, Slim Summerville, Mack Swain, Angelo Rossitto, Nigel de Brulier, Lucy Beaumont, Otto Mathiesen, Jane Winton, Rose Dione, Bertram Grassby, Dick Sutherland. Director, Alan Crosland.

THEME: Costume drama recording the romantic adventures of the vagabond poet, Francois Villon.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The conflict between Villon and the king. The mob scenes. The rescue of Charlotte. The torture scenes. The make-up and acting by star. The support by Conrad Veidt. The settings.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up star and feature hero who has served as central figure for fiction and stage plays. Bill as costume drama.

DRAWING POWER: Title and star should draw them. For high-class houses.

Produced and distributed by United Artists.
Length, eight reels. Released March, 1927.

Regional News from Correspondents

New York & New Jersey

DAVID BRILL, long associated with Universal's selling organization and for the past four years sales manager of the local Big U exchange, excepting northern New Jersey, recently tendered his resignation to that company and has accepted a position as territorial sales manager for Tiffany Pictures, Inc.

Brill cames to Tiffany with a long past record of achievement, having started with Universal back in the year 1918 in charge of city sales at Portland, Ore. It was in this city that he inaugurated Universal's entry into the theatre field of the Northwest by the purchase of the Columbia Theatre. In 1922, "Dave," as he is familiarly known, returned to New York City and succeeded Charles Rosenzweig (present local F.B.O. manager) as New York sales manager for the Big U.

As a testimonial of the high regard held for Mr. Brill by his former associates in the office of the Big U, the entire sales force tendered him a luncheon at the Tavern last Saturday when he was presented with a handsome wrist watch, the latter as further evidence of their cordial wish that he may enjoy all kinds of prosperity with Tiffany Pictures.

Two extra-period games featured the basketball race in the motion picture industry Friday night. Pathe and Metro fought for three overtime periods, Pathe finally winning in the last few seconds of play when George Snyder, center, hurled a ringer that traveled almost the entire length of the Stuyvesant High School court. This tied the game, 34—34, and a moment later Snyder tossed a free throw as the whistle blew, giving Pathe the winning margin. This game made seven straight for Pathe, the only undefeated team. In another overtime contest, Fox won in an uphill fight from United Artists, tying the game after a bad start as the whistle blew, and chalking up 11 points in the overtime period, the final tally being Fox 43, United Artists 31.

The final games will be played Friday evening, with Metro having a chance to tie Fox for second place. Pathe meets Consolidated, with Metro playing United Artists.

Several more new motion picture theatres in this territory will open this week and within the near future, according to our friend, Dave Solomon of the National Supply Company. Tuesday evening, Dave states, the Consolidated Amusement Company, Lawrence Bologino, general manager, will open their new Mt. Eden Theatre, 173rd Street and Jerome Avenue. This house seats approximately 2,000, has a large stage and will follow a policy of pictures with presentations.

The Maplewood Theatre, Maplewood, N.J., a 1,300-seat house built by Roth Brothers of Morristown and Summit, will also open Tuesday, March 15. This house will run a program of pictures and vaudeville.

Next Tuesday, the Consolidated Amusement Company will open another new house, the Fleetwood, 165th Street and Morris Avenue. This theatre, like the Mt. Eden, seats about 2,000 and will also follow out a picture and presentation policy.

Another new house to hold its first night next Tuesday is the Carrol Theatre, Borough Park section of Brooklyn. The Carrol is owned by Louis Nelson and associates, who will also operate the recently opened Stillwell, Bensonhurst.

All theatres are not opening, as several news items of the past few weeks will bear out. This week, it's the Blake Theatre, Blake Avenue, Brooklyn, that is reported closed, either definitely or that a new house may possibly take its place on the same site.

The Miller Theatre, preceding some of its associates by several weeks, appears to have inaugurated the Spring policy of going on a "three-a-week" schedule.

Eugene Schoen, one-time owner of the Atlantic Theatre, 116th Street, New York City, and at present proprietor of the Avenue A Theatre, Avenue A and 3rd Street, came uptown the other day and at the same time remarked that he might soon own another house.

David Lustig, expert theatre man associated with the Steiner and Blinderman circuit, is now making his headquarters at the Grand Street, instead of the Apollo.

John Bemis, who is always popping up with a new house in different sections of this zone, is now trying out the Grant Theatre, 142d Street and Lenox Avenue. If the patronage is there for this particular house, Exhibitor Bemis can be counted on to pull them in. Last heard from, he had just disposed of the Newkirk Theatre, Brooklyn, after building up that house to a well-paying basis.

Lou' Gans, well-known general manager of the Joelson circuit, while down town doing some booking this week, announced that he is now making his headquarters at the Belmont Theatre, 177th Street and Arthur Avenue.

Al Moley, one of the fastest-talking boys that ever handled booking sheets at the Prudential Film Delivery offices, and who is a true "rooter" for the New York Giants, is not the only Giant adherent among the film trade. Sol Sapphire, who holds forth at the Empress Theatre, 181st Street, is another. The only thing that these two do not seem to agree upon is Frisch's trade for Hornsby. Sol thinks this is alright, but Al does not, and says the post season's games will bear him out.

The Burke Theatre, Bolte Bros.' new house up on White Plains Avenue, will open this week.

Chas. O'Reilly's string of theatres will grow to five in all when his newest, a house located at University and Tremont avenues, opens. This house is said to be almost ready for its first night.

Seating 1,500 persons the Riviera will supply the motion picture needs for one of the remaining neighborhoods of the city which are untouched by motion picture theatre builders' magic wand of progress.

The Capitol is a 2,200-seat house, but has 200 seats less because of the wide spacing left between seats. While several of the new theatres in New England have been allowing greater space between the rows of seats, the Capitol has the distinction of giving the maximum to date. Persons may take or leave any seat in the house without disturbing the other occupants of the row.

A feature, four acts of vaudeville, news and a short subject are provided.

A NEW motion picture theatre was opened in Harrisburg, Pa., on March 6, increasing the number of theatres in that city to a full dozen. It is the Russell, which has just been erected at Thirteenth and Thompson streets, under the ownership and management of Russell P. Conrad, a real estate operator.

The theatre, which seats 500 persons, is a neighborhood house and, it is understood, is not controlled by any theatre chain. Though small, the building is very ornate. The modern equipment includes a two-manual organ and high-class projection apparatus, with Simplex projectors and Peerless reflecting lamps.

Contrary to the plan in vogue in most Harrisburg theatres where week-run programs are offered, the management announces there will be changes of program three times a week. Manager Conrad promises that only first-run attractions will be offered.

C. Floyd Hopkins, director of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg, of which there are six, has announced there will be no change in the status of the Grand, Victoria and Capitol theatres, jointly owned by Wilmer & Vincent and the Stanley interests, as the result of the consolidation of the theatre interests of the Stanley, West Coast and First National companies.

An auditorium equipped for the showing of motion pictures and for the holding of other theatre entertainments will be included in the new town hall to be erected in Fleetwood. The theatre will be on the second floor of the building.

C. Floyd Hopkins, head of the Wilmer & Vincent theatrical interests in Harrisburg, has been appointed a member of a Chamber of Commerce committee, composed of prominent Harrisburg citizens, including Mayor Hoverter, to confer with John Fisher, Governor of Pennsylvania, on the plans for the construction of the Memorial State Street Bridge, to be erected jointly in the Capitol City by the State, the City and several public utility companies at a cost of several million dollars. Milwaukee

EXCHANGES were busy entertaining out-of-town exhibitors this week. Whether it was the unusually fine weather or the M. P. T. O. convention which brought them out is hard to decide. The list of visitors reads like a roster of Wisconsin exhibitors: Neil Duffy, Manager of the Elite, of Appleton; Francis Kadow, of the Mikado Theatre of Manitowoc; Charles Guelson, of the Badger Theatre at Stoughton; Mr. and Mrs. Steinport, of the Home, at Chilton; Mr. Buss, of the Opera House, at Kewaskum; William Loibel, Manager of the Chimes, at Cedarburg; Mr. and Mrs. Olson, of the Pastime Theatre, at Delavan; William Roob, of the Grand Theatre, at Port Washington; Parkis Waterbury, of the Idle Hour, at Jefferson; J. Winniger, Manager of the Palace, at Waupaca; Glen Shields, of the Grand, at East Troy; John P. Adler, who manages the Adler and Trio, at Marshfield, and the Majestic and Lyric at Stevens Point; G. L. Redman, of the Monroe Theatre, at Monroe; Herbert Priebusch, of the Empire Theatre, at Juneau and the Centennial at Lowell; Dan Kelliher, of the Majestic, at Lake Geneva, and the Princess at Elkhorn; A. C. Accola, of the Bonham Theatre, at Prairie du Sac; August Berkholtz, Manager of the Mermac, at West Bend; Charles Bauman, of the Star, at Oshkosh; F. J. McWilliams, of the Madison Theatre, at Madison; P. H. Conley, of the Majestic, at Reedsburg; Frank Cook, of the Gem, at Sheboygan; Art Desormeaux, of the Strand, at Madison; and Mr. Huff, Manager of the Ozaukee, at Port Washington.

Word has been received here that J. S. Grauman, President of Celebrated Exchange, will return to Milwaukee on the 23rd of the month. He has been spending the past month in Denver with his family.

Seattle

SEVERAL changes in policy among the motion picture houses operated by Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., in Montana, were announced last week by Harry C. Arthur, Jr., president and general manager, from the circuit's headquarters in Seattle.

American Theatre, managed by C. P. Scates, will henceforth be devoted to the leading first run attractions, with a thirteen-piece concert orchestra, under the direction of Madame Plenevaux furnishing the musical settings. There will be two changes weekly, with a raise in admission prices to fifty cents.

The Rialto Theatre, under the management of W. J. Sullivan, has been changed to a three-a-week change house, and will feature the program picture attractions at a thirty-five cent admission. The Rialto Orchestra has been disbanded and all musical settings will be furnished by Karl Wright at the Rialto's large orchestral organ. The Rialto's juvenile matinees each Saturday morning will be continued.

Besides the Rialto and American theatres in Butte, Pacific Northwest also operates the Capitol, Grand and Liberty theatres in Great Falls. No policy changes for the latter houses have been announced.

Eddie Hitchcock, manager of the United Artists Theatre in this city since its opening, several months ago, last week was relieved of the responsibilities of the house management and was promoted to the office of Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation Director for the Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., houses in Seattle. With his advancement Mr. Hitchcock has moved to new offices on the third floor of the Liberty Theatre Building, from which location he directs the newspaper campaigns for the Fifth Avenue and United Artists theatres, as well as special Coliseum Theatre campaigns.

Carl W. L. Johnson has been appointed by Harry C. Arthur, Jr., president and general manager of Pacific Northwest Theatres, to the position of house manager of the United Artists Theatre. Mr. Johnson was formerly associated with Jensen-Von Herberg's organization in Eastern Washington, having been most recently connected with the J. & V. houses in Yakima, under the direction of Fred Mercy.

Neal East, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky branch office in Portland, and famed throughout the Northwest as Film Row's newest bridegroom, spent a short time in this city last week with Manager George P. Endert, of the local branch. Mr. Endert had as his guest also Jack Curry, traveling representative of the Famous Players-Lasky Ad Sales Department from the home office in New York.

F. W. Horrigan was announced last week as the managing director of the new Camas Theatre, a 750-seat house, to be opened shortly by the Community Investment Corporation of Camas, Wash. Mr. Horrigan has previously operated houses in Camas and Washougal, and also owns the motion picture house at Philippsburg, Mont.

Francesco Longo, popular director of the Columbia All-Artist Orchestra at Manager Robert W. Bender's Columbia Theatre, returned last week from a three-weeks' honeymoon trip to Southern California, and is again directing the Columbia musicians.

Ben F. Shearer, director of the Interior Decorating Department of the National Theatre Supply Company, with general offices in this city, left last week for a short trip to California, combining business and pleasure. Mrs. Shearer, who has been in California for several weeks, was expected to return with Mr. Shearer the latter part of March.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Simons, theatre operators of Missoula, Mont., spent a few days in this city last week, visiting Mrs. Simons' sister, who was filling an engagement on the current Orpheum vaudeville bill.

F. C. Weskil, theatre magnate, of Colfax and Sand Point, and P. W. Struppler, of Pullman, Wash., were two of the out-of-town exhibitors who were seen on Film Row last week.

Tacoma's second annual Theatrical Frolic, held last week at the Greenwich Coliseum, was reported to have been even more successful as an entertainment enterprise than was the first affair held a year ago, according to advice that reached here this week. For twelve hours the guests danced and were entertained by five orchestras, motion pictures and professional acts. H. M. S. Kendrick, managing director of the Pantages Theatre in Tacoma, was director general of the Frolic.

Herbert Hoke, well-known by exhibitors throughout the Northwest, has returned to the sales staff of Manager George P. Endert's Famous Players-Lasky Exchange, and is now covering the territory in Zone 2 of this state.

Carl Stearn, Branch Manager of the Warner Brothers office in this city, recently received word to the effect that he was to act as home office representative in the Pacific Northwest territory for the Vitaphone. In addition to his management of the Warner office, the selling of the Vitaphone gives Mr. Stearn a full quota of work to accomplish.

St. Louis

THE Gayety Theatre, Fourteenth Street and Locust Boulevard, St. Louis, for many years one of the country's leading exclusive burlesque establishments, has surrendered to the moving pictures.

On Sunday, March 13, the Gayety began the presentation of pictures in conjunction with tabloid burlesque shows.

That the Grand Boulevard motion picture world may lose one of its chief figures is the gist of gossip along the local Rialto. In some quarters the report is even stronger than rumor, although as yet no official confirmation has been issued. 'Tis said that Gene Rodemich is considering an offer to take over the director's baton for a leading theatre in Boston. So if Gene goes, the Grand Central, operated by Skouras Brothers probably will not look the same. But if he does depart, Skouras Brothers will endeavor to bring Brooks Johns to St. Louis.

A Kilgen Wonder Organ is now being installed in the Hippodrome Theatre, Columbus, O. The instrument is of two-manual construction.

The Queens Amusement Company has been incorporated in St. Louis. The incorporators are: William Goldman, M. Goldman and S. Goldman, Jr., six shares each, and T. Curley, 2 shares. The capital of $2,000 is fully paid.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the St. Louis Amusement Company will be held between the hours of 9 A.M. and 12 o'clock noon at the company's offices in the Ambassador Theatre Building, Seventh and Locust streets, on March 25. A board of directors will be elected. The board will later elect officers for the year. Spyros P. Skouras is president of the company and W. Arthur Stickney, secretary.

Closing quotations on St. Louis film stocks on March 12 were: Skouras A, $43 offered, a gain of $1 for the week. A year ago the stock was $49.125. St. Louis Amusement A, $41 bid and $43 asked, compared with $48 a year ago. The closing quotations represent a loss of $2 for the week.

The Lyric Theatre, East St. Louis, Ill., celebrated its sixth birthday on Sunday, March 13, with a cake-baking contest. The judges were an artist, a domestic science teacher and a baker.

Canada

A STERN warning was extended to a youth by Recorder Semple in the Montreal Police Court, and a fine of $25 and costs, or 15 days in jail was imposed on the accused on a charge of creating a disturbance in a public building. A further charge of resisting an officer in the discharge of his duty was not pressed.

Charles Querrie, manager of the Palace Theatre, Toronto, staged a series of special attractions every night during the week of the theatre's sixth anniversary celebration, the public responding nobly. The features which were added to the film programme were: Monday night, Old-time amateur show; Tuesday, Charleston-Black Bottom contest; Wednesday, Bathing Beauty contest; Thursday, Old Fiddlers' contest; Friday, Mystery Night, and Saturday, Mouth Organ contest for boys and girls. Manager Querrie secured many competitors for the numerous events and put in a very busy week.

Clifford McCormack, organist of the Tivoli Theatre, Toronto, has been appearing on the air with radio recitals which start at 11:30 P.M. His latest programme consisted of old-time melodies, selected by Manager Thomas Daley of the Tivoli, the concert being dedicated to his mother, Mrs. T. A. Daley of St. John, N.B.

George Law of Winnipeg, Manitoba, former Western manager for Canadian Universal, has been appointed manager of the Lyceum Theatre, leading house of a group of three Universal theatres in Winnipeg, in succession to C. A. Schauffle, who went to the Winnipeg capital for a few weeks, but who has now gone to Chicago. E. A. Retallick, assistant manager of the Capitol and a former local newspaperman, has been promoted to the management of the Capitol.

Unrivaled screen quality

The photographic superiority of Eastman Film—zealously safeguarded by Kodak Research Laboratory experts—naturally makes prints on Eastman Positive Film from negatives on Eastman Negative Film unrivaled in screen quality.

And, since the public appreciates screen quality, insistence on prints on Eastman Film will have a favorable box office reaction.

Another View on Effect of Aperture Size on Screen Illumination

Part III

THIS issue marks the first part of the editor's answer to Arthur Gray's article wherein he contends that the size of the aperture in a motion picture projector is one of four principal factors governing intensity of screen illumination, the other three factors being:

1. Brightness of light source.
2. Effective diameter of projection lens.
3. Projection distance.

By way of giving a brief summary, Gray holds that if the size of the aperture is increased, it is possible to obtain higher screen intensities than would otherwise be possible, and with this view we disagree.

It is our contention that the size of the aperture has no bearing whatever on screen intensity and that the principal functions of the aperture are those of defining the picture border and masking the frame lines, sprocket holes and adjoining portions of picture frames from the screen.

In our original article on this subject—the one which caused Gray to dust off his long idle typewriter and come charging at us (said "us" being yours truly and J. M. Van Dyke, Antigo, Wis., who rashly argued with the editor)—a case was cited where the size of the aperture was reduced to 1/16 in. diameter without in any way reducing the screen intensity.

Gray's Test

Now Gray holds that this test really meant nothing and did not prove the case inasmuch as we also reduced the size of the projected spot by continuing to use the same focal length of objective lens and merely reducing the aperture opening.

The thing we should have done, according to him, was to choose a longer focal length projection lens as the iris opening was increased in order to hold the projected spot at the same size. Then the increased number of lumens passing through this larger iris opening would have been distributed over the same area as before and hence the intensity of illumination would have been correspondingly higher.

As proof of his contentions, Gray mentions having made this test and the results were as he describes them. We believe that Gray made this test and that the results were as claimed. But we do not agree with his interpretation of the results, which gives the increased size of aperture opening the credit for raising the screen intensity. In this he erred, as will be shown.

In advancing what is intended to be mathematical proof of his claims, Gray also gave a sample problem composed of two hypothetical sets of conditions. Subject to the corrections we made in these two sets of conditions, they are as illustrated in Fig. 1.

In Fig. 1-A are shown the converging lens of a plano-convex condenser set, an iris shutter placed immediately before it and a projection lens of 3 in. diameter and 10 in. focal length. Gray made no mention of a 3-in. diameter projection lens, but since we know he possesses a Brenkert F-3 effect projector, we strongly suspect that his test was conducted with this device.

Whether or not he did so will not affect the effectiveness of our case.

In Fig. 1-B are shown the converging lens of a plano-convex condenser set, an iris shutter with a 2-in. opening and a 3-in. diameter projection lens of 20-in. focal length. The iris shutter in Fig. 1-A has a 1-in. diameter opening, or one-half that in Fig. 1-B.

The size of spot projected by both of these systems at a distance of 100 feet will be exactly the same, or 10 feet. Gray said the spot would be 5 ft. in diameter in each case, but this could not be as we showed in last week's article. We have retained his iris opening in each case, therefore, and have changed the size of the projected spot to make it conform with the conditions.

Where Gray Slipped

Now Gray says that with the conditions as indicated in Fig. 1, the screen intensity (brightness of spot) with system 1-B will be much higher than the screen intensity with system 2-A and we agree fully with him in this respect. Specifically, he states that system 1-B will provide twice the intensity of screen illumination as will the system shown in 1-A.

According to his method of reasoning, it should provide four times the screen intensity, but we will not admit of this because he makes no mention of size of light source, which would greatly influence the results in both cases.

We will, therefore, confine ourselves merely to the general statement that system 1-B, with a 40-60 ampere arc, or a source of equivalent size, will provide much more screen intensity than will the system in Fig. 1-A.

BUT—this increased tendency will not be due to the larger iris opening in system 1-B passing more light, since the only effect of increasing the size of the iris opening is to make a wider beam, of sharper angle of convergence, pass from the converging lens to the projection lens. Of this, more later.

The increased intensity, obtained from system 1-B, will be entirely due to the fact that the projection lens, L, in this system is working as a greater aperture than the lens, S, in system 1-A. By this we mean that even though the physical diameter (3 in.) of the two projection lenses is the same, lens S, in system 1-A is working at reduced aperture and is, therefore, only partially filled with light, whereas lens L, in system 1-B, is working at a much greater aperture and may even be entirely filled with light. Hence Gray for all practical purposes used two different projection lenses, one of which (1-B) had a greater effective diameter than the other.

Gray, obviously, overlooked this fact and assumed that since he was using a 3-in. diameter lens in each case he was, therefore, holding the lens diameter constant so that no further consideration need be given to this important item.

Effect of Increased Lens Aperture

the same optic systems as illustrated by Fig. 1, with the exception that the respective light beams and light source images are drawn also. Gray, by the way, did not use these exact conditions as shown here, but what we have to say now applies also to his test.

Now, let us assume that a 60-ampere D.C. arc is used in each system, which will result in the crater having a horizontal diameter of approximately ½ in. This arc crated is placed 5 in. from the center of the condenser set in each case. This will bring the crater about 4 in. away from the face of the collector lens, which is about correct.

Assuming this to be so, then in Fig. 2-A crater image, b c, focussed inside of the projection lens will be approximately 1 in. in diameter since

$$\text{Image size} = \frac{0.5 \times 10}{5} = 1 \text{ inch}$$

In other words, while the projection lens has a free diameter of 3 in., the working area of this lens has a diameter of only 1 in. Therefore, the effective area of this lens is

In Fig. 2-B, the light source size is the same (0.5 in.), the condenser set has been changed so as to focus the crater image inside of the 3-in. diameter, 20 in. focal length projection lens here used and the crater image in Fig. 2-A.

$$\text{Image size} = \frac{0.5 \times 20}{5} = 2 \text{ inches}$$

This means that the effective area of the projection lens in this case will be represented by a circle of light two inches in diameter and the effective lens area will therefore be

$$\text{Effective area} = \frac{2 \times 2 \times 3.14}{4} = 3.14 \text{ sq. in.}$$

Since screen intensity varies directly as the effective area of the projection lens (doubling the effective area will double the screen intensity, and vice versa) system 2-B will provide four times the screen intensity as will system 2-A as follows:

$$\frac{3.14}{0.785} \text{ — 4 times screen light.}$$

Even with a two-inch circle of light incident on its surface, the lens in Fig. 2-B still is not working at full aperture so that it would be possible to continue lengthening the focal length of the projection lens and obtaining correspondingly higher screen intensities until the lens was completely filled with light (crater image 3 in. in diameter) and after that no further increase would be obtained no matter what size the iris opening was made.

If Gray had done this he would have reached the working limit of that particular projection lens and there his increasing screen intensity would have stopped and he would not have made the mistake that the iris opening was responsible for the increase he observed.

Please note that no mention is made of iris opening in the above calculations, since all of the increased illumination is accounted for by the increased effective area of the projection lens.

Even the fact that Gray did not change his condenser set to focus the crater image inside of the projection lens in each case does not alter the truth of the above statements, since the chances are that the projection lens was large enough to accommodate the entire light beam. If it wasn't, then the increase in screen illumination still would have been very marked but not so great as if the entire beam was picked up.

Effect of Increasing Iris Opening

When Gray increased the size of the iris opening, as in Fig. 2-B, all he did was this (besides governing the size of the projected spot). In Fig. 3-A we see a converging lens forming an image, I, of the light source, through a 1-in. opening in the iris shutter. The angle of light, A, is of certain size as determined by the iris opening, image size, and distance between iris and image. This represents the condition of the short focal length lens system, 2-A.

In Fig. 3-B the converging lens is now forming an image of the light source at M through an opening of 2 in. in the iris shutter, but since the distance between image, M, and the iris is the same as in 3-A, this image is of exactly the same size in both cases, so that effective area of the projection lens is not changed and hence no change in screen intensity takes place.

The angle of light, b, has been increased over that of angle a, and more total light is passing through image M, but since images I and M are both the same in size the screen illumination is also the same, so that the net result is that a bigger spot, of the same brightness, is formed by 3-B.

What Gray Should Have Done

If Gray, in his test, had used a short focal length lens (Case 2-A) with a diameter just large enough to contain the entire beam and had then used this same diameter of lens for making the test with the larger iris opening and longer focal length lens, he would have obtained exactly the same screen intensity in each case, so that he would have had two projected spots of the same size and of the same brightness.

His larger iris opening would have done no good at all, except to control the size of the spot. As it was, he used an oversized projection lens, which, in the first case was only partially filled with light, and in the second case this reserve lens area was on hand to pick up the larger image, thus giving a higher screen intensity.

He really used, in effect, two different lenses, one of small diameter (1 in.) and the other of larger diameter (2 in.) and since effective lens diameter is one of the important factors in determining screen intensity, the larger iris opening had absolutely nothing to do with raising the screen intensity.

The Gist of the Argument

Gray's principal thought, as revealed by his reasoning in the article, leaves no doubt in our mind that he believes it possible to control the intensity of screen illumination by changing the focal length of the projection lens. John Griffith, of Ansonia, Conn., and Mr. F. H. Richardson, of New York and other places, also at one time held the same view, but we proved in this department two or three years ago that such a thing was utterly impossible, since the focal length of any projection lens, be it in a spotlight, motion picture projector, stereopticon, or what-not, has absolutely no bearing on intensity of screen illumination.

In the next and concluding article we will give photometric proof of everything we have said in this issue, including that last statement concerning the focal length of a lens.

“The Poor Nut” unit will leave for Tucson, Ariz., early in March to spend about two weeks filing scenes around the University of Arizona campus for scenes in the picture. Production Manager Dundon O'Brien has returned from the university with permission to use the campus in its entirety. The director of athletics has also readily assented to offer the use of his own and the athletes' full cooperation in the use of the gymnasium, athletic field and the men themselves, many of whom will be shot in the outdoor campus sequences.

Agnes Christine Johnston, a member of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer scenario staff, has received a new contract from that organization. Under the new arrangements he will write a number of original stories for screen as well as adapt stories of other authors.

With “Ankles Preferred,” a Fox Film production, scheduled for a near showing at the Roxy, Director J. G. Blystone has started on his forty-first production for Fox, “The Grand Flapper,” a story by Nina Wilcox Putnam. Holmes Herbert has the leading male role with Olive Tell acting opposite him. Support is lent by Earle Fox, Margaret Livingston, Richard Walling, Evelyn Keefer and Mary Foy. William Conselman did the adaptation to scenario form. Jasper Blystone will act as assistant director.

The new story is based on “The Lightning Express” and was adapted for the screen by Dorothy Howell. Ralph Graves will direct the production as well as act one of its important roles. “Rich Men's Sons” will be Columbia's twentieth release of the present season product and will be ready in June.

One of the three outstanding roles in “The Way of All Flesh” has been entrusted to Phyllis Haver. Victor Fleming is directing this Emil Jannings vehicle, the actor's first in America. Belle Bennett plays the part of his wife.

El Brendel, stage comedian and a member of the Paramount stock company, has been assigned the featured comedy role in “Arizona Bound,” the first of Gary Cooper's Westerns for Paramount.

Flobelle Fairbanks, daughter of the late John Fairbanks and niece of Douglas Fairbanks, has been given the ingenue role in “The Climbers,” Irene Rich's next starring vehicle for the Warner Bros. The young player has already played in several pictures.

The newest recruit to the F.B.O. studios is a former Sennett bathing girl—Elsie Tarron by name. She also appeared in Universal comedies but her ambition to appear in full-length pictures is about to be realized as F.B.O. plans to present her with the feminine lead in “Cyclone of the Range,” Tom Tyler's forthcoming Western which Bob De Lacy will direct.

The job of transferring “The Romantic Age” to the screen has been entrusted to Robert Florey, who started his career in motion pictures in 1913 as assistant to the French comedian, Max Linder. He worked in Switzerland, Italy, France, Algiers and London. He came to Hollywood in 1921 and since then has assisted Emmett Flynn, Al Santell, Gasnier Cabanne, Edmund Goulding and John Stahl. During his work as assistant director, he handled a series of comedies and also wrote several stories for the screen.

Paramount's option on the services of Neil Hamilton has been renewed by the company with the result that the actor's first leading role in a series of productions is soon to be announced by Paramount. At present he is working in “The Joy Girl,” a Fox picture for which he was loaned by Paramount.

Columbia Pictures has signed Marjorie Bonner for an important characterization in “Poor Girls,” one of the company's present-season pictures in which she will appear with Edmund Burns, Dorothy Revier, Lloyd Whitlock and Ruth Stonehouse. This is Miss Bonner's second appearance in a Columbia production as she has just finished working in “Paying the Price,” a new Columbia picture. The story of “Poor Girls” is based on an original story by Sophie Bogen and was adapted for screening purposes by Bill Branch. William James Craft is directing.

“Sinews of Steel,” the tenth picture of a series of twelve which Sam Sax is making for release through Lumas, was put into work with Alberta Vaughn and Gaston Glass working under the direction of Frank O'Connor. Additional members of the cast include Anders Randolph, Sarah Padden, Charles Hill Mailes, and Greta Vonrue, a German screen star, who is making her first American appearance through special arrangement with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to which company she is under contract. Henry McCarty is the author and scenarist of the story. The company will go on location at one of the country's largest steel mills for the purpose of securing authentic atmosphere for the production.

“In the First Degree,” the latest film from Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation, has been placed into production at the Coast studio with a cast made up of Alice Calhoun and Gareth Hughes, Bryant Washburn, Betty Francisco and Gayne Whitman. The story was written by Reginald Wright Kauffman and is being directed by Phil Rosen.

Marie Shotwell has joined the supporting cast to W. C. Fields in that comedian's newest Paramount starring comedy now in production under Gregory La Cava's direction, under the temporary title of “The Timid Soul.” Others in the comedy are Mary Brian, Claude Buchanan, Barney Raskle, Frederick Burton and J. Roy Bennett.

Andre Beranger has been chosen by Universal to portray the leading male role in “The Small Bachelor,” the P. G. Wodehouse—“Liberty Magazine” story recently purchased by Carl Laemmle. This is the first indication that the Laemmle organization plans to put the story into early production. William Seiter will make the picture as a Universal Jewel for next season. Additions to the cast will be announced soon. Rex Taylor has done the adaptation.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Hills of Kentucky"—Warner Bros., Hippodrome Theatre, New York City

World: "One of the best of all dog stories which I have seen in the films, and I rather think I have seen them all. It is a swift-moving, well-joined, smooth-running narrative and will provide good entertainment."

Herald Tribune: "Anyone who loves dogs must be vastly entertained by 'Hills of Kentucky.' We were!"

Mirror: "A welcome break in the continual round of hackneyed cinemas. Needless to say, children are the greatest subscribers to the popularity of Rin-Tin-Tin. Take them along with yourself and you'll all have a soothing hour of entertainment."

Journal: "Rin-Tin-Tin in 'Hills of Kentucky' follows, and successfully, the formula of all his other pictures. Rinty's obedience to direction continues to be amazing."

American: "It is safe to say that you will enjoy 'Hills of Kentucky.'"

Times: "This picture is interesting. He is like a d'Artagnan of dogs and he seems to have many a day in this production."

Telegraph: "Rin-Tin-Tin, the screen dog who has no peers, is more wonderful than ever in 'Hills of Kentucky.' You'll marvel at Rin-Tin-Tin."

"An Affair of the Follies"—First National, Mark Strand Theatre, New York City

Herald Tribune: "Whether or not Billie Dove has previously been starred we do not remember. But she is starred in 'An Affair of the Follies,' playing at the Mark Strand this week, and it seems to us that this is the best thing that she has done so far. Miss Dove has more to offer than many others whom we could but shall not name."

Morning Telegraph: "This is Billie Dove's first starring photoplay and the little girl deserves a big hand. She has her moments, and does well enough with them to lead one to believe that her starring contract with First National will be a money maker for all concerned. Billie will increase her following."

Evening World: "Billie Dove is, as always, a treat for the eyes and has more opportunity to act than in some of her pictures. Stone and Hughes are pleasing and capable."

Times: "The picture has been produced in lavish style and the performances of the principals are decidedly capable. Lewis Stone, Billie Dove, Lloyd Hughes and Arthur Hoyt contribute their expert knowledge of screen acting to this film chronicle."

Journal: "Has a clever twist as its incidental idea."

Graphic: "For the vehicle both Miss Dove and Lloyd Hughes did better than many other teams would have given their public, and the epicurean Mr. Stone is so smooth, so polished of manner that he always shines in his part."

Harry Langdon, soon to appear at the Strand Theatre, New York, in his latest First National release, "Long Pants"

"Tell It To the Marines"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Stanton Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.

Inquirer: "Movie patrons have a rare treat in store for them. Here is one picture which does not attempt to make a branch of the service look like a bed of roses. . . . Without a doubt it will rank close to some of the biggest productions of the year when the final accounting is made. . . . 'Tell It To the Marines' lives from beginning to end. . . . A vastly different Chaney, refreshingly new and as capable as ever of carrying the burden of several thousand feet of film. . . . There is plenty of dramo in the picture."

Daily News: "'Lon Chaney's role is one of the best of his long and versatile career. . . . The best he has been cast in since the famous 'Phantom of the Opera' . . . The picture is exceptionally entertaining and pleasing. . . . Comedy is plentiful. . . . There is also a tear or two and many thrills. . . . Romance has not been overlooked."

Record: "Many and varied scenes with numerous thrills. . . . One of the best of the current pictures. . . . The story is worth-while in itself. . . . Lon Chaney is seen in the most pleasing role which has fallen to him in a long time."

Public Ledger: "'Tell It To the Marines' will give you a thoroughly good time. Not a minute is wasted in providing hilarity, thrills and sentiment. . . . Thoroughly entertaining with hundreds of witty captions. . . . It is not to be equalled as a well-balanced ration of fun, excitement and thrills. . . . The 'Devil Dogs' come into their own in 'Tell It To the Marines' . . . An intelligent portrayal of life. . . . It is studded with two brilliant performances, one by William Haines, the other by Lon Chaney. . . . The picture carries one on the trail of adventure. . . ."

"Winners of the Wilderness"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Chicago

Examiner: "Attracts small boys and high-powered business men who want to ease up the old mind after a strenuous day's conferences. But it isn't for men only. The ladies will love it. . . . High romance, lovely settings altogether satisfactory. . . . This picture is one of the best of its kind. . . . Scenes are breathtakingly beautiful. . . . If you like a story of young, romantic love, peppered plentifully with action and excitement, you'll be crazy about 'Winners of the Wilderness.'"

Tribune: "McCoy, so dashing and daring, acts like Everywoman's dream man. . . . The action just zips along. . . . Good costume romance, well acted, well directed, well photographed."

American: "'Winners of the Wilderness' stages a surprise party. I went expecting to see Tim McCoy perform in the manner of Tom Mix but found instead a costume photoplay which is one of the most enjoyable romances that have come this way in many a day. . . . Tim McCoy was likable in 'War Paint,' but just wait till the fans view him in this. . . . He is marvelous! And if he keeps up his good work will become one of the screen's best bets! . . . The action is rapid-fire from beginning to end. . . . Is the picture of the week."

"With Will Rogers in Dublin"—Pathe, Chicago Theatre, Chicago

"Much pure joy is descending upon audiences at the Chicago this week because of Will Rogers' wisecracking tour through Dublin. In his happy, shrewd manner he eases about describing the sights and introducing celebrities."

"Orchids and Ermine"—First National, Loew's State, Los Angeles

Times: "Colleen Moore, most roguish and adorable minx that ever stepped out of Fourth Avenue. Everything is done with light, joyous touch and Colleen seems again to be the particularly bright star she was in 'Irene' and 'Sally.'"

Examiner: "Gives Colleen Moore plenty of chances to do her stuff. Ralph Spence titles also do their share toward promoting comedy."

Daily News: "You will have to give palm to Colleen Moore. Consistency is her middle name. Each succeeding picture seems to be just wee bit better than preceding one. Frankly, the writer went to Loew's State with a grouch and a headache and the picture eliminated both. Those who want to merely kill time will find Miss Moore's latest comedy quick exterminator of gloom, and those who seek amusement will be more than satisfied."

Herald: "Everything in 'Orchids and Ermine' is done with light whimsical touch and titles are clever and deserving of special mention."

Record: "'Orchids and Ermine' is real entertainment, for what better amusement can any fan desire than Colleen Moore in 'Orchids and Ermine'? In 'Orchids and Ermine' Colleen Moore is best she has ever been. The star is progressing certainly and is developing real screen genius that is hers. It is gratifying indeed to see her work in 'Orchids and Ermine.' This picture has every ingredient."
